HOUSE COMMITTEE APPROVES FORD'S OFFER, EXCLUDING GORGAS PLANT

Body to Recommend That Proposal Be Accepted, After Agreeing With Detroit Manufacturer's Agents on New Language Regulating Making of Fertilizers.

VICTORY FOR FORD, REPRESENTATIVE SAYS

House Instructs Committee to Report Its Decision on Continuation of Work on Wilson Dam, So Separate Vote Might Be Had.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Henry Ford's proposal to develop the Government's vast power and nitrate projects at Muscle Shoals, Ala., was given conditional approval by the House Military Committee today and ordered reported to the House with a recommendation that it be accepted in the form agreed to in committee. The action was taken by a vote of 12 to 9 in executive session, and was interpreted by committeemen generally as being in effect but the preliminary skirmish to what promises to become a bitterly contested battle between the proponents and opponents of the Ford offer in the House.

In arriving at its final decision, the committee decided to eliminate from the properties covered in the Ford offer the steam plant at Gorgas, Ala., and agreed with W. B. Mayo and J. W. Worthington, representatives of the Detroit manufacturer, upon new language regulating the manufacture of fertilizers. In all other respects the Ford offer was fully approved.

Victory for Ford, Agent Says.

Mayo declared when advised of the committee action that despite elimination of the Gorgas plant proposed, he regarded the results announced as a decisive victory for Ford, and that a more determined effort than ever before now would be made to obtain the properties.

To agree upon every detail involved in the negotiations, except one was a distinct achievement, Mayo added, particularly since the discussions had been extended over so long a period—more than a year since they were first begun at the War Department. He expressed warm appreciation for the "courteous and conscientious work done by the committee" from the time it began consideration of the subject.

Other Developments.

Other developments in Congress affecting Muscle Shoals occurred while the committee was in session. The House instructed its conferees on the army appropriation bill to report back to it what decision they reached with the Senate on the amendment providing $7,500,000 for continuation of work on the Wilson dam, so that a separate vote might be had.

In the Senate Agriculture Committee, Oscar C. Merrill, executive officer of the Federal Power Commission, gave the opinion that the Muscle Shoals projects should be completed and put in operation, preferrably by private enterprise. If the Government decided to operate the properties, Merrill said, he believed the bill by Senator Norris of Nebraska, chairman of the committee, probably offered the best method of dealing with the projects.

Committee Meeting Tomorrow.

The House committee also decided to meet again Monday for the purpose of preparing a report citing its opinion of the Ford and other proposals which will be submitted to the House membership when the Ford offer is presented, probably early next week. In all probability the committee will advocate the acceptance of Ford's tender with the Gorgas plant included.

Both Mayo and Worthington were hopeful that the House would reverse the committee majority and restore the paragraph giving Ford the Gorgas plant with the other units at Muscle Shoals. This suggestion, it is understood, will be incorporated by the minority members in their report to the House.

That the House will vote separately on the question of including the Gorgas plant is regarded as a cer-

HARVARD SAID TO PLAN STEPS TO LIMIT ENROLLMENT OF JEWS

Officials Admit Talk of "Proportion" in Discussion of Program for "Sifting of Candidates."

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 3.—The faculty at Harvard University has authorized President A. Lawrence Lowell to appoint a special committee "to consider principles and methods of more effectively sifting candidates for admission."

This action was made known today in a statement by Speaker R. Loring Young of the Massachusetts House of Representatives after he had conferred with President Lowell regarding orders now pending in the Legislature for investigation of reports that discrimination against Jews was intended.

It was confirmed at the university. The officials who admitted that this action had been taken declined to comment on a report that the faculty had decided also not to give the Committee on Admission, wider powers of selection and rejection until the special committee should not have had an opportunity to consider the problem. This problem was announced recently to lie in the great increase in the number of students at the college and the need for limiting enrollment, in connection with which it was added that "it is natural that, with a widespread discussion of this sort going on, there should be talk about the proportion of Jews at the college." Subsequently it was explained that this statement was in answer to specific inquiry. The special committee which will consider the matter has not yet been announced.

PRIVATE FACTORY OWNERSHIP IN RUSSIA GLUTS MARKETS

Over-Production Due to Smaller Purchasing Power of Public and Poor Transportation.

(Copyright, 1922.)

BERLIN, June 2.—The first result of turning the nationalized factories in Russia back to private ownership is an industrial crisis due to over-production, according to official reports from Moscow.

While the factories are producing only a small percentage of the former output, the purchasing power of the public is even less. In addition, the railroads are unable to serve parts of the country which could buy and the cities are unable to buy because they are glutted with inferior products.

NEGROES IN ANTI-LYNCHING PARADE LOSE ARDOR IN RAIN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—A demonstration against lynching, starting 4000 strong 'neath the sun-kissed skies of Harlem today, wound up on Fifth avenue in a straggling line of taxicabs and umbrellas, which sheltered 600 bedraggled negroes in a downpour of rain.

The parade was sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to gain support for the Dyer anti-lynching bill, now held up in the Senate.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Charles Carey, a prohibition agent said by the police to have been operating as a special investigator under the direction of Commissioner Ray Haynes, is under arrest here today charged by Government officials with extortion in connection with his activities as an investigator.

Carey and two others were arrested when John Kundiat, a cafe owner, complained that they had attempted to extort $200 from him.

"KILLING ACT OF CHARITY," SHE SAYS

Statement Found in Room, Signed by Woman, Says She Went From Springfield, Ill., to Be Married.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 3.—"No, I'm not sorry. I'm glad. I consider it an act of charity."

Marie "Peggy" Beal, who shot and killed Frank Warren Anderson early today in a room in the Midwest Hotel, told tonight of the shooting and events preceding, as she lay in a bed at the General Hospital in a critical condition from a revolver wound in the left breast, self-inflicted. Tears came frequently.

Anderson was educational director in a department store here.

Asked why the killing was an act of charity, she answered:

"I knew if I didn't do that there would be hundreds of other heartaches till he died."

Anderson frequently had boasted of his many girls—"Hundreds of them," she said. The direct cause of the shooting, Miss Beal declared, was the finding in his trunk of a diary which she had not known he was keeping. In it was verification of Anderson's boasts and one entry was this quotation:

"Was ever mortal man sent into a vortex of swirling hearts as I have been?" Miss Beal said: "I loved him and was fair and square from the beginning and he wasn't."

Not Premeditated, She Says.

The shooting of Anderson was not premeditated, Miss Beal declared. She said she was planning to go away and then, like a flash, came the thought of shooting him. They were talking together.

"I got up," she said, "and took a revolver out of my trunk. The revolver had belonged to my father. I carried it around with me because I couldn't sell it.

"It was dark. I didn't even know where I was aiming. I fired. I don't know how many times."

Then she shot herself.

"He was awake and knew when I got up," Miss Beal said.

She was asked if she had been reading Edgar Rice Burroughs' novel, "Thuvia Maid of Mars." It was found open on a dresser in the hotel room, a corner of a page turned down at an illustration showing a woman dancer standing over a man's prostrate form. The woman in the illustration held a dagger in her hand. Miss Beal denied she had been reading the book, or that the illustration was the inspiration for her act.

"Warren was reading the book," she said. "He was a great reader. I would not read books like that."

Met Eight Months Ago.

Miss Beal first met Anderson about eight months ago in Oayton, O., she said. She was there doing private nursing. He was on his way west.

"He was nothing there," she said. "Just a wife deserter. He told me he had a wife in Philadelphia. "Anderson left his wife, Miss Beal said, because they could not get along and because his wife had threatened his life.

"He went to St. Louis and got a job, but was not satisfied," Miss Beal reltaed. "Then he came to Kansas City, but on the way he visited me in Springfield, Ill. I was working in an open air hospital. He called me by telephone from St. Louis and aked me to give up my job and come to Kansas City with him. But I told him to get settled here first."

Engaged to Marry, She Says.

It was in Springfield they became engaged, Miss Beal said. She visited him here two weeks in February, while he was staying at the Leonard home, 3210 Highland avenue. When he met her at the Union Station Anderson informed Miss Beal he had told Mrs. Leonard they were married. Miss Beal said she did not approve of what he had done, but she could not well get another room, and so agreed to share his room, after he had made certain promises.

Partly because of Anderson's boast of the many love affairs he had had, Miss Beal would not agree to a wedding when she was here in February, she said.

"I wanted hi mto be absolutely sure he wanted me," she said in explaining why the wedding was put off. "Also, I wanted to get ready enough clothing to last a year. He

PASTOR DENIES HE CALLED WOMAN BLUE-EYED VAMP

DISTURBANCE CASE ENDS IN MISTRIAL

Mrs. Roy Schriner Says the Rev. Eugene Hansmann Visited Her Three Times in Single Day.

Troubles in the Methodist Episcopal Church at East Alton were aired before a jury and an audience made up of nearly the entire congregation of the church in Police Magistrate O'Brien's court yesterday at the trial of the Rev. Eugene Hansmann, 3419 Franklin avenue, St. Louis, pastor of the church, who was charged with disturbing the peace of Mrs. Roy Schriner, a former member of the congregation.

Pastor Hansmann, who is 59 years old, denied that he called Mrs. Schriner a "little blue-eyed vamp," and also denied that his sermon last Sunday night, which was criticised by Mrs. Schriner's friends, referred to Mrs. Schriner.

He said that he called at the Schriner home to induce Mrs. Schriner to return to services, as he had been informed by members of his congregation that she was a "backslider." He said it was merely a pastoral visit.

Her Foreign Field.

Mrs. Schriner testified that he visited her three times in a single day, and gave April 21 as the date. When she informed him that she was going to study for foreign missionary work, she said, he stretched out his arms and said: "Here is your foreign field." She walked away from him, she said, and he took her by the hand and called her a "blue-eyed vamp." She said she had been attending a revival at the church, but that after that incident he remained away.

Mrs. Sarah Metcalf and Mrs. Mary Strader, friends of Mrs. Schriner, testified that they attended services at Pastor Hansmann's church last Sunday night because they wanted to hear what he was going to say. He told them that his sermon would be of special interest to them, they said. He had mentioned that Mrs. Schriner had charged him with annoying her, they said, and informed them that his sermon would touch on the subject of a pastor's calls and the kind of people with whom he came in contact.

"Knew Whom He Meant."

"He didn't mention Mrs. Schriner's name in his sermon, but I know who he was aiming at," testified Mrs. Strader. "He said that a certain woman had preferred a slanderous charge against him and that she was not fit to be a member of the church."

Hansmann's lawyers declared that the prosecution of Pastor Hansmann was nothing but spite work. They pointed out that the warrant against him had been sworn out by Thomas Franklin, the sexton at the church, who was arrested several weeks ago following a fight at the church in which he struck a member of the church board.

Sexton Was Unfriendly.

Pastor Hansmann and Franklin, it was disclosed, had not been on friendly terms because the minister had accused the sexton of talking too much when giving testimonies at the prayer meetings. In retaliation, it was said, Franklin locked the choir out of the church and the members had to climb through a window to get to rehearsal. Franklin was fined $50 and costs on that occasion, the fine being set aside when he paid the costs, amounting to $30.

Hansmann formerly was in charge of the Central House of Rest here, and at one time was chaplain at the city workhouse. Eight witnesses testified that his reputation was good.

The jury retired at 6:30 p. m., and four hours later announced that it was hopelessly divided, standing four to two for acquittal. Judge O'Brien declared a mistrial and discharged the jurors.

MAN TWISTS LIFE OUT OF SELF

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 3.—What was believed by the police to be an extraordinary case of suicide was revealed today when Robert L. Pichardson, a patient at the Chicago General Hospital, was found dead by nurses, strangled by means of a tourniquet twisted around his throat and tightened by a cane used as a lever, manipulated, apparently by his own hands. He had been confined to his bed for several months with a fracture of the hip.

HAYWOOD'S AIDS IN RUSSIA ARE SAID TO BE HOMESICK

Government Will Not Oppose Return, But Soviet Might, Is Report.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The United States Government, it was indicated today in official circles, probably would interpose no obstacles to the return to America of those workers who went to soviet Russia to engage in mining and manufacturing enterprises under auspices of William D. Haywood, a leader in the Industrial Workrs of the World movement.

An Associated Press dispatch from Reval, Esthonia, said letters received there from the emigrants said they were becoming discouraged and now desired to return to the United States. Officials have gathered from other reports that many of these workers had undergone a change in their admiration of soviet principles and consequently no great fear is felt that on their return they would attempt to spread the soviet doctrines.

The principal obstacle that the prodigals are expected to encounter is opposition from the soviet authorities to their departure. Recent cable dispatches from Odessa have stated that fugitives have made their escape from Russia with the greatest difficulty because of the severe prohibitory laws of the soviets.

Lad Sinks Blade Into Playmate's Throat—Other Slayer Beat Friend to Death.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ind., June 3.—Robert Silvers, 9 years old, was placed in jail here tonight charged with the murder of his playmate, Bernard Teeter, also 9. The defendant, according to witnesses, approached the other while he was waiting for a train to arrive, saying: "Now, see what I got," exhibiting a sharp paring knife, and without warning stabbed the boy in the throat.

According to physicians, the entire blade, four inches long, entered the boy's throat, cutting an artery and the jugular vein and penetrating the apex of the lung.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Mich., June 3.—Percy Kiter, 13, confessed slayer of his playmate, Adolph Van Walleghen, 14, was sentenced to the State Industrial School until he reaches the age of 18, when he entered a plea of guilty in Probate Court here today. Disposition of the case after the expiration of the industrial school sentence will depend on young Kiter's behavior, it was stated.

According to the boy's confession, a quarrel over a pipe led to the killing of Van Walleghen, who was beaten to death and his body thrown into the river to make it appear he had drowned.

ERWIN RUDOLPH BERGDOLL IS SEEKING RELEASE FROM PRISON

Draft Law Was Unconstitutional and United States "Destroyed" by Its Operation, Petition States.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 3.—Erwin Rudolph Bergdoll, draft evader, now a prisoner in the United States Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, filed today in the United States District Court here a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

He seeks release on the grounds that the selective draft act was unconstitutional. Delegation of the power to the President to organize an army was contrary to the Constitution, Bergdoll alleges in his petition. The draft law also deprived Bergdoll of "liberty and the pursuit of happiness, without due process of law," the petition states.

The stenographer in the office of the Pennsylvania Adjutant-General had no authority to summon any man for military service, the petition sets forth.

Bergdoll's petition also alleges that the draft law "placed the states at the command of the President, and compelled all state and municipal officers to obey the orders of the Provost Marshal, thus destroying the states and the United States."

New York Milliner Says Fleecing Was Accomplished in Exclusive Part of Atlantic City.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 3.—Louis Remner, a New York milliner, today reported to the police that he had been fleeced out of $20,000 by a gang of wire tappers yesterday. Remner declared that the operations had been conducted in a fashionable residential district. There he found a room equipped with telegraph instruments and brokerage office paraphernalia.

After he made a $100,000 "killing," however, he told the police, the gang insisted that he put up $20,000 to show good faith. Remner obtained the money in New York, he said, passing it over to the gang yesterday.

REED AN ENEMY OF DEMOCRATIC PARTY, SAYS LONG

QUOTES SPEECH MADE BY SENATOR IN 1910

Address Indicates Long Plans Different Campaign Policy From That Pursued Up to This Time.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 3.—Breckinridge Long picked Boone County, the strongest Democratic county in the State, to completely alter his plans of campaign, and to vigorously attack Senator Reed as an obstructionist and as an enemy of the Democratic party. Long this afternoon quoted Reed's own campaign utterances in 1910 when Reed opposed David R. Francis for Senator, against him.

The Democrats in the audience shouted their approval of Long's course, and were aroused to a degree of enthusiasm not found in any of Long's previous meetings, in all of which he refrained from a criticism of Reed. His speech here this afternoon indicated a very different policy from that he has pursued up to this time, and it met with favor.

"We hear a great deal sometimes about independent judgment and independent action on the part of public officials, and particularly of Senators of the United States," Long said, referring to Reed's defense of himself for opposing policies of former President Wilson, for which he was denounced by the Democratic State convention in 1920 and denied a seat in the Democratic national convention.

Quality of Independence Expected.

"The quality of independent action as an essential element in the public policy of a Senator is very much expected. This independence of thought and action is dwelt upon with such great emphasis that it might well be imagined that Presidents of the United States are in the habit of coercing Senators into, standing for things which their judgment rejects and which means the public interest.

"A particular President is referred to frequently as a man of dominating will and ambitious schemes whose chief purpose during his administration was to compel obedience to his power. Then we are told that a Senator who boldly and consistently opposed the policies of that President performed a great public service and is entitled to the continued confidence of his constituency because of his defiance of the executive.

"The American people like independence in public men. They despise milk and water statesmanship. They have a contempt for the submissive mind that does not think for itself. This is the natural American spirit and every true American shares it. Still the American people, though, occasionally deceived and misled by passion and prejudice, are shrewd in discernment. They know the various stages of independence and know when independence becomes mere obstinacy and degenerates into obstruction, especially in politics.

Thoughtful Study Essential.

"I can picture situations which might arise in the Senate when grave questions of far reaching importance would be receiving the serious and thoughtful attention of the members of the Upper House of the Congress, situations in which the judgment of the two political parties would be in the processes of formation concerning new problems and new issues. A Senator, affiliated with a party into whose hands has been committed the control of the United States Senate, would approach these new questions, presumably, with a desire to learn the truth

HOOVER LIKELY TO COME TO MISSOURI TO ANSWER REED IF HE IS NOMINATED

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, June 3.

FRIENDS of Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover are predicting that if Senator Reed is nominated, Hoover will go to Missouri to answer the charges that Reed has been making against him. Hoover himself will not discuss his plans.

Hoover feels, it is said, that he could appropriately take the stump as a member of the Harding administration in an effort to elect a Republican Senator to succeed Reed. It is not believed that he will depart from his policy of ignoring Reed unless the latter is nominated. If he should decide to go to Missouri, he probably will speak principally before business men's organizations and women's clubs.

PENNSYLVANIA TOWNS SWEPT BY FLOOD WHEN DAM BURSTS

No Loss of Life Reported, but Much Damage Was Suffered.

By the Associated Press.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 3.—Carbondale and nearby towns were swept by a flood today, when a small dam burst, following torrential rain. Much damage was done, but no loss of life has been reported.

Rain, beginning mildly in the early afternoon, increased steadily until it became one of the most violent downpours the region has suffered for years. As a result, the Hathaway dam of the Delaware & Hudson company at Burnwood, went out, and the water tore down the valley toward Carbondale, 20 miles away.

At Simpson the water raced through the streets, flooded the American Welding Co. plant, tore out tracks in the Delaware & Hudson yards and did much other damage.

The plant of the Carbondale Machine Co. lay in the path of the torrent, which then swept across the northern business district of the city and into the Lackawanna River. This rose suddenly until all bridges were under water.

PARIS, June 3.—Nine Catholic priests already have left for Russia in accordance with the agreement entered into by the Vatican and the soviet authorities, according to Le Matin. They are taking with them a cargo of corn destined for the Volga region.

According to the agreement Russia is divided into three parts, so far as Catholic missionery activities are concerned. The Petrograd district goes to the Redemptorists; the Moscow region to the Jesuits and the Odessa region to the Freres du Verbe de Dieu.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE TO TAKE 850 PASSENGERS FROM SHIP

Canadian Pacific Steamer Went Ashore in St. Lawrence River Yesterday.

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, June 3.—Arrangements were completed tonight to transfer the 850 passengers of the Canadian Pacific steamer Montcalm, aground at Becancour, opposite Cape de la Madeleine, to the steamers Metagama and Canada, if the Montcalm was not floated by midnight.

The vessel went ashore yesterday. It was believed for a time that she could be floated at high tide, with the aid of a tug, but when it was found today that she still was hard and fast, Capt. Walsh, the master of the steamer, telephoned to Quebec for a vessel to remove the passengers, whereupon the Metagama and Canada were ordered to stand by. The former is bound for Glasgow and the latter for Liverpool.

MORE NAVAL CRAFT ANCHOR IN HARBOR

Military Activities Include Commandeering of Motor Lorries and Motorboats; Traffic Between Londonderry and Donegal Restricted.

By the Associated Press.

BELFAST, Ireland, June 3.—Reinforcements for the British military forces in Northern Ireland poured into Belfast today and the influx is to continue all next week, according to present prospects. The city had to go back to the energetic days of March, 1914, which preceded the Curragh brigade mutiny, to find a parallel for the present military activity.

Two transports arrived this morning from Birkenhead with the Scottish Borderers. The Manchesters are due tomorrow, while the Royal Fusiliers and the Liverpool regiment also are coming. They are proceeding to Ballykinder Camp, County Down, which until last year housed nearly 2000 interned men. Before the reinforcements began coming, there were 19 battalions in Ulster, far below the war strength.

109 Airmen Arrive.

The most interesting arrivals were a part of 12 officers and 97 men of the Royal Air Service. It is understood that 12 Bristol fighting planes would fly from England for their use, probably to be housed at the Aldergrove Aviation ground, 13 miles from Belfast, used as a camp for the Seventeenth Brigade, which recently arrived from Cork.

A howitzer battery also arrived this evening. It departed for Enniskillen, County Fermanagh, which is the center of the military activity. Wholesale commandeering of vehicles is going on, especially of motor lorries. Many motor boats are also being taken and officers have been inspecting other craft.

Movement Toward Belleek.

The popular belief is that the military is to be used to clear the Belleek salient. Stirring events in this sector seem to be presaged by the departure this afternoon on Crossley tenders and commandeered motor lorries of large parties of the military, fully equipped and evidently prepared for a long stay. They had a great many machine guns with them. They are divided into two sections, one proceeding toward Pettigoe and the other toward Belleek, on opposite flanks of the salient.

One of the wings of the military forces which left Enniskillen this afternoon for Pettigoe embarked on boats at Kesh and crossed to Boa Island, apparently with the intention of camping there for the night. The Belleek party is camping at Resscor. The intention of these forces, it is believed, is to push the Republicans from Waterfoot and Magheramenagh.

Boats Play Important Role.

Boats are playing an important part in the movement, as Belleek could not be occupied by land except by traversing 200 yards of Free State territory, which presumably the British authorities are anxious to avoid, whereas it can be reached directly by water.

A howitzer battery arrived at Enniskillen this evening and there is

Federal Investigators Report Industrial Crisis Due in Three Weeks as Result of Rapid Fuel Consumption.

RESERVE CUT IN TWO DURING LAST MONTH

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Coal reserves of the country being eaten into with dangerous rapidity, means a crisis will come within three weeks and result in drastically curbing industrial activity. This information was brought to Washington by investigators for the Government who have been making an inquiry into the coal strike situation.

With all organized mines still tied up and nonunion producing mines still 3,000,000 tons a week below normal consumption the reserve stock of 63,000,000 tons on April 1 has dwindled to less than 33,000,000 tons.

The continuance of the strike and the fact that consumers depend upon reserve stocks to supply their needs rather than order direct from the mines is mainly responsible for the present condition, fuel experts declare, and has resulted in seriously embarrassing many industrial concerns in areas removed from the storehouses.

Consumption Almost Double.

During the first six weeks of the strike the nonunion mines, solely because of lack of orders it is said, produced an average of only about 4,000,000 tons a week with a consumption of 8,000,000 tons a week. Quickening of orders brought about by the rapidly diminishing supply on hand raised the nonunion output to slightly more than 4,000,0000 tons for the seventh week and up to nearly 5,000,000 tons for the eighth week. The output this week is estimated at slightly more than 5,000,000 tons.

In the general inquiry into the coal situation the fuel experts investigated reports from Chicago that the action of Secretary Hoover in obtaining the consent of coal operators to a maximum price at the mines, has resulted in an increase from 25 cents to 50 cents a ton retail in Chicago.

President's Rumored Attitude.

Secretary Hoover announced today that the investigation disclosed that there was absolutely no truth in the report and further that there is no indication that there is any concerted action in progress or contemplated among the retail dealers to boost prices. Despite this denial the question will be gone into thoroughly at a conference at the Department of Commerce Monday between Secretary Hoover and retail dealers that will be attended by Homer D. Jones, president of the Retail Coal Dealers' Association.

It became known at the White House today that while no invitation to do so has yet arrived, President Harding probably would agree to appoint a tribunal to arbitrate differences between anthracite operators and miners.

No direct comment on the proposals of the hard coal operators to the miners in the meetings at New York suggesting such action was made, but it was plainly intimated that the administration is hopeful that some basis for a settlement of the controversy soon would be arrived at.

Women and Children Attack Strike Breakers With Pepper.

By the Associated Press.

GIBSON, Pa., June 3.—Strike breakers taken into the Windsor region by the Bertrand-White Co. to work in Mine No. 49, just over the line in Cambria County, were attacked this morning by women and children while they were on their way to work. No one was seriously hurt, although pepper was thrown.

The families of 35 striking miners of the Consolidated Coal Co. at Meyersdale, Penn., were today served with eviction notices, it was announced at district headquarters of the United Mine Workers here. The customary five days' time limit was specified. Figures compiled at the union office showed that since the strike began 522 families in 17 communities of Somerset, Cambria and Indiana counties have been evicted, and many of them are living in tents provided by the union.

District President John Borphy was in New York today in connection with the legal proceedings to be instituted by the union next week in Cambria County.

"We Are Fighting Cause of Britain," Ulster Premier Says in Interview

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 3.

IN the course of an interview with newspaper reporters today, Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, said: "The testing time for Ulster has come; it may be that testing time for England also has come. If we go down, our flag goes down with us."

In the present stand Ulster is taking, Sir James asserted, "we are fighting not only our own cause, but the cause of Great Britain." He declared the reason Ulster refused to have anything further to do with the boundary commission was because the two leaders of Southern Ireland had signed a pact which, "in our opinion," jeopardized the whole question of empire citizenship.

"In taking up that attitude," he continued, "we felt we were taking the only steps citizens of the empire could take, and it is because we believe the people of Great Britain are with us against any attempt to drive us out of the empire that we are going forward with confidence."

was not making much money. He promised he would obtain a divorce from his wife. I went back to Springfield loving him very much."

Letters found in the room where the shooting occurred indicated a mutual interest in esperants, the international language.

A statement signed "Peggy Beal," found in the room, read:

"My name is Peggy Beal. I am 29 years of age. I live in Springfield, Ill. I came to Kansas City with the intention of marrying Frank Warren Anderson. When I arrived I met him and we went to the Midwest Hotel. He told me he was married and that he was not divorced yet. Therefore, he could not marry me.

"There is nothing more to tell. I shot him because he brought me here and then could not marry me.

(Signed) "PEGGY BEAL."

Anderson and Miss Beal had lived at the hotel as husband and wife since Wednesday, officers said, and for a week previous had lived at another local address.

The woman came here about 10 days ago from Springfield, where for several months she had been a nurse in the open air colony. Anderson took her to his rooms and introduced her as his wife. Wednesday afternoon they registered at the hotel. No one at the hotel saw the couple enter last evening and guests say no sounds were heard early this morning except two shots.

Anderson was shot in the back of the head as he lay on his side, policemen said. He was 33 years old, according to an application for work, filed with the store where he was employed. He also stated in the application that he was married.

Anderson's letters to the girl spoke of his love of the outdoors and his enjoyment of tennis.

Persons who knew Anderson and to whom he introduced Miss Beal as his wife said that both appeared to be of unusual refinement and good breeding.

Nurse Left Springfield, Ill., Week Ago, "To Be Married."

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 3.—Miss Marie Beal, the nurse who is reported to have shot herself and Frank W. Anderson, department store employe, in Kansas City today, left Springfield a week ago, after working as a nurse at the open-air colony here for five months. She came here from her parents' home at Dayton, O. She departed with the announcement that she was going to Kansas City to be married.

Body to Be Shipped to Father's Home at Collingswood, N. J.

By the Associated Press.

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J., June 3. —Frank W. Anderson, who was shot in Kansas City by "Peggy" Beal, lived here until eight months ago, when he went west. He worked for a while in St. Louis and then went to Kansas City.

"The boy left here for the West last October," Frank M. Anderson, his father, said. "He was married and had a wife living somewhere in Indiana. The body is being sent home. He will be buried from my home in Collingswood."

Anderson Said to Have Had Nurse Friend in St. Louis.

Anderson was employed as floor manager of a section of the first floor of a downtown department store here from last November until Jan. 21. In his application for employment he stated he had come West because of "domestic troubles." He stated that he was married, but gave as his nearest relative his father, Frank M. Anderson, of Collinswood, N. J.

Mrs. Hattie Moore, 3829 Washington boulevard, at whose home Anderson resided, recalled yesterday that in the latter part of last December he mentioned that in a chance conversation on an Olive street car he had discovered that his seat companion had been a nurse in France during the war. He took an interest in her, he told Mrs. Moore because he had served overseas in the Aviation Corps.

"After that he frequently spoke of the young woman, whom he referred to as 'my nurse,'" said Mrs. Moore. "He told me she lived in Ferguson and that her mother was a talented musician. He visited her several times a week, and once he mentioned her name in my presence. It slipped my mind but the name 'Marie Beal' seems familiar to me.

"He was a brilliant conversationalist and wrote poetry. He was well liked by the others in the house, and we regretted his leaving to accept employment in Kansas City. When he came here he was without baggage and when I commented upon it he replied, 'When you can't get along at home, you sometimes pick up and leave without baggage.'"

Inquiry at Ferguson disclosed that at least half a dozen young women residing there had served as Red Cross nurses overseas, but no one could be found who had ever heard of Anderson.

BRITISH AIR, LAND AND SEA FORCES REACH BELFAST TO AID ULSTER

In a border encounter along the Tyrone-Donegal frontier three noncombatants are reported killed.

The most important naval unit yet sent to northern waters is the flotilla leader Wallace, sister ship of the Brooke, with a speed of 36 knots. The Wallace reached Belfast this morning. The Warwick, which is patroling Lough Foyle, was the flagship of Roger Keys in the Zeebrugge raid.

There are hopes of peace on the Straban-Lifford front, though the deputation of clergymen and others who waited on the Republicans there are maintaining great secrecy as to the result of their interview. They will draw up their report, they say, and submit it to the town council which took the initiative in the movement, leaving it to the latter to make the report public.

Belfast had a comparatively quiet week-end. Two soldiers and three civilians were wounded in the course of this afternoon's shooting. The record since Monday is 18 killed and 74 wounded in disturbances in this city.

There has been a considerable renewal of the looting which featured the rioting of July and August, 1920, and the authorities have issued a warning that they will put it down with a strong hand.

Restrictions on Motor Traffic.

Restrictions upon motor traffic were put into operation today along the Londonderry-Donegal border. The large omnibusses which ply between towns in the Free State and Londonderry City were unable to cross the frontier. In the case of ordinary motor traffic the only cars allowed to pass were those containing men in business in the city. The Republicans are reported to have stopped farm carts leaving Donegal, taking whatever butter, milk and produce they required. A bridge in the Burnfoot district, near the border, was blown up last night.

A large party of official Irish Republican army forces marched from its headquarters in Sligo today and took possession of the town hall there. Sentries were posted preventing the entrance of unauthorized persons. The seizure is believed to be connected with the coming elections.

Provisional Government to Act According to Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, June 3—No apprehension is entertained here of any breach with the British Government over the carrying out of the Anglo-Irish treaty and no intention is entertained of attempting to travel outside the treaty's provisions, it was declared today after a meeting of the provisional government ministers. The ministers were informed of the conversations between the Irish leaders and British officials in London. Nothing in relation to either the elections or the proposed legislation can afford ground for any accusation against the Irish signatories, it was insisted.

The British Cabinet, it is argued here, is not showing impartiality between the north and the south, its support of Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, serving to accentuate the disposition to treat the northern nationalists unfairly.

Dublin today witnessed a spectacle omitted for many years past when 7000 British troops stationed in the city paraded in Phoenix Park in a revival of the annual observation of the King's birthday.

This was the first time a revival had been held since 1914. Gen. Sir Nevil MacReady, commander of the forces in Ireland, was the inspecting officer.

Three men today held up the Provincial Bank at Templemore, near Thurles, and got away with cash amounting to £2000. The bandits escaped in a motor car.

London Believes Government Will Deal Firmly With Southern Irish.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 3.—The arrival of British military reinforcements in Belfast over night was commented on today as indicating the Government had made up its mind to deal firmly with the Northern Irish situation and there is already talk in London that Ulster would be used as the base for an advance into Southern Ireland in the event of the ultimate failure of the Anglo-Irish treaty. It is pointed out, however, that this latter opposition overlooks the primary fact that small sections of the Northern area have already been invaded by Southern forces.

Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, on his recent visit to London, asked for reinforcements to recover the villages held by the Southerners, and to resist further incursions of Ulster. However willing the cabinet may be to allow the Sinn Fein controversy, which is holding up the formation of a new government in the South to run its course, it has adopted the policy of supporting the North. This was reflected in the recent cabinet statement in the House of Commons that Premier Craig would be given all the troops he asked for.

Today's developments came as a surprise to London, where the question chiefly asked was what effect the aggressive movment against the Southerners who are invading the Northern State would have on the position of the people of Southern Ireland.

The Irish delegates who returned from London plainly reveal the anxiety they feel and make no secret of the fact that a critical situation has arisen over the constitution, says the Dublin correspondent of News of the World.

"The question of modification," he declares, "will, of course, be carefully considered, and it is understood that a meeting of the members responsible for framing the constitution will be held without delay so as to enable the delegates to return to London next Tuesday or Wednesday with an amended draft. Its publication will accordingly be postponed.

U. S. WILL JOIN IN INVESTIGATION OF TURK ATROCITIES

England, France and Italy Will Look Into Charges of Mistreatment of Americans.

SECRETARY HUGHES ISSUES STATEMENT

Makes It Clear That in Accepting Invitation America Is Committed Only to Ascertaining Facts.

No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The United States will join Great Britain, France and Italy in the investigation of the alleged atrocities and deportation of Armenians by the Turks.

Secretary of State Hughes, in his statement, makes it clear that in accepting the invitation of Great Britain the American Government is committed only to the extent of ascertaining the actual facts. Our Government, he says, "assumes no further obligation and enters into no commitment."

The Angora Government has indicated its unwillingness to receive an investigating commission. The Kemalist authorities have frequently denied committing atrocities and have made counter charges of the same nature against the Greeks and Armenians.

Statement of Secretary.

The statement by Secretary Hughes follows: "On May 15, 1922, a note was received from the British Ambassador referring to representatives of the renewal of the deportation of Christians by the Turkish authorities at Angora and the alleged atrocities connected therewith and communicating a proposal of the British Government that the American, British, French and Italian Governments should at once depute carefully selected officers to proceed to such places in Anatolia as might best enable them to conduct an appropriate investigation.

"In a subsequent memorandum of May 19, the British Ambassador indicated that the Turkish deportations and outrages might lead to retaliatory action in territory held by the Greek forces and suggested that the Government of the United States should join in requesting the authorities functioning in Greece to permit the dispatch of officers to regions under Greek occupation.

Ready to Designate Agents.

"In answering these communications the Secretary of State has said that the situation of the Christian minorities in Turkey has enlisted to a marked degree the sympathies of the American people, and it has been noted with deep concern that the work of benevolence and educational institutions in Turkey has steadily been hampered, that the rights which American citizens have long enjoyed in Turkey in common with the nationals of other Powers have often been disregarded and the property rights and interests of Americans and other foreigners placed in jeopardy.

"In view of the humanitarian considerations which are involved and of the desire of this Government to have adequate information through a thorough and impartial investigation of the actual conditions prevailing in Anatolia, in order that this Government may determine its future policy in relation to the authorities concerned, the President is prepared to designate an officer or officers to take part in the proposed inquiry.

"In informing the British Government of the foregoing, the Government of the United States has made it clear that the proposed action is limited in scope to an inquiry to obtain accurate data as to the situation in Anatolia for the information of the Governments participating therein and has stated that this Government assumes no further obligation and enters into no commitment.

"In order to expedite the inquiry it was at the same time suggested by this Government that officers should be designated by the respective Governments to institute inquiries concurrently in the districts respectively under Greek and Turkish occupation and that these two commissions, upon the completion of their investigation should unite in a comprehensive report."

ANOTHER WRANGLE OVER EMPLOYES ON CONSTITUTION

HEATED DEBATE OVER QUESTION

Taxation Dealt With in Some New Proposals Submitted —Convention Adjourns to 2 P. M. Monday.

JEFFERSON City, Mo., June 3.—The Constitutional Convention again this afternoon committed itself to a program of 118 employes and a total weekly payroll of $10,500, after an argument on the question during which charges of bad faith were met with others that delegates were dragging the convention down to a level of personal patronage and that one member, a candidate for office, was seeking the aid of other members in that venture.

The convention on Friday had adopted a resolution by Robert Lamar, of Houston, which will allow each member to have a stenograher at $6 a day, the vote being 36 to 33 and was announced adopted although it abrogated effect of a rule of the convention, which under the rules can be done only by a two-thirds vote of those present, which would have been 46.

Brought Up by Elvins.

The matter again was precipitated today when Pollitte Elvins, of Bonne Terre, moved reconsideration, supported by the second of S. C. Bates, of Springfield, both of whom had voted for the resolution yesterday. Elvins announced that he wanted to present a substitute providing that as many stenographers be employed for the convention by the standing committee on expenditures, as appeared to be needed, action to be taken at the recommendation of individual members. But the delegates wanted to name their own clerks, and J. E. Cahill, of Willard, suggested, probably some of the members might be embarrassed by such a situation as some of them doubtless already had sent for persons to serve in that capacity.

Former State Senator Frank Farris, of Rolla, spoke until his voice became hoarse under the exertion, urging against reconsideration, declaring that the matter would be constantly before the convention until it had been settled and asserting that it would be false economy to try to run the convention with a few stenographers.

George P. Williams, of St. Louis, advocated reconsideration and expressed regret that a round robin on the question had not been signed by enough to put the matter over Friday, before it had been taken up in the convention. He said that while he did not vouch for the truth of the allegation it was being said that one member of the convention, a candidate, is seeking the service of other delegates in that aim.

Author of Resolution Heard.

Don O. Vernon of Lebanon, author of a resolution which was beaten earlier in the session, declared the press of the State "crucified me on the day after I put my resolution in here. You nailed me on the cross and I remained there till yesterday. Now I'm down. I told you then that within three weeks you would agree with me." Vernon went on to remark, "I am the man behind the gun," and exhorted delegates to oppose reconsideration. "Let's get our clerks and get down to business," he said.

Ralph Wammack of Bloomfield asked of Vernon, "If the convention of 1875, with its members and clerks doing their writing in long hand, revised the Constitution of 1860 in 90 days and with the aid of only 40 employes, why do we need 118 to 125 employes?" Vernon replied that times had changed and that every man now had more to do and there is more to consider.

Mrs. W. W. Martin spoke against reconsideration, declaring that if clerks are needed they should be employed; that the members of the convention had been sent by constituents who ought to know them and that these delegates are responsible to their constituents and their consciences. If the delegates say they need stenographers she is in favor of accepting their statements, she said.

Group Rule Criticised.

Several delegates declared that opposition to the clerkship increase was rooted in desire of members of the "Committee of Eight," which framed the original plan of organization, "to run the convention," which former Circuit Judge Daniel G. Taylor of St. Louis, a member of that group, denied is true.

When finally a vote was taken, the move to reconsider was lost, 40 to 21.

Six proposals were presented during the session. One of them would provide that property subject to taxation be assessed at its market value, for purposes of taxation. Another would provide that owners of real estate incumbered by liens would be required to pay taxes only on their equities. The convention adjourned until 2 p. m. Monday.

Amundsen Starts Voyage Into Uncharted Arctic

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, June 3.—The auxiliary powered schooner Maud, Capt. Roald Amundsen's ship, on a Polar expedition, sailed at 3:40 o'clock this afternoon for Alaska, on the first leg of a five-year voyage through the Arctic ice pack.

Capt. Winsting, sailing master of the Maud, commanded the vessel, Capt. Amundsen, chief of the experition, having decided to proceed to Nome by steamer, sailing tomorrow.

The United States navy tug Mahopac and a flotilla of cruisers from the fleets of the Seattle and Queen City Yacht clubs escorted the Maud up Puget Sound.

Farewell Demonstration.

A huge crowd gathered at the Union Oil Co.'s dock to bid the expedition Godspeed. At the time set for departure the United States army band burst forth with the "Star-Spangled Banner," and a detachment of American marines raised the Stars and Stripes over the dock and cast loose the Maud's cables.

The band took up the Norwegian national anthem as the little vessel moved out into the stream, northward bound.

Scores of ships in the harbor blared a farewell with their whistles. Capt. Amundsen accompanied his ship only to West Point, a few miles up the Sound. He sails for Nome on the steamer Victoria tomorrow to rejoin the expedition when the Maud reaches there.

The expedition is a resumption of the effort, begun by Capt. Amundsen in 1918, to drift past the North Pole with the ice floes, minutely studying phenomena of a vast area never before visited by white men, and to secure data which the explorer hopes may revolutionize present day meteorological and oceanographical knowledge in the northern hemisphere.

New Land to Be Sought.

Special investigation will be made to determine whether land exists in the neighborhood of the pole, as some oceanographers, basing their belief on sudden shifts in polar ocean currents, have maintained.

Two airplanes—one capable of carrying nine passengers and the other a three seater—and a wireless outfit are part of the equipment. With the planes Amundsen will make an intensive exploration of the human area of almost a million square miles covering "the roof of the world."

The Maud is expected to reach Nome within three weeks, and by July 1 to be heading out into the Arctic.

and reach conclusions based upon thoughtful study and consideration.

"I can see how that Senator might find himself in a state of disagreement with other Senators of his own party, constituting a majority of the Senate. I can see how such a Senator might even find himself at variance with the views of a great President upon a great issue, even though that President belonged to his own political party. Thus far there might be only regret because of the Senator's position, regret upon the part of those who adhered to the views of the President and the majority of the Senators of this particular party.

"Then comes another step in every important political question, and at this point the issue is carried to the party itself and to the party conventions and the party platforms.

How Policies Are Determined.

"This is a Government by political parties. Responsibility rests upon the political party in control. The policies of political parties are determined, not by Presidents, not by the Senate, but by the rank and file of the party.

"Primary elections and local conventions are held and delegates are elected to State conventions, and delegates are elected by State conventions to national conventions. In these conventions platforms are adopted and candidates nominated to represent the principles and policies declared in the platforms. They represent the combined wisdom of party leadership and by the course of representative government as applied to political parties they represent the ultimate decision of the rank and file of the party.

"Opposition by a party leader to a party platform is of vastly more significance than the independent opposition of a Senator who disagrees with the President or disagrees with his party colleagues in the Senate.

More Than Independence Involved.

"If a Senator sets his judgment above the judgment of his party it becomes a serious matter when a Senator or a Congressman or a Governor, or even a President, finds himself unable to agree with his party's platform, regularly adopted and his opposition to the policies laid down in the party platform continues there is raised an issue which involves more than mere independence, it is an issue between him and his party which advanced him to his high place.

"If he is right in his position the party is wrong; if his party is right he is wrong and that is all there is to it. If his constituency subsequently is asked to approve the course of this public official that constituency is asked to repudiate the party platform, to reverse the party's decisions and to contradict the principles of the American political system."

Long then brought out Reed's own utterances in his campaign to defeat Francis, when he held Francis up to scorn as a party traitor because in 1896 he voted the gold Democrat ticket and against Bryan.

Quotes Reed in Regularity.

"In view of the situation I have outlined," Long continued, "I may consistently quote the words, 'I am not an occasional Democrat. I have never attacked the Democracy from the front, nor ambushed it from the rear. I have never given aid or comfort to the enemy. I have not claimed to be wiser than the combined wisdom of my party as expressed in its platforms regularly adopted."

"Perhaps no man of independent thought has ever found a political platform which exactly expressed all his personal ideas. But most men recognize the truth that individual preference must be subordinated to the common cause, and that if no man would support a platform unless it embraced his exact ideas, there would be as many parties as there are men, and organization would be impossible."

Long made this idea the theme of his speech, replying to though not mentioning Reed's declarations that the League of Nations was not a party question, and that he had always supported the party platforms on which he was elected.

Argument As To League.

Long brought out that live and progressive political parties did not confine themselves solely to the principles adopted by them at their fundations, but with the changing conditions of the world added new principles. He showed that the League of Nations became one of the principles of the Democratic party with the adoption of the party platform in San Francisco in 1920, and asserted that the principle of the League had been in line with the principles of the Democratic party since the party was founded.

This was the only new feature of Long's address, the remainder of his speech being devoted to the same subjects he has discussed in his other meetings. He denounced the Republican policy of isolation and declared that much of the business depression was due to that policy.

He asserted that President Harding and the Republican administration had time after time adotped the theories of former President Wilson which they had rejected when submitted by Wilson.

"They sarcastically criticised watchful waiting in Mexico," Long said, "and still they are watchfully waiting there."

Low prices of wheat and other farm products, he said, were due in great measure to the policy of isolation, which he said had destroyed American markets abroad, and which kept American products at home, where the supply exceeded the demand.

About 400 in Audience.

Long's meeting this afternoon from the standpoint of enthusiasm was the best he has had. The court room in the Boone County court house was crowded, every seat being taken, and the aisles and doorways jamed, more than 400 persons hearing him speak.

Tonight he delivered virtually the same speech in Ashland, a small town in the southern part of the county.

The political situation in Boone County is one watched in every Democratic primary with unusual interest because almost invariably the Democratic majority in Boone County is larger than in any other Missouri county, and because the population is almost entirely a purely American population, there being very few residents of the county whose foreign ancestry is not back many generations.

A very careful study of the Senatorial lineup, including talks with more than a score of residents of Columbia, Centralia, Sturgeon and Ashland, as well as a number of farmers, some of whom were supporters of Reed, leads me to the opinion that at this time there are at least two Boone County voters for Long to one for Reed, and that seems to be a fairly conservative estimate.

Reed Following in Minority.

In certain sections of the county, particularly about Centralia and Sturgeon, the proportional probably is as high as three for Long to one for Reed, while about Ashland it probably is lower than the general average I believe exists for the county. In Columbia, Reed has a following, but it appears to be very much in the minority.

It was stated by a well informed politician, who said he would vote for Long, but who has refused to join the Long Club and who said he had no real interest in the campaign, that there was not one county official in Boone County who would support Reed, and that five of the seven members of the Democratic county committee are opposed to Reed.

However, it must be remembered that Reed has not visited the county this campaign, and that there remains nearly two months of campaigning, with the possibility of many changes.

An unusual situation existed in Boone County in 1920, when the Rev. Arthur N. Lindsey, a Christian minister of Clinton, was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. Lindsey carried the county, receiving 1306 votes, to 1171 for Charles M. Hay, 1105 for Long and 502 for H. S. Priest. The vote for Lindsey was purely a personal vote, but there is nothing to indicate that it can be controlled for any particular candidate this year.

Both Reed and Long Clubs.

Reed and Long clubs have been organized in Columbia, but neither has attracted a large membership. Edward M. Watson, editor of the Columbia Tribune, is president of the Reed Club and W. T. Anderson, a miller is president of the Long Club.

Watson said today that he believed Reed could carry Boone County, but he is the only person among 30 or more to whom I talked who expressed that opinion. Other Reed men said their only hope was to keep the Long majority low.

Among the active Reed supporters is, U. S. Hall, former Congressman, who in 1920 publicly supported Senator Spencer, Republican, against Long. H. L. Pruett of Centralia, a member of the Democratic County Committee, said the county was strong for Long and that he was confident Long's majority would exceed 2000 in the county. Former State Senator B. M. Anderson said he believed Long would carry the county by 1800 or 2000.

VALENTINO BIGAMY CHARGE TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT

Justice to Decide Monday on Holding Moving Picture Actor for Superior Court Trial.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 3.—Rudolph Valentino, hero of many film romances, will know Monday whether he must face a jury on a charge of bigamy. Justice of the Peace Hanby announced this today at the conclusion of the actor's preliminary hearing on charges that Valentino married Miss Winifred Hudnut at Mexicali, Lower California, and afterwards lived with her at Palm Springs, Cal., while he still was legally married to Miss Jean Acker.

Whether Justice Hanby will bind Valentino over to the Los Angeles Superior Court for trial or dismiss the complaint depends on his interpretation of the California statute on which the District Attorney's office based the charge against the actor.

It was contended by Deputy District Attorney Costello that the fact Valentino and his second wife lived in the same cottage at Palm Springs for three days following their marriage warranted holding the defendant for trial. W. I. Gilbert, representing Valentino, argued that no evidence showing marital relations had been produced. Both cited decisions they contended sustained their points.

Frank James, attorney for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, attacked the validity of the measure on the ground that the acts charged by the prosecution did not constitute bigamy.

The arguments followed testimony by Dr. Floreta White, physician of Palm Springs, that she attended the marriage at Mexicali and that the couple stayed at her cottage at the springs that night. Mrs. Valentino was ill, she testified, and asked to have a room by herself, and Valentino and Douglas Gerard, groomsman at the wedding, were assigned to another room.

DANGER OF RACE RIOT AT KIRWIN, TEX., PASSING

Crowds Dispersing and Laying Aside Arms—Many Negroes Have Left Homes.

By the Associated Press.

KIRWIN, Tex., June 3.—Virtually normal conditions prevailed again in and near Kirvin today. Rumors of possible race riots and clashes of whites and negroes continued, but were discounted. Many men who were armed this morning had laid aside their weapons and most of the crowds which came here from adjoining counties and nearby cities had gone home.

Many of the negroes were reported to have left their homes in order to keep out of possible trouble zones.

Bodies of Allie and Leroy Gibson, negroes killed in a fight with officers yesterday are in the possession of relatives, it was said. The bodies had been taken last night from where they fell, and one report today was they had been burned. However, county officials denied that.

Only one other negro known to be killed was involved in the shooting, according to the story told today and search for him continues.

Many negroes spent Friday night in trees and bushes, completely abandoning their homes through fear of the white people. M. T. Gonbaulles, Government agent who came here to investigate the report of trouble, said today, following a trip through the negro settlements.

Deputy Comptroller Found Dazed.

Felix Gunn, Deputy City Comptroller, was found lying on the sidewalk in front of 419 Chestnut street in a dazed state at 7 o'clock last night. His face was cut and bruised. He was taken to the city hospital. The police reported that he evidently sustained his injuries in a fall.

WIFE OF WARD CALLED BEFORE GRAND JURY

SERVANTS IN WARD HOME SUBPENAED

Neighbor Women Also Called to Be Asked About Visitors to Ward Home Night of the Killing.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Grand jury subpenas were served today, at the direction of District Attorney Weeks of Westchester County, on Mrs. Ward, wife of Walter S. Ward, who is out on $50,000 bail, charged with the slaying of Clarence Peters, former navy seaman; Mrs. Waldo J. Shuman, a neighbor of the Wards, who lives at 78 Decatur road, Sutton Manor, New Rochelle, and who was called by Mrs. Ward the night Ward swallowed a dose of iodine; Mrs. Alfred J. Hook, another neighbor, of 76 Decatur road, who attended a card party in the Ward home on the night of May 15, when Ward drove Peters to Kensico Reservoir, where the body of the latter was found the next morning; Lulu Barrows, a nurse of the Ward children, and Amy Mild, maid servant in the Ward household.

The subpenas were served by Raymond K. Hill, fingerprint expert of Sheriff Werner's staff. They are returnable Monday, when the grand jury will be sworn in by County Judge William F. Bleakley, who is a member of the law firm of Brennan, Curran & Bleakley of Yonkers. John F. Brennan, his partner, is one of Ward's lawyers. The grand jury will take up the Ward case, District Attorney Weeks said tonight, the oldest over May grand jury being assigned to take up the other cases in the county.

What Witnesses will Be Asked.

Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Hook and the two young women employed in the household will be asked about Ward's movement on the night of May 15 and whether they saw Peters in the house. District Attorney Weeks is anxious to learn what callers Ward had that night and at other times.

Peters parents in Haverhill, Mass., also were communicated with by Weeks and asked to appear. They are expected to do so. It was reported that George S. Ward, father of Walter Ward, would be asked for the text of the radiogram he sent to his son on his way home from Europe, refusing "a cent for blackmail," and also what he can tell about the mysterious blackmail plot. So far as could be learned, no subpoena for the father and head of the Ward Baking Co. was issued.

In addition, the grand jury witnesses will include the members of the State Police and others who viewed the body of Peters as it lay in the lonely roadside, eight miles above White Plains.

Statement of Detective.

Detective Scott of the New Rochelle police force, who was the first man to enter the Ward home Wednesday morning, when the authorities made their search for evidence of a struggle there, said when he entered the house and notified Mrs. Ward a search was to be made, she raised her right hand above her head and exclaimed:

"By the God in heaven, Peters was not in this house on the night of May 15, and has never been in this home."

Man Sought in Ward Case Found Wounded in Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 3.—The eighteenth day of the Ward shooting mystery brought three sharp developments.

The first was the discovery in Philadelphia of a wounded man giving the name of John Cluzo of New York, suspected of being the companion of Clarence Peters, alleged to have been shot by Walter S. Ward, at the time the wealthy baker's son claims to have killed the ex-sailor in self-defense. Unsuccessful search for a wounded man was conducted yesterday in Stamford, Conn.

The second development was the discovery that a man known as "Jack" had been seen, as late as Thursday night, at the hotel in New York where Cluzo claims to have stopped. He was said to have driven an automobile similar to the car alleged by Ward to have been used by the mysterious "Charley Ross" and "Jack" when he asserts they met him and Peters at a blackmailers' tryst near the Kensico reservoir the night of May 15. It was not established whether the "Jack" seen at the hotel actually met Cluzo, who, it is suspected, may turn out to be the real "Charley Ross."

The third development was the announcement that the baker's wife, her two servants and a score of other witnesses had been summoned to appear Monday before the Westchester grand jury.

Authorities indicated they believed Cluzo's arrest was important, for if he turned out to have been shot with Peters, instead of in a row in Greensburg, Pa., as he claims, his arrest would have an important bearing on the Ward case in connection with the story told by James J. Cunningham, racetrack follower, now in jail here after professing some knowledge of the manner in which Peters came to be shot.

Ward's story was that he had gone to the Kensico reservoir to keep a date with a band of blackmailers, including Peters, and that he had been forced to fire to save his own life.

Cunningham, on the other hand, told a circumstantial story to the effect that the shooting occurred in the Ward home when the baker, in league with the blackmailers against another person, had fired in anger when he found he was being double-crossed.

Man Held in Philadelphia in Ward Case Says He is Detective.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—A new angle late today entered into the case of John Cienzo, held under surveillance as a possible suspect in connection with the killing of Clarence Peters by Walter S. Ward, son of the New York millionnaire baker, when police discovered a letter on his person purporting to have been written to him by a woman in New York.

The letter was addressed to "J. Siars" which the prisoner said was one of his "American names" by "Marie Wilson." It related to a theater invitation Cienzo had sent.

Authorities have been searching for a companion of Peters who was reported to have been wounded when the latter was shot, and, according to detectives, Cienzo, who has two infected bullet wounds, has been unable to furnish an account of his movements between May 14 and 17, during which time Peters was killed and his body found by State police.

Memorandum Book Found.

A memorandum book referring to the Ward Baking Co. was also said to have been found on the prisoner, who declined to say for what purpose he was carrying it.

Cienzo was arrested yesterday when found prowling about a house. Following his hearing today a turnkey discovered he was suffering from bullet wounds in his chest and right arm. He was removed to a hospital under guard after further examination.

Cienzo, apart from giving his name, residences and occupation, which he said was that of special detective, and how he obtained his wounds, declined to answer questions.

A dispatch from Wakefield, Mass., where Cienzo said he came from originally, stated it was believed the suspect was John Cieurzo, who has been absent from his home there for several months. When last heard of at Wakefield, two months ago, Cienzo said he was going to Philadelphia from New York. The dispatch said also that he had been engaged in detective work after the war.

Prisoner's Story of Wounds.

Cienzo told police here he had been employed by the Deneen Detective Agency of New York and had been staying at a hotel there. His wounds, he said, were received in a fight at Greensburg, Pa., near Pittsburg, where he had been employed to do special detective work for the Republic Coal and Iron Co.

However, police at Greensburg repudiated Cienzo's statement of a shooting affray in a telegram to Philadelphia authorities.

CHILDREN SING IN WHITE HOUSE

Performance Ended Celebration of Musical Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Washington school children were to serenade President Harding today at the Lincoln Memorial, as the conclusion to a local celebration of a week of music, but rain prevented and instead the President and Mrs. Harding had the youngsters come to the East Room of the White House, where, led by professional singers, they gave several patriotic songs. The President complimented them on their performance, saying their singing was so good he was almost glad it had rained and forced them into the White House.

Stowaway Princess to Get Hearing Before Davis

Labor Secretary Will Review Case of Russian Woman Who Claims U. S. Citizenship but Who Has Been Denied Admittance.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Princess Ivan Tschernitschew of the former Russian aristocracy, who claims American citizenship, and who has been denied admission to the United States by port authorities of New Orleans, has succeeded in getting her case before Secretary of Labor Davis, who is expected to render a decision within a few days.

The story told by the princess to the Labor Department was said to deal with the murder and crucifixion of her husband by the bolsheviki, the disappearance of her 8-year-old son, a black dispatch box containing secrets of the lost royalist cause in Russia, a flight across Europe on foot to evade the secret agents of the Soviets and a trip across the Atlantic, partly as a stowaway and partly as a stewardess.

Labor Department's Statement.

The Labor Department statement said in part:

"At Riga, the princess claims, her son was born and the family lived in peace until the bolsheviki uprising. During the early days of the revolution, she says, her father sent her son away to a place of safety and she has not seen him since. In 1919 her husband was taken by the bolsheviki and she tells a harrowing tale of his death by crucifixion. Before his death she says her husband, with the strictest injunctions of secrecy, entrusted to her a black iron dispatch box, which he told her contained papers of vital importance to the royalist regime in Russia.

"With her dispatch box, the Princess says she fled to the estate of a Count Dusterlope, where she remained until, in 1921, the bolsheviki forces attacked the estate. She says she fled, leaving behind all of her possessions, including the mysterious dispatch box, which she believes contained papers relating to the secret diplomatic dealings of various European and Asiatic nations with Russian royalty. She left Dusterlope on foot, she says, and made her way across Germany, followed every foot of the way, she says, by agents of the Russian reds, who were under orders to kill her rather than permit her to reach America with the secrets of the lost dispatch box. She made her way to Massayck, Belgium, and reached Antwerp Nov. 9, 1921.

Stowed Away on Steamer.

"The Princess says that in her desire to reach America, penniless and distraught with her pursuit across Europe, she stowed away aboard the steamship Gasconier. Five days at sea, without food and water, forced her to reveal herself to the ship's officer. So weak she could scarcely stand, she was nursed back to health and transferred at sea to the steamship Texandryer, bound back to Antwerp. She succeeded in convincing the captain of the Texandryer that she was an American citizen and he assigned her as a stewardess for the return voyage to America.

"Prior to her arrival, the Princess communicated with the American authorities seeking permission to land. She is highly educated and has more than ordinary command of the English language."

tainty. More than one member, it was predicted today, would offer amendments to that end and demand a separate vote before the final ballot on the proposal itself.

Should the plant be included in accordance with Ford's request, the House then would restore the paragraph deleted by the committee and the final proposal made by Ford would regain its original form, assuring its acceptance by the Detroit manufacturer without question.

Neither Mayo nor Worthington would comment upon Ford's action in the event the House upheld the committee and refused to insert the paragraph referring to Gorgas. Attention was called to the letter addressed to the committee when the final offer was returned from Detroit and to the public statement Ford issued Thursday in Detroit, holding the plant essential to the development of Muscle Shoals.

Power Company Statement.

A statement relating to the Gorgas question was issued by Thomas W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power Co., one of the unsuccessful bidders before the House committee for development of the power projects.

"The action of the House Military Affairs Committee," the statement said, "in eliminating from the Ford offer the Warrior extension known as the Gorgas steam plant and other properties covered by the contract of the Alabama Power Co. with the United States, sustains the position taken by the representatives of the Government that it is to be best interest of the Government to make sale of the properties to the company.

"This action recognizes the essential right and justice of our position and also sustains the view so often taken by representatives of the Government that the Gorgas property demanded by Mr. Ford is no part of the Muscle Shoals situation; that it is not essential to the operation of the Muscle Shoals properties and is necessary in the public service of Alabama rendered by this company."

FARMER FREED OF MURDER ON "UNWRITTEN LAW" PLEA

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Mo., June 3.—A verdict of not guilty was returned by a jury in the Circuit Court here today in the case of Jack Swartzell, a farmer, of Verona, Mo., charged with the murder April 25 of Ira Thomas, leading merchant and member of the School Board at Verona. Swartzell pleaded the "unwritten law" and self-defense.

Mrs. Anna Swartzell, wife of the defendant, testified that she and Thomas had been friendly, and that following an attempt by Thomas to attack her 17-year-old daughter, Irene, she told her husband of her own relations with Thomas.

Swartzell testified that he warned Thomas to leave Verona, and that the latter refused, calling him a "bluffer." He went home and got an automatic pistol, he said, and, meeting Thomas in front of the latter's store an hour later, again told him to leave town. Thomas advanced toward him, he said, and made a move as though to reach his hip pocket. Swartzell said he fired three shots, all of which entered Thomas' body, killing him instantly.

The jury was out just 30 minutes. The trial, which began Friday morning, attracted much attention, and the courtroom was packed when testimony was being given. Thomas, who was 45 years old, was the head of a family. Prior to his engaging in the mercantile business he had been a teacher and school principal in Southwest Missouri. Swartzell and his wife are 38.

UNTERMYER AND SCHIFF EXCHANGE JAIL THREATS

DISCUSSION CENTERS ON PART BANK PLAYS

NEW YORK, June 3.—Throughout one of the most peppery hearings the Lockwood committee ever has held, Samuel Untermyer strove today to tear every vestige of secrecy from the three-company steel merger announced last Thursday night, to shed full light on plans for its possible enlargement into a merger of five or more companies, and to protect its stock from the perils of an uncertain market.

He also strove to get at the bottom of Friday's curb market transactions, which involved approximately 40,000 shares of the proposed merger stock dealt in on a "when issued" basis at a figure closely in accord with the price placed on it in the merger agreement.

While Untermyer succeeded in spreading on the record considerable information that he thought important to the committee's inquiry, he encountered a defiance at almost every stage of the day's proceedings. At one point he became so enraged at Mortimer Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, bankers for the merger, that he warned him that he was taking "chances of going to jail."

"Then I will take that chance," was Schiff's heated reply, "and you will keep me company."

Demand for Data Refund.

A demand made by Untermyer on Thomas L. Chadbourne, counsel for the merger, for the production of a mass of data relating to it, was met by that attorney's flat refusal, on the ground that this data has come to him as confidential matter between lawyer and client. The committee reserved decision on the question of whether it will recognize this plea.

Plans for quizzing Emil Mosbacher, a curb broker of 67 Exchange place, who opened the trading in the merger stocks Friday, were upset by his failure to appear, although it was said he had been subpenaed. His default was noted on the record.

One thing Untermyer endeavored to show, despite the denials of Schiff, was that the syndicate fund of $20,000,000 provided for in the merger agreement is really for the purpose of creating a market for the stock to be issued, by arranging for trading to and from between brokerage houses operating the merger syndicate. He maintained that this is the recognized way of creating a market for stock.

Questioned on Curb Market.

Untermyer asked Chadbourne if curb market trading, such as was indulged in in the proposed merger stocks Friday, did not constitute "a very usual method of starting the making of a market." Chadbourne replied that it did and, on further questioning, said it is the only method known to him.

Untermyer asked Alfred B. Sturges, secretary of the New York curb market, if he knew whether the persons who dealt in the merger stocks on Friday had been "genuine buyers and sellers." Sturges said he "knew the stock was traded in."

"Well, you know how that is done?" said Untermyer, and Sturges, smilingly replied in the affirmative.

Schiff was out of sorts when he took the witness stand, because a subpena had been served on him while en route for his golf course and his holiday had been spoiled.

Witness Against His Will.

Another witness who attended very much against his will was John A. Topping, president of the Republic Iron & Steel Co., a party to the three-company merger. Topping's wife was sailing for Europe at noon and he was compelled to remain in the aldermanic chamber of the City Hall 20 minutes before that time, although Untermeyer stated that he would have excused him earlier had he understood his situation. The steel man made an automobile dash for the White Star piers when excused and returned within an hour to submit to examination. It was brought out that the Briar Hill and the Steel Tube Co. of America, the two concerns that figured as prospective parties to the merger with the Midvale until the announcement of Thursday night, are not out of the transaction entirely.

"They are still in discussion with them," he said. "They have said neither yes nor no."

He also said that other steel concerns had been under discussion as possible additions to the three-company merger, but he refused flatly to name them. When he explained that the discussions had not gone very far and that it would be unfair both to those concerns and to the merger to mention their names at the present time, he was excused from disclosing them.

Senator Lockwood remarked that two witnesses told the committee last Thursday that negotiations in regard to the Midvale merger were in a nebulous state, but that after the hearing adjourned the merger was definitely announced.

Suggestion "Not Very Serious."

Schiff assured him there was "nothing really very definite or serious" about the suggestion of bringing other companies into the merger.

At one point, when Untermyer was asking Schiff if it were not the plan of the proposed syndicate to buy and sell to stimulate the market for the merger stock, the banker replied:

"You may have had experience in that way, but I haven't. I know something about your transactions."

"I think I know yours and I don't think you know mine," replied Untermyer. "If you think you know any of mine you are at liberty to state them now from the witness stand, and do not dare to make these contemptible insinuations."

"I resent the word 'contemptible'" protected Schiff, leaning forward in his chair.

"They are contemptible because they are not true," declared Untermyer emphatically.

"I do know some of your transactions," asserted Schiff. "I know you are a large holder of Bethlehem."

Ripple of Merriment.

There was a ripple of merriment among the financial men in the front of the room and Schiff smiled with apparent satisfaction.

"Everyone knows that," interrupted Senator Lockwood.

"I told that to the committee when I started this," declared Untermyer. "I am not selling it. I have held it 15 years. Is that what you call a transaction? You will get along better if you do not make these groundless insinuations."

Schiff repeatedly expressed bitter resentment over what he declared was an attempt by Untermyer to insinuate that the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. engaged in "wash sales" of stocks.

When asked to go to his office and get all his papers relating to the financing of the merger, Schiff refused, saying that it would take him too long to find them.

Questioned About Statement.

Untermyer questioned him at length about the public statement issued on Friday night, in which it was disclosed that his firm was to have the privilege of buying 59,500 shares of stock in the new company at $10 a share or one-fifth of the price fixed for those shares, and Schiff maintained that this compensation, which amounts to between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 is quite fair.

Referring to the opening sale of the proposed merger stock on curb Friday, Untermyer asked: "Do you know how it comes that the price was fixed at $51 a share?"

"No," said Schiff.

"That was not to establish an official market, was it?" he asked.

"I don't know," said Schiff.

It was an assertion by Schiff that Untermyer was trying to "twist things" that provoked Untermyer's remark about taking chances of going to jail.

Schiff then protested to Senator Lockwood that Untermyer was "trying to put words" in his mouth, "that we are manipulating stock." "He twists words in my mouth," he repeated.

Would Close His Mouth.

"I cannot get into your mouth," said Untermyer, "If I could I would close it."

Schiff stated that the syndicate was to be a "purchasing syndicate" conducted with the idea of buying up the shares of the small investors who might want to part with their stocks. Finally, he admitted that it would not simply buy, but that the purpose of employing managers for it was to liquidate its holdings.

"That means selling, doesn't it?" Untermyer asked.

"Yes," said Schiff.

Untermyer then wanted to know if they would have the same brokers for the buying as for the selling end, and Schiff exclaimed: "That is an unfair question."

"I think endurance has reached the limit," remarked Untermyer to Senator Lockwood.

"There is animus in that question," protested Schiff.

"No Wash Orders."

Finally, he answered by saying that he had not the faintest idea what the syndicate would do, but that there would be "no wash orders."

The question of the 12-hour day in the steel mills had not been considered by the bankers as being within their province. All arrangements have been entered into on the basis of existing operating costs.

Chadbourne refused to tell whether there was any difference between the reports of earnings and assets made by accountants employed in the merger negotiations and the figures stated in the public announcement of the merger. He refused to produce the reports of the accountants or other data relating to them, claiming his privilege as an attorney.

Finally, Chadbourne was directed by the committee to bring this data to the next hearing, on Thursday morning, and hold it subject to the committee's decision whether he should be compelled to turn it over. He refused to agree to this.

When Untermyer suggested that he be held in contempt for this refusal, Senator Lockwood said that it would be best to wait until next Thursday and see what Chadbourne's attitude is then.

WOMAN DIETICIAN RADIOPHONE SPEAKER

Don'ts and Do's for Hot Weather Period Given by Miss Efale Brown.

Anticipating the hot weather that undoubtedly will be upon us next month, Miss Efale Brown, an expert on nutrition and dietetics, gave a few don'ts and dos of eating in summer in an address on the radiophone from Station K S D of the Post-Dispatch last night. Here they are:

"Don't change your eating habits too radically with the first hot days. It is liable to cause digestive disturbances.

"If you are accustomed to hot meals, don't jump right over to all cold ones. Include one hot thing, if only a beverage.

"Eat less with the first few warm days until the body accustoms itself to the change.

"Don't choose those things that are hard to digest. Eat the simple dishes, and don't eat too many different kinds at one meal.

"Stay off of foods that are rich in fats, those pastries, cakes, rich sauces and gravies, those energy givers that make us hotter and hotter.

Other Things to Avoid.

"Avoid hot breads and syrups which are liable to ferment in digestion.

"Don't ice the stomach at soda fountains between meals. If you just have to do it, if it is impossible to resist the temptation, remember to order plain soda, a phosphate, a lemonade, grape juice or ice tea, not an ice cream soda or sundae.

"When warm, don't drink any iced drink too rapidly. Sit down and take your time about it. Cold beverages will take the body heat to warm them in the stomach and will carry away body heat in that way, so they are valuable if you use them rightly."

The reasons for these rules Miss Brown gave in an interesting and diverting style, and telephone reports coming in to Station K S D later were that the talk was one of the best heard from this station. Miss Brown is director of nutrition work in the Southwestern division of the American Red Cross, and is regarded as an authority on that subject.

Talk on Locomotives.

Another address of last night's program was a description of the gigantic train of railroad locomotives which is scheduled to pass through St. Louis Tuesday en route from the Baldwin Locomotive Works, near Philadelphia, where they were built, to California, and consigned to the Southern Pacific Railroad for use on its mountain divisions. The speaker was William A. Garrett, general transportation manager of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, who is making the trip across the continent in advance of the engines. These engines represent a power of 60,000 horses, he said, and an actual value of a million and a half dollars, and are, together, the largest and most valuable train of locomotives ever run across the continent. They are all oil burners and represent the last word in locomotive construction. They will be officially received in the East St. Louis yards of the Terminal Railroad Co. Tuesday by officials of both states and both cities, he announced.

Station K S D received a pleasant letter yesterday from one of the members of its big nightly audience who is confined to his bed and has his receiving set to cheer the tedium of his convalescence. The letter was from R. E. Krueger, 6408 Wellsmar avenue.

Priest to Tell About Mars.

Monday night those listening in on the K S D program will hear all about the big red star now so prominent in the heavens in the evening. This is the planet Mars which is nearer the earth now than at any time since 1909, and the reason for this and a number of other interesting facts about Mars will be told on the K S D radiophone by the Rev. Father Martin S. Brennan, the noted astronomer-priest.

COAL MAN SAYS ST. LOUIS SUFFERS UNJUST RATES

Commissioner Wallace of Retail Coal Association Complains to Hoover.

St. Louis is being discriminated against through high freight rates by the West Kentucky coal field, the nonunion field nearest St. Louis, E. J. Wallace, commissioner of the Missouri Retail Coal Dealers' Association, says in a telegram Friday to Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

The West Kentucky field, Wallace states, serves as the best center from which St. Louis may get its coal, as from all other fields where coal is being mined maximum prices are prohibitive. Wallace charges that the Kentucky field is taking advantage of this situation and is asking as high as $4 a ton.

Since the freight rate to this city from the field is $1.87 a ton, Wallace says, at today's price, the coal would cost $5.87 a ton in the railroad yards here. This, he maintains, is too high compared with the prices fixed for other fields.

THEFT CHARGE HALTS TOUR OF 4 YOUTHS

The power of observation of some automobile tourists and quick work by two city detectives yesterday brought to an abrupt end the automobile pilgrimage of four youths from Indianapolis, Ind., in search of work in Kansas City. They passed the night at Police Headquarters, being held under the Dyer act against interstate traffic in stolen motor cars.

A tourist who telephoned the police for highway information remarked that his party had noticed four strangely acting youths in a Nash touring car, as they came through Illinois and in the city, having last seen them at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets. Detectives Kemp and Shannon hurriedly drove to that corner and were told the youths in the Nash had been directed to the St. Charles road on their way across the State.

Those Arrested.

The detectives speeded out St. Charles road, and two miles from the Missouri River they overhauled the Nash. Detective Shannon covering its occupants with a riot gun. A box of cartridges and assortment of pocket knives were found in the car. One of the youths declared the car was his father's and that they were on a pleasure trip.

They were arrested, and last night they told a Post-Dispatch reporter that they were Earl and John Northern, 22 and 18 years old, brothers, and their cousin, John Northern, 17, of Indianapolis, and Joseph Smith, 17, of an Indianapolis suburb. Earl Northern said he had done the driving. He told this story:

Youth Tells His Side.

"Work was hard to find at home. We thought we could get work in Kansas City, but we had no money to get there. We had all been to the Memorial day race and had the automobile fever, so we planned to steal a car. We broke into a garage Thursday night and got a Studebaker, but the gasoline soon gave out, so we broke into another garage at 4 a. m. Friday and got this Nash, with a tank full of gas.

"Near Marshall, Ill., Friday midnight, our gas was about to give out again. The boys suggested breaking into a country store, and went through the back window of a store. They got the cartridges, knives, a pair of shoes and $8 there. The money went for gas and food. As we were leaving the store somebody shot at us, but it was only a .22, and we went out from under. We got along all right after that and didn't know the detectives were following us from St. Louis."

DRIVER OF AUTO THAT STRUCK FIRE TRUCK FINED FOR SPEEDING

Edward T. Eckhoff, Who Figured in Accident in Which Three Firemen Were Killed Penalized $5.

Edward T. Eckhoff, driver of the automobile which figured April 17 in a collision on Skinker road with a fire truck and a street car when three firemen were killed, was permitted to plead guilty to speeding 30 miles an hour on Cass avenue, near Twenty-third street May 27, and was fined $5 and costs yesterday by Police Judge Homer.

Eckhoff on Friday took a change of venue from the court of Judge Mix, who is known as fining speeders a minimum of $1 a mile per hour. He is a defendant in a damage suit for $30,000 by an injured fireman. No indictments were found by the grand jury in investigation of the accident.

BERLIN HEARS LENINE HAS SUFFERED STROKE

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 3.—Private advices received in soviet circles in Berlin state that Premier Lenine suffered a stroke on Thursday.

Maxim Litvinoff, Karl Radekm and other soviet leaders here left immediately for Moscow.

The Lokal Anzeiger says it learns that the immediate cause of Premier Lenine's stroke, reported today from Moscow, was an effusion of blood into the brain consequent upon the operation he recently underwent for the removal of a bullet from the neck. This, the newspaper ads, was a delicate affair owing to a tumor on the cervical artery.

The power of observation of some automobile tourists and quick work by two city detectives yesterday brought to an abrupt end the automobile pilgrimage of four youths from Indianapolis, Ind., in search of work in Kansas City. They passed the night at Police Headquarters, being held under the Dyer act against interstate traffic in stolen motor cars.

A tourist who telephoned the police for highway information remarked that his party had noticed four strangely acting youths in a Nash touring car, as they came through Illinois and in the city, having last seen them at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets. Detectives Kemp and Shannon hurriedly drove to that corner and were told the youths in the Nash had been directed to the St. Charles road on their way across the State.

Those Arrested.

The detectives speeded out St. Charles road, and two miles from the Missouri River they overhauled the Nash. Detective Shannon covering its occupants with a riot gun. A box of cartridges and assortment of pocket knives were found in the car. One of the youths declared the car was his father's and that they were on a pleasure trip.

They were arrested, and last night they told a Post-Dispatch reporter that they were Earl and John Northern, 22 and 18 years old, brothers, and their cousin, John Northern, 17, of Indianapolis, and Joseph Smith, 17, of an Indianapolis suburb. Earl Northern said he had done the driving. He told this story:

Youth Tells His Side.

"Work was hard to find at home. We thought we could get work in Kansas City, but we had no money to get there. We had all been to the Memorial day race and had the automobile fever, so we planned to steal a car. We broke into a garage Thursday night and got a Studebaker, but the gasoline soon gave out, so we broke into another garage at 4 a. m. Friday and got this Nash, with a tank full of gas.

"Near Marshall, Ill., Friday midnight, our gas was about to give out again. The boys suggested breaking into a country store, and went through the back window of a store. They got the cartridges, knives, a pair of shoes and $8 there. The money went for gas and food. As we were leaving the store somebody shot at us, but it was only a .22, and we went out from under. We got along all right after that and didn't know the detectives were following us from St. Louis."

CHARGES FILED AGAINST POLICE BY MINISTER

East St. Louis Detectives Beat Youth, Forcing Him to Confess Robbery, He Alleges.

Charges of assault on Earl Maloney, 19, of 916 Exchange avenue, East St. Louis, in order to force him to sign a statement admitting participation in several robberies, have been filed against Detective-Lieutenant Harry L. Walker and Detectives Al Wilson and Luther Heilig, by the Rev. William R. Evans, pastor of the Bond avenue M. E. Church, and chairman of a committee of 15 men, organized to improve conditions in the East St. Louis Police Department.

The charges against Walker were filed Friday with Dr. J. L. Wiggins, president of the board, and the charges against Wilson and Heilig were filed yesterday with Dr. Wiggins, who has called a meeting of the board for Monday evening, when the board will set a date for the trial of the officers.

The charges filed by the Rev. Mr. Evans are on information and Maloney's affidavit that Wilson, Walker and Heilig and other officers, on the night of March 2, last, took him to the detectives' room on the second floor at police headquarters, where they beat him with a rubber hose until he signed a statement that he participated in several robberies.

Indicted on Holdup Charge.

Maloney was indicted on a charge of participating in the holdup of Tony Schrake, bartender in the saloon of John Zaker, 1100 North Ninth street, at 6:30 a. m. on Feb. 6, last, when $32 was taken. Through error his name appeared on the indictment as Mahoney, and when the case was called for trial a week ago, it was dismissed because of the error. He was rearrested on a warrant charging him with the robbery, and is now out on bond awaiting the action of the grand jury.

The Detectives deny striking Maloney, and say that he made and signed the statement voluntarily.

Charges of Neglect of Duty.

Chief of Police Mulconnery yesterday filed charges of neglect of duty against Sergt. John Moynihan. At 3 a. m. last Thursday residents in the vicinity of Fifteenth street and Lynch avenue telephoned police headquarters that four men were robbing the safe in an oil filling station at that corner. Sergt. Moynihan, accompanied by Patrolman Boyle, went to the scene in an auto. The chauffeur drove past the oil station while the robbers were in the building, and went three blocks beyond. When the officers returned, they were informed the robbers had become frightened when they drove past, and running to their waiting auto, drove away.

Sergt. Moynihan said a "green" chauffeur drove the police auto, and he was not acquainted with the streets, and drove past the oil station without knowing it.

Leo Lynch, Chief of the Fire Department, yesterday filed charges with the board against James Lanigan, a pipeman with No. 7 engine company, charging him with intoxication, insubordination and absenting himself from quarters without permission.

TWO ST. LOUIS MEN CITED TO APPEAR BEFORE SUPREME COURT

James Brooks Johnson and George Meisinger Involved in Litigation Over West End Property.

James Brooks Johnson, St. Louis money broker, and George Meisinger, also of St. Louis, have been cited to appear forthwith in the Supreme Court at Jefferson City and show cause why they should not be found guilty of contempt of court.

Johnson and Meisinger are involved in litigation with the Rookery Realty, Loan, Investment and Building Co., and Joseph Gerardi regarding the foreclosure of a deed of trust on property at King's highway and Maryland avenue, the value of which is estimated at between $125,000 and $150,000. The case was decided by the Supreme Court in March in favor of the realty company and Gerardi, but final disposition was being held up pending action on motions to modify the verdict.

Johnson and Meisinger, it is alleged, were directed by the court not to sell the property involved until the case was finally settled. Counsel for the realty company and Gerardi recently filed a motion in the court setting forth that, contrary to the court's order, Johnson and Meisinger had advertised to sell the property tomorrow.

DAUGHERTY AND HARDING BITTERLY FLAYED IN SENATE

DAUGHERTY CALLED "PARDON BROKER"

Kentuckian Sharply Rebukes Harding for Attitude Towards Criticism of Public Officials.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—An investigation of Attorney-General Daugherty's administration will not be suggested by the Senate at present. Sufficient votes cannot be segregated to direct the initiation of such an inquiry. Interested Senators desire action and not further discussion.

Declaring that President Harding's request that newspaper men "put on the brakes" in criticising public officials tended toward muzzling the press, Senator Stanley, Democrat, Kentucky, this afternoon insisted this never could be accomplished in free America. He sharply rebuked the President for his alleged reference to members of Congress as "blackguards." He maintained that the President and all public officials should welcome admonition and criticism.

Dismissal Demanded.

The prompt dismissal of Rush Holland, assistant to the Attorney-General was demanded by Walsh of Montana, because he recommended that judicial appointments in Hawaii be made in order that they might aid the Republicans in winning a special eletcion to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Delegate Kalanianiole. He contrasted Holland's suggestion with the uterances of Daugherty, who said that nobody but the President and himself must be consulted concerning judicial selections.

The address of Stanley was the first in which the President has been assailed in connection with the Daugherty situation. It resulted from the White House conference yesterday when the President talked with newspaper correspondents. He protested against the giving of prominence to such assaults as that made by Senator Watson of Georgia upon Herbert Hoover and the Russian relief administration.

"I say to the President of the United States," Stanley declared, "that this is not Austria; this is not Prussia; this is the once free America, at least." The President, according to Stanley, would "put the brakes on the press."

Threat Implied.

"Putting on the brakes," Stanley continued "is the next thing to putting on a muzzle, and the statement is an implied threat to the press. Not the President, nor Congress, nor Senate, nor Judges shall shackle or abridge the freedom of the press in the United States while the first amendment to the Constitution is intact and there are men of wisdom and courage ready to defend and maintain it."

Stanley arraigned the Attorney-General bitterly for failing to come to his own defense. He also put into the Record hostile articles from Republican newspapers; he used a story in which the President was described as having taken "a two-fisted fling at political blackguards," as his text.

"Thus far in the controversy in which the Attorney-General has played a conspicuous part," Senator Stanley said, "I have had nothing to say. It is a fact that men of the Attorney-General's own party have made, deliberately made, grave and serious charges against the Hon. Harry M. Daugherty of Ohio, and they have been made against him in his official capacity. He has been charged on the floor of House and Senate repeatedly with offenses so serious, so revolting to every sense of honor and patriotism, that it might be said it was such language as no good man would deserve and no brave man would endure.

Calls Daugherty "Ghoul."

"No civilized country in the world, as I understand it, has been especially careful about trying a ghoul in time of war. It is one kind of summary execution of a quickly deserved death that the civilized countries of the world have inflicted upon those who invade the battlefields to rifle the bodies of the dead. The ghoul, running his cadaverous fingers through the unprotected pockets of a dead soldier is not more a ghoul than a dollar man who rifles the treasury of his country in the same hour of need and peril.

"Daugherty has been charged by men of his own party with using his high office as an official ghoul."

Stanley added that no crime, however vile or repulsive, as it is charged, deters the Attorney-General from "nefarious practices as a common pardon broker." This reference was in connection with the allegations that Daugherty had recommended a pardon for an Ohio millionaire violator of the white slave law.

"I do not make these charges; I am repeating them. Is it possible that we, in this day of bureaucracy, have reached the point when to vest a man with high authority renders him immune from criticism either in or out of Congress; when lese majeste applies to a Cabinet officer? Is it not the duty of the President of the United States to demand of those of his official family that they stand like men and meet aspersion upon their official integrity and on their personal honor? To my utter amazement—I say it in all kindness; I say it in sorrow rather than in anger—we find the head of the United States one hour commending the patience of Lincoln under charges upon himself, recalling to your mind and to mine the amazing tolerance, the amazing moral fortitude of the great father of Democracy, Jefferson, and today, to my utter amazement, using that high office to stifle, if not muzzle, the press."

Assails President.

After reading the article which he had taken as a text, Stanley exclaimed:

"Political blackguards! Who are the political blackguards who are assailing the Attorney-General? There are two members of Congress who yesterday wore, or one of them at least, but I think both—the colors and the uniform of a soldier, eminent Senators representing sovereign states, Ambassadors from two proud Commonwealths. Is it possible that a genial, self-poised, courteous gentleman, occupying this high place, could so far forget himself in his desperate attempt to shield a man who dares not shield himself; to speak for a man who dares not speak for himself: This Republican party, which has existed for nearly a hundred years, a great organization, for the first time dares today to see charge after charge hurled into the teeth of the chief law officer of the United States, and there are none so poor to do him reverence.

"Remembering the pathetic end of the Senator from Indiana (Watson), they dare not speak in his defense less his contestants shall shame them. Will the President, in his desperation, finding no other who dare to say a word for this discredited official, denounce Senators as blackguards who criticise the nefarious and crooked operations of a political broker who makes it a business, it is charged at least, to deceive the chief magistrate of the United States in order that men may despoil women in time of peace and plunder the treasury in time of war? And if one dares express his abhorrence of these unclean and abominable offenses is he a rascal and a blackguard?

"The Attorney-General today in a public interview admonishes those who are seeking the highest offices that some time ago the President agreed 'with me' that in naming Judges they ought to consult 'us'—Harry M. Daugherty and Warren G. Harding, the President of the United States. Twenty-four Judges are shortly to be named and 'you must consult us,' and that is given to the public. Why? As a notice to all who seek a place upon the bench 'do not say anything about Daugherty because Daugherty shadows the Representatives and Senators; Daugherty sleuths are charged with framing up important witnesses and Daugherty is not very apt to give his consent.' 'Us' will not consent to the naming of a Judge who says anything about 'us.'"

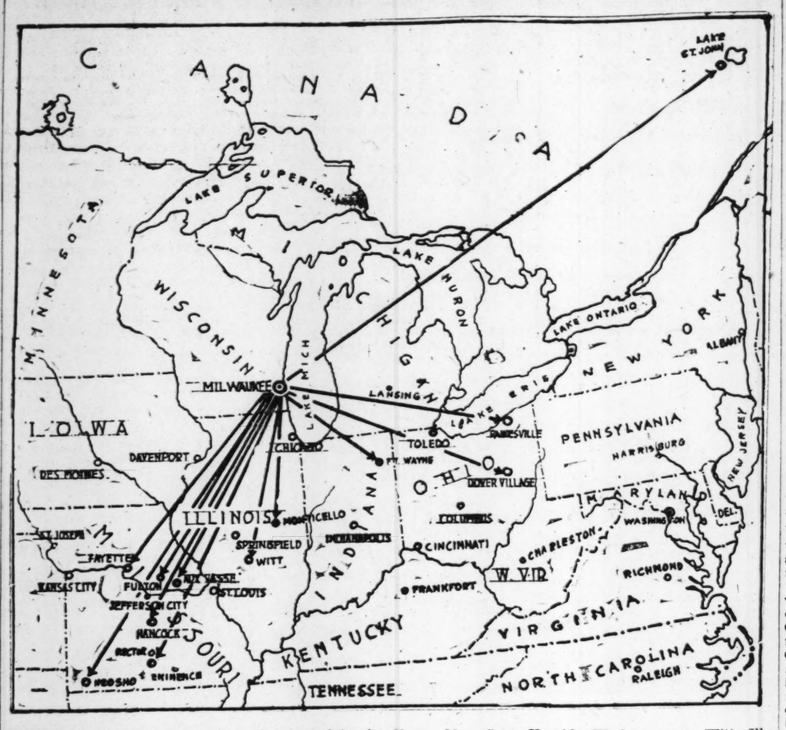
Map Showing Where All the 13 Balloons That Started From Milwaukee Wednesday Landed



MOST of the 13 balloon pilots who started in the national race from Milwaukee wanted to catch air currents that would would take them into Southeastern Canada, to make the greatest distance, but, as shown in this map, eight of them were caught in a "southwestern drift" which brought them down in an area of Missouri and Illinois within a 300-mile radius of St. Louis.

These were Lieut. W. F. Reed, navy, who landed near Rector, Shannon County, Mo.; Capt. H. E. Honeywell of St. Louis, near Neosho, Mo.; Ward T. Van Orman, Fayette, Mo.; Warren Rasor, Fulton, Mo.; Lieutenant-Commander Joseph P. Norfleet, navy, non-contestant, because he used helium gas, Hancock, Pulaski County, Mo.; J. S. McKibben of St. Louis, Aux Vasse, Mo.; Capt. Harold Weeks, army, Witt, Ill.; Capt. John Berry of St. Louis, Monticello, Ill.

Four of the balloons went east, across Lake Michigan, but only one of them, that of Maj. Oscar Westover, army, caught the Canadian air lane. His flight of 900 miles to a point near Lake St. John, Quebec, proved the theory as to the best air currents being in Canada. The others were Bernard Von Hoffmann of St. Louis, near Fort Wayne, Ind.; Lieut. James T. Neely, army, Dover, Ohio., a village; Ralph Upson, Painesville, Ohio.

The remaining balloon, that of Ralph Donaldson, was brought down almost at once after it had started from Milwaukee.

PICTURE HOUSES INVITE MUSICIANS TO RETURN

Managers' Arbitration Plan Includes Returning Orchestras June 12.

A committee of the United Theater Managers, headed by Joseph Mogler, president, last night announced a plan for arbitration of their controversy with the Musicians' Union. Because of a disagreement as to the number of musicians to be employed, and as to the wage scale, practically all moving picture theaters and airdomes have been without orchestra music since May 1.

The committee announced that it desired to set Monday, June 12, as a time for resuming music in the picture houses, pending arbitration of the differences by arbitrators to be selected in the meantime.

The committee's proposal is that the theaters shall put at work, beginning on the 12th, as many musicians as they think needed, and that if the arbitrators shall order them at any time to increase the number, they will do so. They also propose to accept the arbitrators' decision as to wages.

Approval of an editorial in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, headed "How to Get Movie Music," was expressed by the committee. The editorial advocated settlement by arbitration, saying that union labor cannot consistently refuse to arbitrate.

The theater managers have stated that the union's requirements, as to the number of musicians to be employed, work a hardship on the small neighborhood theaters, and that the expense for music at the houses, under the union's requirement, would be out of proportion to the cost of films. The large houses, their managers say, usually hire more men than the union requirement calls for.

FATHER GIVES BLOOD TO SAVE SON, SINKING AFTER OPERATION

Elder Man Suffers No Ill Effects and Other Is Said to Be Improving.

Blood transfused from John C. Coburn, 42 years old, 5861 Plymouth avenue, cashier of the Huttig Sash and Door Co., to his son, William J. Coburn, 23, an attorney, Thursday night, halted a dangerous sinking condition from loss of blood following removal of tonsils Wednesday morning.

The young man is said by physicians to be steadily improving. The father felt no serious ill effects. The son was what physicians call a "bleeding case," and when danger came on so rapidly from loss of blood Thursday that there was no time to seek volunteers, the father offered himself for the operation.

MRS. M'CORMICK DROPS GUARDIANSHIP SUIT

Court Expects Father of Girl to Consider Charges That Swiss Is Fortune Hunter.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 3.—Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, through her counsel, today withdrew her petition opposing Harold F. McCormick as guardian for their daughter, Mathilde McCormick. The proceedings in the Probate Court consumed but a few minutes.

Judge Horne said he would expect McCormick "to take into consideration circumstances brought to the attention of this court," meaning, presumably, Mrs. McCormick's statement that she suspected the Swiss equestrian of being a "fortune hunter."

"I can assure the court that this will be done," said McCormick's attorney, Edwin H. Cassels.

Remarks by the court and counsel for both sides indicated that the McCormicks have reached an agreement, and also that McCormick, who has been appointed his daughter's legal guardian, will withhold his consent to the marriage until full investigation of allegations made by Edith Rockefeller McCormick against Max Oseh may be made.

In his motion, Attorney Cuttling, counsel for Mrs. McCormick, said: "I also withdraw any portion of the answer to his petition for guardianship which prays for injunctive relief."

This meant that merely the paragraph in Mrs. McCormick's answer, which sought to restrain McCormick from giving his consent to the marriage was withdrawn, and that those portions of the answer which consisted of a criticism of Max Oser and his motives in attempting to make the alliance were to stand.

McCormick will discharge his duties, "with fidelity," said his counsel.

"I think so, too," replied the court, "and I expect him to take into consideration what has been brought out by counsel for both sides in this hearing."

WIDOW FILES AS BANKRUPT AFTER DAMAGE JUDGMENT

A Circuit Court judgment for $2000 in favor of a woman who had been injured by an automobile driven by another woman was listed as the principal liability in the latter's voluntary petition in bankruptcy filed yesterday in the Federal Court.

The woman seeking to be declared bankrupt is Mrs. Emma Bryan, a widow, who conducts a rooming house at 4567 Washington boulevard, and the woman who obtained the $2000 judgment against her is Mrs. Frances Carroll, 3416 Humphrey street.

The automobile accident occurred in May, 1920, at Taylor avenue and Delmar boulevard, and Mrs. Carroll, who was severely injured, was awarded a verdict by a jury. Mrs. Bryan lists her total liabilities, including the judgment, at $2226, and her assets at $258.

BALLOON REPORTED LOST IN CANADA LANDS IN MISSOURI

Lieut. W. F. Reed, Last of 13 Entrants in Race to Be Accounted For, Comes Down in Shannon County.

WINS THIRD PLACE WITH 535 MILES

This Assures Naval Pilot of Place on U. S. Team Which Will Be Sent to Switzerland in August.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 3.—Lieut. W. F. Reed, navy balloon pilot and last of 13 entrants in the national race to be accounted for, notified the Wisconsin Aero Club late today that he had landed Friday at 10:55 a. m. six miles south of Rector, Shannon County, Mo.

The lapse of more than 96 hours without word from Lieut. Reed caused Weather Bureau officials in Chicago to say yesterday that they feared he was lost in the wilds of Canada or had met with mishap. A report late yesterday that his balloon had been sighted over Lake Erie, now is appraised as ocular phenomena born of this apprehension for his safety.

The United States Coast Guard here tonight computed Lieut. Reed's flight as 535 miles, giving him third place in the race and a position on the United States team which will be sent to Switzerland for competition in the international balloon race in August.

By Long-Distance Telephone to the Post-Dispatch.

SALEM, Mo., June 3.—"Why worry about me; my wife isn't," Lieut. Reed said to the Post-Dispatch last night when told that uneasiness for his safety had been begun to be felt.

He said that his landing had been easy, after an uneventful flight, which ended only when the last of his ballast was gone and a west wind had begun to subtract from his mileage. His landing, he said, was six miles south of Rector and about 18 miles northwest of Eminence, Mo., or about 115 miles south and a little west of St. Louis.

Came Down in Cornfield.

"We came down in the cornfield on the farm of Charles Welch," Lieut. Welch said, "where there was no telegraph or telephone facilities. Our first demand was sleep after 57 hours in the air, and we slept. Then we loaded our balloon onto a wagon, rode horseback over a two-hour trail to Rector, where we exchanged horses for a Ford and reached Salem."

Lieut. Reed identified his balloon as the one sighted over Alton about 2 p. m. Thursday, and described the course of his flight as follows:

"Reaching Chicago, we began to drift out over Lake Michigan, but came back and after a night in the air found ourselves at 7 a. m. Thursday over Jasper County, Illinois (Jasper County is almost directly east of St. Louis, one county removed from the Indiana line.)

Began to Lose Mileage.

"We then began to lose mileage, drifting northward and westward until we were in central Illinois, where an east wind carried us to the confluence of the Missouri and Mississippi River over St. Charles County, Missouri, about 4 p. m.

"Our bag began to ascend the Missouri Valley and we had considerable difficulty getting away from the river, crossing and recrossing it three times. Eventually we got across over St. Louis County at an altitude of about 10,000 feet and headed southwest over Franklin County. We kept that general direction, following the border between Phelps and Pulaski County, then veering southeast through Texas County and crossing Dent County into Shannon, a drift to the east again. After hanging in a still air for a time, a west wind sprang up, and if we had followed it we would have begun to lose mileage again, so we descended."

Lieut. Reed said that he had released three carrier pigeons during his flight and presumed that they had carried news of him to Chicago. He said his balloon was stocked with a week's provisions and that there was no need for alarm for his safety.

He will arrive in St. Louis today at 9 a. m. and will depart during the day for Chicago. His home and that of his aid, Chief Rigger Kit Mullenax, are from the naval station at Pensacola, Fla.

Results of the national balloon race as they now appear place Maj. Oscar Westover of Washington, an army entry; Capt. H. E. Honeywell of Price road, near Clayton, St. Louis County, and Lieut. Reed as the team which will represent the United States in the international balloon race at Geneva. Their respective mileages based upon preliminary reports, were 900, 555 and 535.

Capt. John Berry, who is 73 years old and began balloon ascents in 1863, returned to St. Louis last night. He landed near Monticello, Ill., Thursday, after a flight of approximately 200 miles. He said last night that his instruments for determining altitude failed to work, making an extended flight dangerous and compelling descent when too vigorous winds were encountered.

All St. Louis pilots have returned. They are, besides Berry and Honeywell, J. S. McKibben, who landed at Auxvasse, Mo., about 100 miles northwest of St. Louis, and Bernard von Hoffman of 3811 Flora place, who landed near Fort Wayne, Ind.

Eight of the 13 Balloons in the race finished within a radius of 300 miles of St. Louis. The winner is computed on an airline mileage.

BOSTON CHOSEN HEADQUARTERS FOR NEW SHOEWORKERS' UNION

St. Louis Delegates to Convention Outside A. F. L., Defeated in Fight for Main Offices.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, June 3.—Despite the exceedingly bitter opposition by delegates from St. Louis, who claimed that the shoe industry of the country is moving westward, the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America in convention session this morning chose Boston as the headquarters for the new organization, which is an amalgamation of shoe workers' unions outside the American Federation of Labor. After statistics had been quoted to show that shoe workers within a radius of 35 miles of Boston were the best organized of any in the United States or Canada, and that this city was and is the center of the shoe and leather industry, the St. Louis delegates, backed by some from Rochester, N. Y., caused a near riot by their protests. The Rochester delegates split, the majority joining forces with New England delegates and voting for the establishment of permanent headquarters in this city.

The committee favoring organization along trade union lines which was agreed in by the delegates.

AUTOS DRIVEN AWAY AFTER BOYS ARE HURT

Kenneth Maurer, 3, in Critical Condition—John McConnell, 9, Also Injured.

Two boys were injured yesterday, one of them critically, by automobiles which were driven away after the accidents and before the identity of the drivers could be learned.

Kenneth Maurer, 3-year-old son of Henry Maurer, who lives on the Lucas and Hunt road, St. Louis County, northwest of Wellston, was critically injured by a touring car which struck him as he was crossing the road in front of his home. His father heard his screams and ran out, but the automobile had been driven away. The child was taken to the Children's Hospital, where he was found to have suffered concussion of the brain, internal injuries and a probable fracture of the skull.

John McConnell, 9, son of Mrs. Ellen McConnell of 498 Forest Park boulevard, was struck at Taylor avenue and Lindell boulevard by a machine occupied by a man and a woman. The machine was stopped and the woman got out and helped the boy to the sidewalk, and then drove away with the man. John was cut and bruised.

He was taken by companions to the school and from there to the home of his grandmother, at 4449 Lindell boulevard. The child was cut and bruised.

Lawrence Schlutvius Jr., four years old, of 7618 Vermont avenue, was knocked down and severely injured at 6:30 o'clock last evening by an automobile driven by Miss Olivia Aulbach, 3708 French avenue, at Michigan avenue and Stein street. The child suffered lacerations of the scalp and was taken home after being attended by a physician.

NEGRO SLAIN IN FIGHT WITH FEED STORE OWNER

William Koehler Says He Fired After Man Attacked Him.

Thomas Dunn, 50, a negro and teamster, of 4327 Kennerly avenue, was shot and killed at 5:45 last evening by William F. Koehler, 61, owner of a feed store at 4207 West St. Ferdinand avenue. Koehler claimed self-defense and exhibited several cuts on the head which, he said were inflicted by Dunn.

Koehler is a prisoner at the city hospital. He said that he and Dunn had engaged in an argument about the price of some feed Dunn had purchased and that the negro threw a scale weight at him. He said he then got a revolver from a feed bin and fired two shots at Dunn as the latter threw additional weights at him. The second bullet struck Dunn in the chest and killed him almost instantly.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS TO TAKE PLACE JUNE 22

Booths to Be Opened Throughout City for Benefit of Eligible Voters.

Registration booths will be open in the 609 precincts of the City Thursday, June 22, from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m. to allow eligible voters who are not now on the registration books and those who since June 22 have reached the age of 21 years, to register.

Registered voters who have moved and voters whose names have been transferred by the Board of Election Commissioners because of the redistricting of wards, may transfer at the City Hall before June 22, or they may register at their polling place on that date.

Because of the redistricting of the wards the Election Board found it necessary to change the voting precincts of 87,000 voters. The Commissioners have ruled that such voters could vote again without registering, but they advised in cards recently sent to these voters that they either come to the City Hall and register before June 22 or go to their new polling place on that day and transfer their names.

There are 309,000 voters' names on the registration books.

Six-Run Rally in 6th Clinches Victory, 9-6; First Place in Sight

Five Runs Behind in Fifth, St. Louisans Win Uphill Battle, After Doak and Sherdel Weaken.

By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PITTSBURG, PA., June 3.—Overcoming a five-run lead and showing a return to their old-time batting form, the Cardinals today made it two straight over the second-place Pirates, winning the final tilt of the series, 9—6. Some fine relief pitching by Bill Pertica, after Doak and Sherdel had been pounded helpless, was the secondary feature of the contest.

As a result of today's victory the Cardinals departed for the East half a game behind the Pirates and only a game and a half behind the leading Giants, who were beaten once more by the Braves. A Pittsburg victory would have put Gibson's men in first place by a small fraction.

For the first five rounds this afternoon Whitey Glazner held the Cardinals. He allowed three hits in this time; but when a hit would have meant a run he was a Gibraltar. But in the 1 t four rounds Rickey's men pounded out 12 safeties. It was the first time on the road that the Cardinals have hit to their real form.

All the athletes are confident they will get on a winning streak at Boston, where they open Monday.

After being held hitless for the first three innings, the Pirates chased Doak in the fourth, Max Carey, former Concordia Seminary star, who always manages to get on base, when opposing St. Louis, started it with a single. Bigbee, after getting the call to 3—1, doubled on the hit-and-run play, Carey scoring. Bigbee counted on Traynor's single after Tierney had flied deep to Smith. Mueller and Grimm continued the assault against Rickey's star spitter with singles, Traynor counting.

With three runs in, and runners on first and second, the S. O. S. brought forth Sherdel. He stopped the Corsairs quickly.

Sherdel Falters.

The Pirates, however; resumed scoring in the fifth, adding two to their total. Stock knocked down Glazner's smash behind third, but the pitcher beat the throw for a single. Maranville sacrificed. Carey followed with a hit, but Glazner stopped at third. Bigbee rolled out, but Tierney tripled, scoring his two mates.

Wide-awake baseball by Jack Smith and an error by Maranville helped the Cardinals in the sixth. It was in this round that Rickey's men showed their real punch for the first time since the club has been away from home.

A decision by Umpire Hart, when he declared a man out, when Traynor caught a foul that was about to fall into the stand, helped swell the total in this round. Eleven Cardinals went to bat and seven of them hit safely.

Smith opened with a safe bunt and when second was left unguarded he promptly stole second. Fournier, Hornsby, McHenry, Clemons and Flack singled, while Stock reached first when Maranville dropped Tierney's assist. It was after Flack's hit that the play on Smith came. Of course, the Cardinals kicked; but as is always the case in matters of this kind, the umpire's word went. Fournier followed with a drive which Bigbee caught while leaning against the left field fence. Adams replaced Glazner during the assault, after Clemons had hit.

Bad Round for Hornsby.

Aided by Hornsby's error—he should have had two—the Pirates tied it in their portion against Pertica. One out, Grimm singled. Gooch hit to Hornsby and both runners were safe on Rogers' low throw. Adams followed with a roller that went right through Hornsby's hands and was ruled a hit. Grimm scoring. Maranville walked, filling the bases, but Carey fanned and Bigbee flied out.

With two gone in the eighth, Flack caught the Corsair infield flat-footed and bunted safely down the third base line. Smith worked the ball to 3—2 and doubled to left, Flack scoring. It was at this time that the score showing that the Braves had again defeated the Giants was posted and there were cheers among the groans.

Our old pal, Earl Hamilton, got in the ninth when Hornsby singled, stole second and scored on McCarey's double. Lavan's ace counted McCarey with the final tally.

Walter Mueller, St. Louis boy, replaced Fournier of an extra base hit and the Cardinals of a run with a sensational catch of Jack's drive, while leaning against the center field fence in the first round.

Marvin Goodwin, pitcher, who returned to the club this spring and has made a good impression in the south, yesterday was released to the Toledo club. Goodwin had been offered to the Nationals and Athletics, but neither wanted the flinger.

The Cardinals play the Hewitt team, a semi-pro aggregation, in an exhibition game at Buffalo, tomorrow. Monday they open their Eastern stand against the Braves in Boston. When Stallings' men visited St. Louis they won four straight from Rickey's club.

Pitchers Bill Doak, Bill Sherdel and Bill Pertica went straight to Boston in order to rest up for the Eastern jaunt. Jeff Pfeffer's 417 innings.)

Reds Win 3d Straight.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Cincinnati made it three straight from Chicago today by bunching their hits behind a base on balls and winning, 4 to 2. Cavaney started the scoring for the visitors by driving the ball into the left field bleachers for a home run, his second in two days. Great fielding by Cavaney, Pinelli and Daubert robbed the locals of a number of hits.

LANDIS CONSENTS TO READ BRIEFS ATTACKING RULING IN COAST CASE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3.—Judge K. M. Landis, High Commissioner of Baseball, will give consideration to the legal briefs to be submitted in behalf of the Portland club bearing on the question of whether Landis exceeded his authority in ordering the disbarment of W. H. Klepper and James Brewster from connection with the Portland club for a long period.

President William H. McCarthy of the Pacific Coast League, today received a telegram from Landis which read:

"Thanks for your telegram. Of course will give consideration to anything the parties may desire to present."

Manion, With 70, Tops Field In District Golf Tournament

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

James S. Manion, a self-made golfer who learned the fine points of the game among the ditches, thickets and scrubby greens of the Forest Park course, and who associated with professionals only on the other end of pupils' slices and hooks, led a fast field of 246 stars, dubs and duffers in the qualifying round of the St. Louis District Golf Association at Bellerive Country Club yesterday. Jimmy stroked the sleek course in 70, two below par and two over the course record which he established on Decoration Day.

Second to Manion was his former associate of the public course, Richard E. Bockenkamp, now representing Midland Valley with Manion. Bockenkamp, District champion last year by virtue of his victory in the final over Manion, shot the 18 holes in 73, and is considered one of the most dangerous rivals of Manion, who is favored to win the district title this season.

Scores generally were low. Until the last few minutes it appeared that several players who finished with 81 would have to play off the tie. But as the shades of night were beginning to fall Jim Westbury of Triple A came in with a 79 and Nolan Hussey of the Country Club registered his 78, which crowded the 81 shooters into class A. The caliber of the scores can be judged by the fact that it took 84 to stay in Class A and 87 to stay in the tournament, Class B being the lowest flight.

Eddie Held Fails to Qualify.

There were a few disappointments but no surprising upsets in the form. Tim Moriarty of Kirkwood failed to gain a place in the championship flight and so did Andy McCreary. Public course followers felt sorry that Eddie Held was crowded out. Eddie has been very much on his game, but he wandered from the straight and all too narrow several times and he was one of them who stood around waiting to learn that 81 was just one stroke too many.

There were the usual hard luck stories and facts. Manion came to the eighteenth green with a chance for a 69 and missed an 18-inch putt. Frank Montgomery, straight shooter from Triple A went out in 38, missing short putts which, had they been sunk, would have given him a 34 for his outward journey.

On the other side of the ledger

Vangilder Falters in Ninth, With Two Down And the Score a Tie

Pat Collins Hits Homer in Sixth, With Two Men On, Overcoming a White Sox Lead of Three Runs.

By Joseph F. Holland,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

A hush of expectancy descended upon the packed stand at Sportsman's Park, yesterday, when Elam Russell Vangilder led the Browns into the ninth inning, tied with the Chicago White Sox at four all. The hush graduated into a suppressed cheer when the first two batters succumbed without much ado. Then the 12,000 crowd prepared a vocal crescendo for the approaching death of the ninth inning "jinx," which has tripped the towering Brownie on the threshold of victory four times this year.

But the cheer died unborn. The "jinx" flashed upon the field with two out, and the Sox crashed out three hits which compelled Vangilder's retirement and refulsed the Browns, 5 to 4.

Had Vangilder been able to achieve the third out without damage, the Browns might have been only a half game out of first place this morning. Boston's victory over New York was wasted, all because of that elusive ninth inning "jinx."

Raymond Schalk, one of baseball's niftiest catchers, began the notable ninth with a fly to Williams. Earl Sheely bounced a scorching drive off Vangilder's glove, which transformed itself into an out through the rapid recovery of McManus and his speedy throw to Sisler.

One batter, Eddie Mulligan, a St. Louisan and all that, stood between Elam Russell Vangilder and a clean slate. Eddie allowed a wide curve to pass unnoticed, but laid right lustily upon the next pitch for a single to center. It was but the signal gun of he barrage and the cheer on 12,000 lips turned to a groan.

Wrong Place for the Slow Ball.

Harry Courtney, Vangilder's opponent of the slab, was the next batter. The baseball primer says pitchers are never dangerous in the pinch and so Vangilder and Severeid set out to toy with Harry. The first two pitches resulted in an even break for the hurler and hitter. Then Van wound up with great ado. His arm flashed down and a slow, tantalizing, knuckle ball floated on its way to the plate. Courtney stepped up, met it squarely upon the signature of Ban Johnson and whistled it to right centerfield for two bases.

Before Bill Jacobson encased the sphere with his huge hands, Mulligan was wheeling past third on to the plate with the decisive run. And Eddie continued onward until his sweeping slide carried him over the pentagon. The "jinx" had accomplished his work; the Browns were beaten. But he was not yet through with Vangilder. Harry Hooper, the next hitter, singled to left, and Van walked to the bench for the fifth time this year with the derisive, inangible "jinx" pacing him, step by step.

That ninth inning surge of disaster ruined the whole afternoon and almost caused the populace to forget Dave Danforth's first real pitching of the year and Pat Collins' pinch-hit home run drive. These two incidents, when you look back over the nine innings, are the only bits of consolation that one can draw from the fifth visitation of the "jinx."

Danforth did not make his appearance until Bill Bayne, the first Brown hurler, found himself in the midst of a storm-tossed area in the third frame. Bill retired

Four "Big Ten" Marks Lowered as Illinois Captures Title Meet

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., June 3.—Scoring in thirteen of the sixteen events, the well-balanced University of Illinois team repeated its triumph of 1921 in the Western Conference outdoor track and field championship meet today by winning the meet with an overwhelming total of 59 6-14 points. Iowa was second with 24 1-35 points, Minnesota third with 23 1-10, Notre Dame fourth with 22 13-14 and Ames fifth with 22 points.

Four conference records were smashed, one was tied and Illinois cracked the fifth record in winning the one-mile relay race, but the record was not allowed as the Gold and Blue team was disqualified for alleged roughness. The race was given to Iowa and the time was withdrawn. The Illini quartette won the race in 3:20, beating the former record of 3:21 4-5 established by Chicago in 1915.

The conference record for the 100-yard dash which has stood for 19 years, was shattered when Bill Hayes of Notre Dame, former national A. A. U. dash champion, ran the distance in :9 7-10, beating the former record of :9 4-5 established by C. A. Blair of Chicago in 1905. Hayes won easily, but Leonard Paulu, the Grinnell sprinter, was pressed hard for second honors. Eric Wilson of Iowa, pulled up in third place with Moorehead of Ohio fourth.

Angier a Wonder With the Javelin.

Milton Angier of Illinois, holder of the American javelin record, who broke the conference record in the preliminaries yesterday with a throw of 195 feet 4¾ inches, set a better record today when he won with a toss of 196 feet 11 inches. Hoffman of Michigan held the former record of 178 feet 4 inches, made a year ago.

Harold Osborne of Illinois, and Johnny Murphy of Notre Dame, who tied for first place honors in the running high jump, set a new conference record and came close to an American amateur record when they went over the bar at 6 feet, 5 11-16 inches. The former conference record of 6 feet 7⅞ inches was made a year ago by Murphy.

Lloyd Rathbun of Ames, entered the record-breaking class when he won the two-mile race in 9m. 27s., after a thrilling race with Wharton of Illinois, at the finish. The former record was 9m. 29 3-5s., made by C. J. Stout of Chicago in 1916. Furnas, the Purdue star, led for the first three laps, being closely pressed by Wharton and Rathbun. Furnas found the pace too hot for him and quit as the runners started the final lap. Wharton shot into the lead, but after coming around the final turn, Rathbun came abreast of the Illinois runner and outgamed him in the last five yards.

Brookins' Final Spurt Wins.

C. R. Brookins of Iowa tied the 220-yard low hurdles mark of 23 4-5s. in winning that event by a safe margin from Anderson of Minnesota, through a sprint after leaping over the last barrier. Brookins and Anderson came down the field together, but the Iowa hurdler had the better finishing qualities.

Arthur Wolter of Ames regarded as the best middle distance runner in the Missouri Valley conference, was the highest individual point winner of the day, winning both the 440- and 880 yard races. Osborne was next in line with 9½ and Paulu, the Grinnell sprinter, third with 9. After beating out Fessenden of Illinois in the 440-yard dash, Wolter came back and scored his second triumph when he won the 880-yard dash in a wild finish. The Ames star was up among the leaders from the start, run abreast of Yates of Illinois for several yards, and then sprinted ahead, taking the pole just before the last bend. Yates faded out in trying to keep the pole, and Higgins, also of Ames, finished in second place. The time was 1m. 55s.

In the one mile run won by Patterson of Illinois, Ferguson of Ohio State led the field of 14 starters for the first lap and a half, but was passed by Patterson, who retained the lead until the finish, although Wells, a teammate, was only a yard behind him at the tape.

Browns' Pinch Home-Run Hitter

Pat Collins, of the Browns, not only pinch hits, but he pinch-nits homers. In Philadelphia, Pat "pinched" a four-base clout. Again, yesterday, Pat batted for Danforth, clouting a homer with two men on the sacks, tying the game.

32 Golfers Turn in Scores Of 80 or Lower at Bellerive there were some fortunate breaks. E. C. Atkins turned in the only eagle of the day by holing a long mashie pitch for a two on the 295-yard fifth hole, a par four. He finished with 77.

Don Anderson Shoots 76.

Donald Anderson, still in his teens, was the youngest golfer to qualify in the championship class. He was paired with Jimmy Manion and the youngster stood up well under the fast pace set by the medalist, finishing with 76.

Stuart and Arthur Stickney of the Country Club, members of the "golf trust" of long ago, were under 80, Arthur being one of the last to finish and helping to crowd the 81's out of the title flight.

Clarence L. Wolff, medalist in many a tournament, and one of the favorites in the betting, shot 74 and gained a place at the bottom of the lower bracket in the pairings. Wolff was driving them in fine style. Every one of his wooden club shots were straight down the middle and far and had his short game been as good he would have crowded Manion even more closely.

Mason Scudder of the Country Club was in rare form and his medal of 74 attracted much attention. He is new to the championship flight, but has been playing consistently well all spring.

The course is in splendid condition. Many of the fairways are narrow, with all sorts of trouble on either side, but if a man keeps in the middle he has a splendid chance to make a low score. The greens, particularly, are like billiard tables, so smooth have they been kept. The condition of the grass is a tribute to the greenskeeping skill of Professional Bob Foulis, who knows every blade of grass by its first name.

Manion, Bockenkamp and Wolff Separated in Tourney Pairings

Pairings in the championship class, arranged on the basis of scores, have Jimmy Manion at the top and Roger Lord and Mason Scudder at the bottom of the upper bracket. Dick Bockenkamp tops the lower bracket, with Clarence Wolff at the bottom of the list.

Lawson Watts, one of the favorites, has a tough road ahead of him. In the first round he tackles Willie Mertz of the St. Clair Country Club. Mertz is not much of a stylist, but he gets results. His amateur standing was questioned last year, but he was restored to the ranks and represents the hilly country club near Bellerive. If Watts eliminates Mertz he takes on Nolan Hussey or Clark Johnston, and then must face Manion, who should dispose easily of Spencer Olin of Alton and either E. C. Atkins or L. C. Smith.

Anderson Always Dangerous.

Lord and Scudder should meet in the second round and should find Donald Anderson ready to tackle him in the third round. Anderson can play a brilliant game and it should be interesting when he meets the veteran Lord, if both come through as they should.

Manion, Lord and Watts then should settle the supremacy in the upper half of the pairings. In the lower half there will be some lively battles. Right off the bat or off the driver, it should be said, Bockenkamp meets a worthy foe in Karl Bock of Sunset, who despite an utter lack of orthodox style, shoots a dangerous game. His stance, swing, iron game and putting all are according to his own notion, but he gets results and is considered one of the best players in the district. Frank Montgomery, Chris Kenney, Stuart Stickney and Clarence Wolff are others who make the lower bracket a hot place.

16-Year-Old Bike Rider Beats Vets In Handicap Race

Carl Tegler, With a Two-Minute Handicap, Captures Ten-Mile Handicap.

Carl Tegler, 16 years old, and an unattached rider, surprised spectators at Fairground Park, yesterday, by winning two of the three bike races held there under the auspices of the Century Cycling Club.

The Century riders were successful in winning time prizes in two races. Lou Droz won the senior scratch event, while Ed Conrad won the time prize in the 10-mile handicap race.

In the first event, a mile and one quarter juvenile race, Tegler nosed out Felix Bonzon and Glendale Kribs by less than a wheel's length. The time was 3m. 5s.

The second event proved to be the day's thriller. It was the mile and one-quarter senior scratch race and was won by Lou Droz, who beat Martin and Frillman by so close a margin that it was hard to determine the winner. The time was 3m. 45s.

The third event was a 10-mile handicap race and proved interesting. There were 30 riders, all in good condition. Carl Tegler, the first place winner with a 2-minute handicap, was closely followed by Otto Nelson and W. Pennell.

Another surprise of the day came when Conrad won the time prize. Conrad was followed by Droz and A. C. Nelsen in the order named. The time was 25m. 10s.

The order of finish was as follows:

Three Big Races For 3-Year-Olds On Season's Card

Morvich Can Carry Winnings Over $200,000-Mark by Capturing Two Races.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 3.—This is truly a year of golden harvest for thoroughbreds of the 3-year-old division.

In addition to the Kentucky Derby, at Churchill Downs, and the Preakness, at Pimlico, each of which had an added value of $50,000, they still have two more stakes of equal worth—the Belmont and the Kentucky Special—to run for, while the Latonia Derby, with its $15,000 in added money falls right in behind this pair. Never before did horses of this age have such opportunities to earn so vast an amount, and the presence of these stakes on the records of the various racing associations indicates the healthy condition of the sport in America at the present time.

The Kentucky Special holds the most interest of any of the coming big events due to the fact that Morvich will be numbered among the starters. Incidentally it will in all probability mark the first clash of the year between the recent Kentucky Derby winner and Snob II, for which J. S. Cosden recently paid John Sanford $85,000. Morvich is ineligible for the Belmont, but Snob II was named for it, and unless the unforeseen happens between now and June 17 he has it at his mercy.

Anxious for Test.

Owner Cosden is anxious that his new acquisition try conclusions with Ben Block's unbeaten champion, and the Latonia track, the scene of the Kentucky Special, will be the battleground. Block is just as desirous that Morvich get all that is coming to him in the way of hard tests from horses of his own age, and he is quoted as saying that his most sincere hope is that Snob II will be among those to dispute the issue with his great colt in the rich Milldale affair.

Should Morvich prove successful in both the Kentucky Special and Latonia Derby, which will be run on June 24 and July 1, respectively, he will be the third American horse to enter the hall of fame of thoroughbreds with purse earnings of $200,000 or more. Block is anxious that the son of Runnymede—Hymir do everything that any other horse ever accomplished, and this pair of stakes fit in nicely toward his conquest of the $200,000 mark.

Coming as it does, six weeks later than the Kentucky Derby, the Kentucky Special will find many 3-year-olds in far more advanced condition than was the case when the Churchill Downs classic was decided, and several of those which figured as contenders in that event and failed to start because of some mishap or another, will be ready for the flag then. Trainer James Rowe of the Harry Payne Whitney stable expects to have one or more of his best representatives ready as they have all about recovered from their recent indisposition. The same is true of James W. McClelland, manager of Edward F. Simms' thoroughbred interests. He is working on Lucky Hour in an effort to have him ready for the big Latonia affair and he is confident that both he and My Play will be at their best by June 24.

Bradley Entry Back.

While the East will have by far the strongest representation in both the Special and the Derby, the Kentuckians will not dodge the issue in the least. E. R. Bradley, whose Bet Mosie finished second to Morvich in the Kentucky Derby, will name this colt and several others for the $50,000 added stake. He is not satisfied yet that Morvich towers much over Bet Mosie, and he wants to take another run at him. The Special is over the distance of one and one-quarter miles, the same route as the Kentucky Derby, while the Latonia Derby is at one and one-half miles. The Bradley colt has demonstrated that long distance is his forte, and he will have ample opportunities to display his best wares here.

Nominations for the Kentucky Special will close on June 12, General Manager Matt J. Winn of the Kentucky Jockey Club says that he has the assurance of the leading sportsmen of the East that they will do their utmost to make the race all that it should be, and the Westerners can always be depended upon in this respect. In the event that it proves a success this season it will become a permanent stake on the Latonia spring list, and the turfmen realize what a big things this means to racing.

In addition to its $50,000 in added money, the Kentucky Special carries with it a gold cup, and Manager Winn has promised that this trophy will surpass anything of its kind from a standpoint of beauty, ever before offered by a racing association anywhere.

This great French bred 3-year-old recently won the Withers Stakes at a mile in 1:35 4-5, Man o' War's record for this event. In winning he defeated Pillory, winner of the $50,000 Preakness Stakes. Pillory also equaled a Man o' War record when he captured the Preakness, a fact which adds to the luster of Snob II's victory.

J. S. Cosden, owner of Snob II, paid $85,000 for him shortly before the Withers Stakes was run. Snob II is engaged in the Belmont Stakes and the Latonia Special, both $50,000 events. In the last named he is expected to meet the unbeaten Morvich.

In this race will be Pillory, whatever horse wins the Belmont, Harry Whitney's great horses (Bunting, Olympus and perhaps Rocket and Whiskaway) and other leading 3-year-olds. Morvich will carry 131 pounds in this race.

Capt. Alcock Wins Classic Suburban From Small Field

By Leased Wire From the New York World and Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—"Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons enjoyed a proud moment at Belmont Park today, where an enthusiastic crowd of close to 20,000 braved the rain to see the Quincy stable's Capt. Alcock beat Flying Cloud, Mad Hatter, Georgie, an added starter, and Sennings Park in the thirty-sixth running of the historic and much sought suburban handicap.

"Sunny Jim," or "Fitz," as they call James Fitzsimmons, trainer of the Quincy stable horses, saved Capt. Alcock to racing when his owner, keenly disappointed over many poor performances, had definitely decided to give him away or in any case to send him into retirement at R. Lawrence Smith's farm on Long Island.

Only five horses went to the post, a small field for such a fixture. Georgie was added at the last minute in the hope that he might do what Audacious, his stable companion, did in retirement, did a year ago. He was in the thick of the fight most of the way, but was not good enough.

The track was deep in mud and the conditions were distinctly unfavorable for a race of such value and prominence, and yet it provided a struggle which kept the big crowd on its toes.

Georgie and Sennings Park made the early running, with Mad Hatter third and the other two trailing, but always within easy striking distance. Rounding the turn, a quarter of a mile from home, Mad Hatter moved up and took command, but his lead was short lived. His heavy impost of 130 pounds and the sticky mud proved a heavy handicap.

Hot Fight Down the Stretch.

At the head of the stretch Capt. Alcock rushed up strongly on the outside, while Flying Cloud came through on the rail, and in less time than it takes to tell it these two were fighting it out with the early pacemakers spent, dizzy and utterly tired.

It looked for a moment as if Flying Cloud would come on to win, but Capt. Alcock had plenty left and right at the end he won cleverly in the amazingly fast time, considering the condition of the track, of 2m, 5 2-5s. Flying Cloud was an easy second, while Mad Hatter barely outlasted Georgie for third money.

Three years ago the Quincy Stable bought Capt. Alcock from John E. Madden, but almost from the first the horse was a bitter disappointment. One day, just as his owner had decided to give him away or send him into retirement, Fitzsimmons discovered that he "corded up" badly, after working or racing; and believing that he had solved the mystery of many poor races, insisted that he get another trial.

The clever trainer went about correcting the troubles and for his pains, patience and persistence he now has a Suburban Handicap winner in his barn.

Flying Cloud deserved almost equal credit with the winner. Through the luck of the race he was in the deepest going most of the way, and while he saved some ground at the head of the stretch he did so at the expense of being where the footing was most insecure. Some heretofore have questioned his class, but he established this today, even though he had a pull in the weights.

Capt. Alcock was bred by John E. Madden. He is a 5-year-old horse by Ogden-Mallard. He had quite a pull in the weights and for this reason and his known liking for the mud, he went to the post favorite over Mad Hatter, so that his victory was distinctly popular.

INDIANS LOSE MANAGER AND LEADING CATCHERS; ALL ON THE SICK LIST

CLEVELAND, O., June 3.—Tris Speaker, manager and center fielder of the Cleveland Americans, was ordered to bed by the club physician as the result of an attack of bronchitis. The doctor said he would be out of the game for several days.

Time—2:05 2-5.

Description: Capt. Alcock, on the outside all the way, moved up on turn, went to the front after turning for home and won under wraps. Flying Cloud ran a surprisingly good race. Mad Hatter ran a good mile, then quit; did not like the track. Georgie and Sennings Park quit after forcing early pace.

Startle First in $10,000 Filly Race

Forty-Eighth Renewal of Kentucky Oaks Sees Gameness of Hewitt Entry Tested.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 3.—Startle, the Chestnut filly owned by the H. H. Hewitt stable, won the 48th renewal of the Kentucky Oaks, $10,000 added, at Churchill Downs this afternoon in a driving finish with Martha Fallon, Jefferson Livingston's latest acquisition. It was a hard drive throughout and the Hewitt filly proved gamest at the end. Precious Lula made a strong bid for place in the stretch and was a good third.

Bonus, Mrs. Payne Whitney's filly, made a good effort for her many backers, but tired before the mile was covered and finished far back. Margaret Windsor showed a good performance and finished fourth. Both Startle and Martha Fallon were the pacemakers, and held all the rest at a safe distance throughout. Startle was the favorite and paid her backers slightly more than even money.

The time at mile and one-eighth was 1:52 3-5.

Michigan Coach Says Athletics Cannot Survive Without High Standard.

Resolution Opposes Participation of College Students in Professional Activities.

ANN ARBOR, June 3.—Declaring amateurism in athletics cannot continue to exist in colleges and Universities unless student athletes are prevented from engaging in professional sports, Coach Fielding H. Yost of the University of Michigan, voices his objection to permitting college athletes to become professionals in any line of sport during the vacation periods.

Coach Yost is chairman of the Western Conference committee that recently went on record as opposed to participation, on the part of college athletes, in professional activities.

"There can be no compromise between amateur and professional activities," Coach Yost said. "Either the two must be kept distinct, or amateurism will be swallowed up.

Argument Unsound.

"Nearly all those favoring a compromise declare a student should be permitted to play baseball during summer months for money with which to continue his education. The argument is advanced that these players would be amateurs in spirit while playing professional baseball and using only temporarily their athletic skill for gain.

"Much more is at stake, however, than permitting college athletes to play for money during the summer. If this practice were permitted it would be but a short time until our college teams would be composed of a more or less isolated group of professional athletes. The days of high class amateur athletics as an important part of every student's life and an activity in which every student would have an equal opportunity with each other student would be passed.

Detrimental Influence.

"The influence of professionalism is, in itself, detrimental to a college man. It tends to make him dissatisfied to play the game for its own sake and makes his athletic powers a marketable commodity, rather than a means of recreation and self-expression.

"Sacrifice of self to a group or institution for attainment of a common goal is the first lesson taught by athletics. This means co-operation, team play, loyalty and service. The qualities of determination, will power, persistence and courage, both physical and moral, nowhere can be better learned than on the athletic field."

What Do You Know?
—about auto mechanics

What are you going to do about it? You know that these are facts:

—that the men walking the streets today looking for jobs, are largely the untrained men—that the men who have steady work at good pay are the trained men.

This is especially true in automobile trades. If there was ever a time that showed you the need and value of thorough traiuing, that time certainly is now. Go to any garage and auto shop, and apply for a job, and see what they say. It is this, every time: "Are you a TRAINED mechanic?"

In the past nearly anybody could get a job as a helper, and take a chance of learning the trade while working. But nowadays the garage and repair shop won't "take a chance" with such men. They want trained men—men who know what to do, and how to do, before they start to work. They are willing to pay much higher wages for such men, and they're doing it.

These are absolute facts, as you can prove by merely going out and applying for a job. That puts a bigger premium than ever on the trained man.

This school is nationally recognized in the automobile field as one of the foremost auto trade schools in America. It is backed by members of the Auto Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association themselves, and organized to train men for the automobile field. The highest standards of complete instruction are maintained.

We furnish one instructor to every 15 men. Our instructors are all expert practical automobile service men of long experience. The course includes actual commercial repair work in our service garage.

30,000 square feet equipped with the latest type of equipment for auto trade instruction. The thorough training of our graduates is so recognized among automobile men that a certificate from this school practically means a sure job at good pay. Day courses from 6 to 16 weeks. Night classes 10 to 32 weeks. Tuition only $35 to $100.

All New York's East Side Mobilizes To Celebrate Editor Abraham Cahan's 40th Year in the United States

Romantic Story of the Poor Jewish Immigrant Boy Who Has Become the Most Powerful Publicist of His People.

NEW YORK, June 3.

IT took Abraham Cahan seven weeks to come from Velish, Russia, to New York. It was 10 years later before he arrived in the United States. He landed here, territorially, on June 6, 1882. The whole East Side, it seems, is now mobilizing to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of that landing. But Abraham Cahan, undoubtedly the most influential Jewish leader in this country and editor of the greatest Jewish newspaper in the world, does not confuse that landing with his discovery of America. He came to the East Side, as thousands of his countrymen had come before him; and he stuck there, as his countrymen in those days were wont to do. The East Side in the '80s, whatever mandate the American Government may have claimed concerning it, was anything but American.

Cahan was a Russian, a Socialist and a Jew. It was expected of a Russian in that period that he live as the other Russians lived and that a Jew should spend his days in living and arguing with Jews. A Socialist, however, was privileged to divide his time between arguing with non-Socialists and with other Socialists. The latter arguments, however, were always the more intense. Young Cahan from the very first was a rebel and an innovator. It occurred to him that if the Socialists were going to establish Socialism in America, the people who lived in America ought to be told about it. He was the first Jewish Socialist who ever made a Socialist speech in English in the United States.

ABRAHAM CAHAN.

Different in America.

But that speech did not Americanize him. It occurred only a year or so after his landing; and, take Mr. Cahan's word for it, it wasn't much of a speech. His English was not good and his knowledge of American psychology was somewhat worse. In addition to that, he was slightly handicapped by not knowing what Socialism was. He hardly knew whether he was a Socialist or an anarchist. But he was a revolutionist—he was sure about that—and it was up to a revolutionist to revolute. The speech was undoubtedly revolutionary, but the revolution, for some reason or other, kept being postponed.

"The big trouble with me," Mr. Cahan explained, "was that I didn't know anything. I had been educated in Russia, and I was an ardent reader of books. I tried hard to keep abreast of all the theories afloat. But I didn't know anything about anything that mattered. I was a Russian; therefore I was a realist. And because I was a realist, I had nothing to do with realities. The Russians weren't allowed to deal with realities. The Czar attended to all that. The Russian couldn't vote. He couldn't even express his political preferences; and, economically, his status was fixed. He lived outwardly as he was told to live. Inwardly he boiled and burned, and all of his repressed activities were put into art and literature.

Takes Up Literature.

"In America," Mr. Cahan continued, "the people were accustomed to action. When they didn't like a government they voted it out of power. When they didn't like their jobs they tried something else. With the fullest opportunity to criticise, they lost all zest for criticism. They dealt with realities seven days a week. They didn't always deal with them intelligently, to be sure, but they dealt with them. They were surfeited with them. They longed at times to run away from them, especially at those times when they sat down to read a book. Their constant absorption in realities gave them little opportunity to dream; but when they wrote or read books they made up for that. The Russian novel, therefore, was an intensely realistic thing. The American story book was as unlike life as the happy ending could make it. One was the result of repressed activities, the other the result of repressed desire."

Young Cahan began to sense this difference early in his New York Socialistic career. He didn't do anything about it for several years, but, Russian-wise, he thought about it. He theorized about it. He made it the subject of intensive criticism. And within the Socialist movement he constantly put forth the theory that the Socialists couldn't make much progress in America until they discovered what America was. He was called an opportunist, a half-way Socialist. The more consecrated disciples of freedom continually prosecuted him for heresy. It was claimed that he had been unfaithful to Karl Marx, that he didn't understand surplus value as it should be understood, that the first thing you knew he would be denying class consciousness or maybe sinning against the materialistic conception of history. These were terrible charges for a sensitive Russian Socialist to hear and young Cahan protested his innocence. He was a Marxian—he was insistent upon that. But still there was a difference—and he couldn't help admitting it—between his point of view and that of his antagonists. Often he wearied of the controversy. To tell the truth, he had another love.

That other love was literature. Not the sort of "literature" which the comrades were distributing from door to door, but literature which didn't necessarily have anything to do with Socialism; literature which didn't have to be orthodox; literature which had only to be true—poems, plays, novels, stories of people as they are, stories of life as it is lived, with not even a postscript telling whom to vote for or advertising the superior advantages of the co-operative commonwealth. Today Abraham Cahan knows that there was no essential conflict between his social passion as exemplified in the Socialist movement and his longing for things that lay far outside. But in those days he had to choose. If he were loyal to Socialism she would require all his energy. If he flirted with literature the charmer might lure him permanently from the path of rectitude.

Meets William Dean Howells.

He did as might have been expected under the circumstances. He obeyed the call to duty. He took Socialism for better or for worse. He became an organizer of the Socialist Labor party and broke with Daniel de Leon to help organize the seemingly more American Socialist party. He had been editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, a Socialist weekly, and later became editor of the Jewish Daily Forward when it was first launched 25 years ago. And having married the Socialist movement, as it were, it may be presumed that literature ceased to trouble him. But realists know better than that. Literature charmed him far more than ever. He dreamed of her. He worshiped her. He read all the latest offerings in Russian, French and German. He even dipped into the American literature of the time and was astonished at the discovery he made. And all the while he wrote

WITHIN WILSON'S WAR CABINET

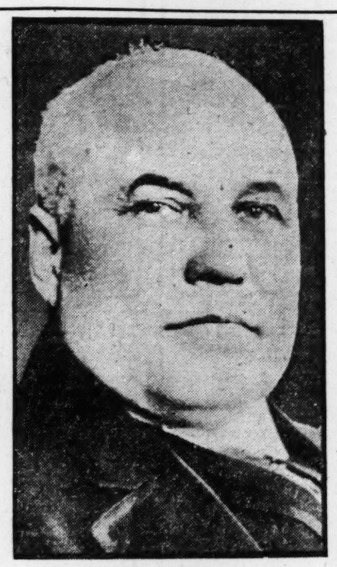
Letters of the Late Secretary Lane Throw Light on Discussions That Preceded Declaration of Hostilities

Written to His Brother and Just Published, They Reveal How Reluctant the Executive Was to Appeal to Arms Against Germany and How He Obstinately Resisted the Urging of Some Members of His Council to Make Common Cause With the Allies.

Holder of the Interior Portfolio Complained That Cabinet Members Were Kept in the Dark on What Our Policy Was to Be and That the War Message, Even After It Had Been Written, Was Withheld From Them Though They Fully Supported Him.

GREAT mystery still veils the deliberations of President Wilson's Cabinet during the days that preceded the entry of the United States into the World War. Considerable light, however, is now thrown on them by the publication in the World's Work, a monthly magazine, of a collection of letters written by Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, to his brother, George. In writing the letters, he enjoined upon his brother to keep them as memoranda to be used later by him in refreshing his recollection of the details of the events recorded therein.

Lane retired from the Cabinet a year before the end of the administration, having served seven of the eight years of the Wilson regime. He became attorney and adviser for an oil corporation. He died in May, 1921, following a surgical operation to give him relief from a disease that had troubled him for years. Parts of the installment of the letters published in the June number of World's Work are reproduced herewith by special arrangement with that magazine.



THE LATE FRANKLIN K. LANE.

—Copyright by Clinedinst, Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9, 1917.

My Dear George:

I am going to write you in confidence some of the talks we have at the Cabinet and you may keep these letters in case I ever wish to remind myself of what transpired. A week ago yesterday (Feb. 1) the word came that Germany was to turn "mad dog" again and sink all ships going within her war zone. This was the question, of course, taken up at the meeting of the Cabinet on Feb. 2. The President opened by saying that this notice was an "astounding surprise." He had received no intimation of such a reversal of policy. Indeed, Zimmermann, the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, had within 10 days told Gerard that such a thing was an "impossibility." At this point Lansing said that he had good reason to believe that Bernstorff had the note for fully 10 days before delivering it, and had held it off because of the President's peace message to Congress, which had made it seem inadvisable to deliver it then. In answer to a question as to which side he wished to see win, the President said that he didn't wish to see either side win—for both had been equally indifferent to the rights of neutrals—though Germany had been brutal in taking life and England only in taking property. He would like to see the neutrals unite. * * * We talked the world situation over. The fact that Russia had been, but a short time since, on the verge of an independent peace with Germany was brought out as evidencing the possibility of a break on the allies' side. His conclusion was that nothing should be done now—awaiting the "overt" by Germany which would take him to Congress to ask for power. (On Feb. 3 the President addressed Congress announcing the severance of relations.)

At the next meeting of the Cabinet on Feb. 6 the main question discussed was whether we should convoy or arm our merchant ships. Secretary Baker said that unless we did our ships would stay in American ports and thus Germany would have us effectively locked up by her threat. The St. Louis of the American Line wanted to go out with mail, but asked the right to arm and the use of guns and gunners. After a long discussion the decision of the President was that we should not convoy because that made a double hazard—this being the report of the navy—but that ships should be told that they might arm, but that without new power from Congress they should not be furnished with guns and gunners.

The President said that he was "passionately" determined not to overstep the slightest punctilio of honor in dealing with Germany or interned Germans or the property of Germans. He would not take the interned ships, not even though they were being gutted of their machinery. He wished an announcement made that all property of Germans would be held inviolate and that interned sailors on merchant ships could enter the United States. If we are to have war we must go in with our hands clean and without any basis for criticism against us. The fact that before Bernstorff gave the note telling of the new warfare the ships had been dismantled as to their machinery, was not to move us to any act that would look like hostility.

Yesterday we talked of the holding of Gerard as a hostage. Lansing said there was no doubt of it. He thought it an act of war itself. But did not know on what theory it was done except that Germany was doing what she thought we would do. Germany evidently was excited over her sailors here, fearing that they would be interned, and over her ships, fearing that they would be taken. I said that it seemed to be established that Germany meant to do what she said she would do and that we might as well act on that assumption.

The President said that he had always believed this, but thought that there were chances of her modifying her position, and that he could do nothing, in good faith toward Congress, without going before that body. He felt that in a few days something would be done that would make this necessary. * * * F. K. L.

Feb. 16, 1917.

My Dear George:

At the last meeting of the Cabinet we again urged that we should convoy our own ships, but the President said that this was not possible without going to Congress, and he was not ready to do that now. The navy people say that to convoy would be foolish because it would make a double target, but it seems to me the right thing to risk a naval ship in the enforcement of our right.

At our dinner to the President last night he said he was not in sympathy with any great preparedness. I think he is dead wrong in this, and as I am a member of the National Council of Defense, I am pushing for everything possible. This week we have had a meeting of the council every day—the Secretaries of War, Navy, Interior, Commerce and Labor—with an advisory commission consisting of seven business men. We are developing a plan for the mobilization of all our national industries and resources so that we may be ready for getting guns, munitions, trucks, supplies, airplanes and other material things as soon as war comes—if not too soon. It is a great organization of industry and resources. I think that I shall urge Hoover as the head of the work. His Belgian experience has made him the most competent man in this country for such work. He had promised to come to me as one of my assistants, but the other work is the larger, and I can get on with a smaller man. He will correlate the industrial life of the nation against the day of danger and immediate need. * * *

The Chief of Staff fell asleep at our meeting today—Mars and Morpheus in one!

Today's meeting has resulted in nothing, though in Mexico, Cuba, Costa Rico and Europe we have trouble. The country is growing tired of delay, and without positive leadership is losing its keenness of conscience and becoming inured to insult. Our Ambassador in Berlin is held as a hostage for days—our Consuls' wives are stripped naked at the border, our ships are sunk, our people killed—and yet we wait and wait! What for I do not know. Germany is winning by her bluff, for she has our ships interned in our own harbors.

Well, dear boy, I'm not a pacifist, as you see. Much love, FRANK.

My Dear George:

On Friday we had one of the most animated sessions of the Cabinet that I suppose has ever been held under this or any other President. It all arose out of a very innocent question of mine as to whether it was true that the wives of American Consuls on leaving Germany had been stripped naked, given an acid bath to detect writing on their flesh and subjected to other indignities. Lansing answered that it was true. Then asked Houston about the bread riots in New York, as to whether there was a shortage of food because of car shortage due to vessels not going out with exports.

This led to a discussion of the great problem which we all had been afraid to raise: Why shouldn't we send our ships out with guns or convoys? Daniels said we must not convoy—that would be dangerous. (Think of a Secretary of the Navy talking of danger!) The President said that the country was not willing that we should take any risks of war. I said that I got no such sentiment out of the country, but if the country knew that our Consuls' wives had been treated so outrageously that there would be no question as to the sentiment. This, the President took as a suggestion that we should work up a propaganda of hatred against Germany. Of course, I said I had no such idea, but that I felt that in a democracy the people were entitled to know the facts. McAdoo, Houston and Redfield joined me. The President turned on them bitterly, especially on McAdoo, and reproached all of us with appealing to the spirit of the code duello. We couldn't get the idea out of his head that we were bent on pushing the country into war. X talked of resigning after the meeting. Y will—within a year, I believe. I tried to smooth them down by recalling our past experiences with the President. We have had to push and push and push to get him to take any forward step—the Trade Commission, the Tariff Commission. He comes out right, but he is slower than a glacier—and things are mighty disagreeable whenever anything has to be done.

Now he is being abused by the Republicans for being slow, and this will probably help a bit, though it may make him more ostinate. He wants no extra session and the Republicans fear that he will submit to anything in the way of indignity or national humiliation without "getting back," so they are standing for an extra session. The President believes, I think, that the munitions makers are back of the Republican plan. But I doubt this. They simply want to have a "say," and the President wants to be alone and unbothered. He probably would not call Cabinet meetings if Congress adjourned. Then I would go to Honolulu, where land problem vexes.

I don't know whether the President is an internationalist or a pacifist; he seems to be very mildly national—his patriotism is covered over with a film of philosophic humanitarianism that certainly doesn't make for "punch" at such times as this. F. K. L.

WASHINGTON, April 1 (1917).

My Dear George:

I took your letter and your proposed wire as to our going into war and sent them to the President as suggestions for his proposed message, which in a couple of days will come out—what it is to be I don't know, except in spirit. He is to be for recognized war and taking hold of the situation in such fashion as will eventualy lead to an allies' victory over Germany. But he goes unwillingly. The Cabinet is at last a unit. We can stand Germany's insolence and murderous policy no longer. Burleson, Gregory, Daniels and Wilson (Secretary of Labor) were the last to come over.

The meetings of the Cabinet lately have been nothing less than councils of war. The die is cast—and yet no one has seen the message. The President hasn't shown us a line. He seems to think that in war the Pacific Coast will not be strongly with him. They don't want war, to be sure—no one does. But they will not suffer further humiliation.

* * * We may win in two years. If we had the nerve to raise 5,000,000 men at once we could end it in six months.

The first thing is to let Russia and France have money. And the second thing, to see that Russia has munitions of which they are short—depending largely, too largely, upon Japan. I shouldn't be surprised if we would operate the Russian railroads. And ships, ships, ships! How we do need ships, and there are none in the world. Ships to feed England and to make the Russian machine work. * * *

This is the program as far as we have gone; Navy to make a line across the sea and hunt submarines; army, 1,000,000 at once, and as many more as necessary as soon as they can be got ready. Financed by income taxes largely. Men and capital both drafted. * * *

Some time I'll tell you how we stopped the (railroad) strike. It was a big piece of work that was blanketed by the Supreme Court's decision the next day. But we came near to having something akin to civil war. Much love, my dear boy.

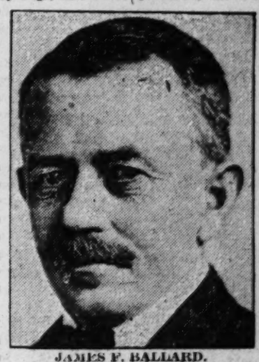
Donor of $440,000 Worth of Most Artistic Specimens in World, to New York, Will Undertake to Bring Best Still Available to This City.

THE scriptural warning that "Moth and rust do consume" has a vivid meaning to James F. Ballard of 4420 Washington boulevard, collector of Oriental rugs, who has just given 126 rugs, comprising the greater part of his collection, to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Rust does not worry Ballard particularly, but moths are an ever-present menace to the lover of fine rugs. The moths cannot always be kept away, even by using the rugs for the purpose for which they were presumably made, and to which the collector seldom puts them—namely, placing them on the floor and walking on them.

"Even then," Ballard declares, "the moths will lay their eggs in the corners of the rugs. At this season it is unsafe to display rugs, and those which I have given to the Metropolitan Museum are now in cold storage there, and will not be placed on display until cool weather. The Metropolitan Museum, with its large cold storage facilities, is better equipped to care for rugs than the St. Louis Museum or most other museums in this country.

"However, my principal reason for giving the rugs to the Metropolitan was that they will be seen by many more persons than would see them anywhere else. Certainly I did not intend to discriminate against this city, and, in fact, when I have exhibited the rugs in other cities in the past I have always seen to it that the placards indicated St. Louis as the home of the collection.



JAMES F. BALLARD.

—Rosch Photograph.

"I am now in correspondence with owners of valuable Oriental rugs, in Hungary and other countries, with a view to acquiring more rugs, which I shall plan to give to the St. Louis Art Museum.

"I shall try, in making this new collection, to get representative types of the smaller sizes, as the wall space for display of rugs in the St. Louis museum is limited. A rug 18 by 9 feet requires considerable wall space.

"I am interested in the St. Louis museum, and am proud of its development. I believe it compares favorably with the museums of other American cities, and I admire the work done by Mr. Bixby in obtaining valuable art objects in the Far East for the St. Louis display—objects that, a few years hence, would not be obtainable."

Collector for 20 Years.

Ballard has been a collector of rugs for 20 years, and has made tours to Persia, Arabia and other countries of the Near East, for the personal inspection and purchase of choice specimens. The 126 rugs which he gave the Metropolitan Museum have an estimated value of $440,000.

His hobby began with a love of color, he declares. The colors used by the old Oriental rug makers were imperishable. Were, but are no longer so.

"The making of fine Oriental rugs is practically a lost art today," he said. "Cheap dyes and high wages have done it.

"In the old days, rug makers earned 5 cents a day. Now, they can make $1.50 a day at other work, and they are not making rugs, or are making them at prices out of the former scale.

Some Lost Hues.

"The old dyes of the rug makers were made from roots, herbs, leaves, insects, mollusks and oyster shells. Tyrian purple, the coloring of one of the rugs in the collection I have given the Metropolitan, is today a lost color. It was made from shells, by a process no longer known. It was the royal blue of the ancient Hittites.

"Ispahan green and Kermes red are other lost hues. The secrets of making these dyes were handed down from father to son, orally. The most delicate skill was required in their composition and use.

"The dyers of red were held in highest esteem. The dyers had to time their work with the greatest precision, and when they would dip a skein of yarn in a pot, a difference of 10 seconds in the time of its exposure to the sun would alter the hue.

"But when aniline dyes were imported into the Orient, 65 or 70 years ago, the substitution of the cheap and mediocre for the old permanent and brilliant colors began. The Persian Government saw the danger to the rug industry, and it made a law against importing or possessing aniline dyes. The penalty was the loss of the owner's right hand.

"But even that did not stop the traffic in the cheap dyes, and today the genuine old dyes are seldom found.

"The Oriental countries have been scoured for the older make of rugs, and today comparatively few are left in Persia, Arabia and Turkey. The Russians, who were the first European people to get into Persia, got the lion's share of the rugs, as they did of other art treasures. There was a great collection of Persian rugs, in former days, in the Hermitage, at St. Petersburg. What has become of those treasures I have never heard.

"Austria and Hungary also have considerable stores of these old rugs, or had them before the war. There are a number of royal collections, particularly the one of the Swedish royal house.

"The collection which I have given to the Metropolitan Museum includes rugs dating back to the early part of the fifteenth century, and each subsequent century is also represented. Some of the items of the collection are only fragments, showing the exquisite art of those times.

Geometric Designs Prevail.

"Most of the patterns are geometrical designs. The Koran, the Mohammedan Bible, forbids the making of any representation of the human form or of any animal form. Flowers are not included in this restriction, but the orthodox Mohammedan rug maker usually avoids even these forms of life.

"However, not all Mohammedans are obedient to the Koran, and some fine Persian and Indian rug patterns have animal motives."

Ballard, who is 70 years old, has been a manufacturer of proprietary remedies here for 40 years. He says he expects to give only a part of his time to business hereafter, and that he will strive, in the next few years, to obtain rugs which will be a valuable addition to the museum here. He approves of the St. Louis museum's present policy of diversifying its display, rather than concentrating on work of painting and sculpture. Recent additions to the local collection have included Oriental and medieval art craft objects.

Ballard has never been officially connected with the St. Louis Art Museum. His high standing as a collector of rugs is recognized in standard books on this subject. The Metropolitan Museum has elected him a "benefactor."

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHO ever heard of a wild animal dying of dyspepsia? They know instinctively what is good for them. Man, with a cranial capacity three times that of the gorilla, engages high-priced specialists to tell him what to eat, in order that he may not unwittingly kill himself. By going to college several years a dietician learns what every orang knows, and, actually makes a living on that knowledge.

Man reached his present plane by learning, through a terribly painful experience, to comply with natural laws. But no sooner had he, in a measure, established himself, than he unloosed his fancy, and began inventing all sorts of rules of his own, forcibly imposing some of them on others who did not at all agree in their wisdom or validity. The result is that anthropologists are debating, in the twentieth century, whether the human species can survive.

So it comes about that calling a man a beast may be paying a high compliment to his intelligence and discrimination. Some extraordinarily intelligent men have been called beasts by those who didn't understand them. Nietzsche saw the superman of the future as "the blond beast." Forgetting that, for all their legislation, man is conditioned by nature, men have said that one must follow such and such a rule to be happy. When someone violated that rule, they did their best to make him unhappy—if for no other reason than to prove that it was a good rule. P. Y. A.

It Hasn't.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is now apparent that the opposition to Senator Reed has resolved itself down to two elements, under the guidance of two leaderships, namely: the Anti-Saloonite zealot and the League of Nationite zealot.

While we have been taught to believe that the time would come when the lion and the lamb would lie down together, we had not contemplated that the time would ever come when the editor of the Post-Dispatch and Mr. Schupp would become political bedfellows.

Paying the Game.

THE Chicago White Sox have paid $100,000 for a ballplayer. They added a pair of players to this sum in closing the deal with the San Francisco club. Not long ago the New York Giants paid a like amount for a player. About the same time, the Giants got another man for $75,000.

High finance apparently has become a vital part of the national pastime. It wasn't so very long back that $10,000 was the top price for a player. Rather than high finance, the continuation of exorbitant salaries and prices in baseball is now a case of rather frenzied finance. The effect is a certain hindrance to the great American game. Fabulous sums paid one team to another for men are not the only evil. The salary level has remained high or higher than four years ago. Professional men and men in big business draw salaries pigmied in comparison. A result is the deplorable attitude naturally growing on this class. The popularity of the sport will suffer.

The business of the nation is making a laudable effort to re-establish a balance in wages and prices. Reductions, when necessary, are being made. It is the period of reconstruction. Baseball should, through its competent leaders, consider the problem in its relation to the sport. The enormous sums paid players has, in some few instances, affected the men. They have been unable to withstand the acid test of popularity and prosperity. Their personalities have suffered. The result is reflected in the character of the game. Flagrant breaches of discipline and even of common law have occurred. These add to the gentle but none the less certain tide of disfavor which is encroaching upon the sport.

Whom the gods would destroy they first make great. Baseball is today at the peak of its unparalleled popularity. This prominence should not be allowed to be its ultimate destruction. H. F. M.

Why "138th?"

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WITH all due respect to the First Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, why is it that they refer to that organization parenthetically as the 138th? The 138th was an organization which was mustered out of service at Camp Funston in May, 1919. The present organization, as we understand it, is a National Guard regiment, formed under the title of the First Regiment. It would seem as a matter of accuracy and also to foster a spirit of pride in their own outfit that the organization should not be referred to in the above manner.

Plan for Paying Debt.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WOULD like to present a plan by which our late allies could pay a part of the debt they owe the United States.

France and England still have colonial possessions in American waters. France has two small islands, St. Pierre and Miquerlon, and French Guinea. England, the Bahamas, British Guinea, Jamaica, Trinidad, etc. Why should they not cede some or all of these possessions to the United States as part payment of this debt? JOS. C. FINCH.

THE TARIFF BETRAYAL.

Investigation by Elliott Thurston, Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World, discloses the McCumber tariff bill as one of the most gigantic conspiracies of plunder in recent American history. It is difficult to describe the responsibility of Congress in this affair without appearing to exaggerate. Yet, shall the truth of the situation be ignored because it is too monstrous to carry conviction? Betrayal is an ugly word, but how can its use be avoided when it is known that some Senators admit privately that they are "strongly against the rates proposed and the methods employed but are keeping silent in the interest of party unity, hoping for revision later"?

The facts of some of the schedules and of the general conclusions and methods employed already have been printed in the Post-Dispatch under Mr. Thurston's name. We take the liberty of refreshing the reader's mind on some of them, to-wit:

That importations would be placed by the tariff bill under a virtual embargo, permitting the return of war prices, which have been so slowly and laboriously reduced.

That, with importations practically prohibited, the Government would gather little revenue from the tariff, but that the proceeds from high prices would be handed over to favored beneficiaries, enabling them to pay dividends on inflated capitalization and swollen war profits.

That notices of price increases have already been issued to dealers by several industrial favorites of the bill which enjoy a monopolistic control of domestic markets.

That unemployment and depression will result in those lines of business and industry which depend on selling their surpluses abroad.

That a deliberate attempt to increase building costs and rents by placing a 25 per cent duty on brick and by other building material duties has not yet been defeated by an agreement to abolish these duties.

That prices on silk stockings, sweaters, underwear, dresses and other silks can be increased 50 per cent under the proposed schedule, or a cheap substitute can be sold at the present price of genuine silk.

And finally, and most damning of all, that the new rates were not the result of petition by the affected interests, but were dictated by an organized superlobby, against which the majority of the Senate Finance Committee made no resistance.

This tariff, like the great war, is one of those hurricanes of adversity whose coming is not regarded seriously because "it is too unbelievable." The leaders of Congress, having committed themselves to the need of a tariff and having promised its passage, are bent on carrying out their program. The most that the people of Missouri can do to save the situation is to wire or write their Representatives and Senators, absentee and otherwise, that this betrayal must be resisted; that the labor, hardship and unemployment which have been suffered to bring industry, trade and prices back to normal must not have been endured in vain.

THE LAWYER'S "PROUD DEPENDENCE."

The men trained in this school may not always be the most knowing in the ways of getting on. The noblest of them must often feel that they are committed to lives of proud dependence—the dependence of men who command no factitious aids to success, but rely upon unadvertised knowledge and silent devotion; dependence upon finding an appreciation which they cannot seek, but dependence proud in the conviction that the knowledge to which their lives are consecrated is of things which it concerns the world to know. It is the dependence of abstract thought, of science, of beauty, of poetry and art, of every flower of civilization, upon finding a soil generous enough to support it. If it does not, it must die. But the world needs the flower more than the flower needs life.

Those remarks were made by the venerable Justice of the United States Supreme Court many years ago in an address to the Harvard Law School Association. The complete speech will be found in the "Collected Legal Papers" of Oliver Wendell Holmes, a book which any lawyer, or layman, may profitably read, but which should be of rare value to the young men, now being graduated from our law schools, who must soon face the arduous demands of necessity and withstand the temptations which ambition is inclined to sanction.

A NEW SPECIMEN.

Editor Bottomley of London, who has been sentenced to seven years for misappropriation of funds, is interesting to America not only because he harangued against America as Hearst has harangued against Great Britain and Japan, but because he is an addition to the innumerable varieties of haters of Woodrow Wilson. Among that vast and conglomerate company may be named those who hated Wilson because, as President, he was loyal to America; those who hated him because he was disloyal to America; those who hated him because he was pro-British; those who hated him because he was anti-British; those who hated him because he was pro-German; those who hated him because he was anti-German; those who hated him because he was liberal and those who hated him because he was anti or pro something in spite of being liberal. The question of why Bottomley hated Wilson we would recommend as a promising indoor sport for those who hate Wilson because he was pro-British.

THE TEST OF MOB LAW.

Since arguments of civilization, justice and humanity have failed to curb mobocracy in Texas there is one argument left which it would be well for defenders of lynch law everywhere to take into account. This is the argument of the effectiveness of lynching as a crime preventive.

In the lynch records of the states Texas stands high. In 1920 it topped the list with 10 cases. It almost equaled that record in a space of 14 days in the month of May when the lynchings ran to the number of seven. The last case swells the number to eight. Waco, where the last lynching occurred, is one of the towns celebrated for its mob horrors.

If the criminal negro population could be frightened into restraint by examples of mob torture and killings the memory of the horrors of the first half of last month ought to have been a deterrent for a decade. Four of the victims were burned alive. Three were put to the flames singly in the same fire. Each one awaiting his turn was forced to witness the torture of his predecessor.

What was the preventive effect? Within a week of the lynching before the last there was committed one of the most audacious and deliberate crimes of murder and assault ever recorded. The Waco mob was not satisfied with retribution meted out by the father of the assaulted woman but seized the body from an undertaker, dragged it through the streets, mutilated it and burned it in the public square. Was this an example for other possible criminals or was it a lust of brutal vengeance?

Due process of law is decried by the mob as an insufficient lesson to evildoers. What can Texas say now of the deterrent effect of mob law?

AROUND THE WORLD IN FIVE DAYS.

Six special speed planes are to be constructed for the speed test by the United States Army Air Service at the international air race to be held at Detroit on Sept. 15, the Pulitzer trophy to be the prize.

A guaranteed speed of 200 miles an hour is specified for these planes. If a machine with this speed could be constructed with a fuel capacity to keep the air for five days, and this machine should start to circumnavigate the globe, going directly east, or vice versa, we should witness the feat of going around the world in 120 hours, or five days of 24 hours each. That something of the sort will be accomplished within the life of this generation is highly probable.

Senator Reed says riches should not be an issue in the campaign, but he isn't afraid of dropping a suggestion.

THE BIBLE AS AN EDITORIAL FEATURE.

The Bluefield (W. Va.) Daily Telegraph, on May 2, began the publication of the New Testament as a daily feature on the editorial page. Under the two-column heading, "Read the Bible With Us," the issue of Saturday, May 13, contains nearly two columns, being Chapter 13 of the Gospel according to St. Matthew.

The experiment is not new, in so far as passages and even whole chapters of Scripture have been printed in newspapers. The editor of the Bluefield Telegraph wishes to know what other editors think of printing the entire New Testament, as an attraction for readers, promising not to use such opinions as part of a subscription campaign.

A knowledge of the Bible is invaluable for many reasons. But Bibles can be bought at reasonable prices at any good bookstore and are even given away. As to the value of this or other classics as editorial page features, the other newspapers will be glad to learn from the Bluefield Telegraph whether its experiment was justified by the results, after the publication is completed. Do readers want this brand of literature? Would not the publication of the Bible alienate many readers? If the intention is to supply good literature, why not print the best examples of this and other great classics? To confine the experiment to the Bible might be construed as forcing religious instruction upon many who might resent it.

The Return to Sirmio.

O SIRMIO, thou fairest gem
That kingly Neptune holds and reigns
In all his islands and far-jutting capes,
His oceans wide, and his domains
Of crystal lakes, this happy day
How willingly I come again,
And with what joy, to visit you!
The Thynian and Bythinian plain
I scarcely trust that I have left
Them far behind! That now I see
You safely! What is more blessed
Than with a heart of cares made free
And with a mind that lays aside
Its heavy tasks, when home returned,
Wearied with toil of travels far,
To find the couch for which one yearned?
This is the greatest joy; reward
For the most arduous toil! Welcome
Sweet Sirmio! And with him rejoice
Who is your master; and let the lake,
The dear Lydian waters, voice
Their welcome too; let each and all
Raise his glad slaughter in my hall!

In view of the almost indecent scramble for a United States senatorship from Missouri, it may quiet our troubled gaze to turn it upon this spectacle of the office seeking the man in a Missouri congressional district. The following is from the New Madrid Record: "There is a scheme on foot among the Democrats in the east end of our congressional district to nominate Judge W. C. Russell of Charleston, to make a race, without asking his consent. That reminds us that you can't always tell how an election may result. Many years ago the Republicans held a convention at Cape Girardeau to nominate a candidate for Congress, but every delegate present refused to accept the nomination and it looked like the G. O. P. would not have a candidate. Finally someone suggested that Norman A. Mozely, a delegate from Stoddard County, then a bright young school teacher, was sick in bed at the hotel and proposed to nominate him, then adjourn and get out of town before he could decline the honor. This was done. Mr. Mozely was elected."

An item from the Sikeston (Mo.) Standard which indicates that human kindness may be coming back: "Some time ago a yellow dog was run over by a steam train and had a hind leg cut off close up to his body. Of course, the yellow cur lived. Since that time he has been a town dog, owing allegiance to no man or set of men. He was fed by the restaurants on Front street. This dog attends all the ball games, all the fires, and meets every Missouri Pacific train, just for the satisfaction of barking at the thing that mutilated him. But he was a dog without an owner, without a license and without a collar, so was to be killed and buried. Such was the edict that went from the Tax Collector at the city hall. A. Ray Smith heard of the declaration of war and hastened to the dog's rescue with a license, while clerks in the store purchased the collar. Folks who have a kindly feeling for a yellow dog are not so worse after all."

OUR OWN SOCIETY AND FASHION.

If women's styles continue to get more freakish, style notes will read something like this:

Monsieur Bizarre, the celebrated Parisian designer, has created a new creation. He claims it is a dinner gown, although on seeing it the first time one would be misled into thinking that it was a clown costume. Remembering it to be a dinner gown, the designer saw fit to use suitable materials. It is a cheesecloth affair, with a bodice of lemon-colored crepe. Dangling from it in graceful streamers are several bunches of radishes; some of them caught and draped near the hipbone, and fastened with a pickle fork. An artistic fruit basket, containing all sorts of eatables, dangles on the other side, attached to a slender stream of spaghetti, which reaches to the collar bone, and then is beautifully set off against an effective background of Spanish lettuce. The main trouble with this gown is that one's husband is apt to devour it when hungry, and one is at a bridge party.

A summer hat that attracted considerable attention on Fifth avenue was one made in the shape of an inverted lamp-shade, profusely trimmed with banana leaves. It has since increased in popularity, and is all the rage. However, for best results, it is necessary that the wearer be light-complexioned.

An event of considerable importance in New York society was the recent wedding of Miss Lulu Gulps, daughter of the well-known soft-drink manufacturer, to Mr. Archibald Tango. The bride was bewitchingly clad in a dainty creation of transparent gauze, with a 10-foot train of no-such chiffon lined with Peruvian linoleum. The silver mesh veil, which reached to the ground, judging by its expense, certainly must have reached far down into friend papa's pockets. But the most novel idea of all was the mahogany rolling-pin, which the bride carried in place of the customary bouquet of orchids. THEO. H. TRILSEY.

Some Law, Wouldn't You Say?

(Monroe County, Mo., Appeal.)

Ernest Rowland, Chief of Police of Columbia, tells the story of an experience with Texas freak laws:

"I was in conversation with one of the officials of a small Texas town," says Mr. Rowland, "when the subject of freak laws came up. My friend showed me one of the Texas statutes making it a misdemeanor to set a chicken hen on duck eggs.

"The reason given is that a hen would have to sit a week longer on duck eggs than she would on chicken eggs, which would be a hardship on the hen, and a perversion of the laws of nature."

A TUNE, A RUNE, A CREATURE OF THE MOON.

FIFTY years ago I sang you,
And by memory's magic spell,
Little tune, I came to know you,
And to love you passing well;
Just some spaces on the gamut,
Only a crystal in time's persistent flow,
Caused by sacred words to glow:

"Of the Father's love begotten,
Ere the worlds began to be,
He, the Alpha and Omega,
He, the source, the unending He
Of the things that are, that have been
And that future years shall see,
Evermore and evermore."

Like a gentle friend, O melody,
You return in time of need,
With your hint of immortality,
Treasured by a noble creed;
Simple as a star, as complex,
Tune, O rune, O creature of the moon!
What a mystery you are.

H. M. WILLIAMS.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

THE fact that President Cleveland, in 1895, when Mr. Olney was transferred from the Department of Justice to the State Department, offered the post of Attorney-General to the late Judge Edgar M. Cullen of New York, was brought out at a meeting of the Bar Association in Brooklyn held to eulogize the distinguished jurist. The public never knew before of the offer. A curious feature of the invitation to Judge Cullen was the last paragraph:

"Will you not give me your conclusion as soon as possible? If by letter put on the envelope 'Strictly private.' If I must give you up and search further, you might, if you see fit, telegraph me: 'He is not in town.—E. M. C.' If you can give me by telegraph the word I hope to receive and which will bring with it much rejoicing at our council board, let it be: 'He will meet you.—E. M. C.'"

This missive reveals the fact that some Presidents at least have correspondence of which their private secretaries are ignorant. Mr. Cleveland was a man who took infinite pains with details. He wrote many letters laboriously, with his own hand. Why he was so careful to keep his Cullen offer a secret is obvious. He knew that, in case the New York Judge declined, he must ask someone else to serve and that whoever accepts a place in the Cabinet likes to think that he was the President's first choice. Secrecy under such circumstances safeguards a Cabinet post from the humiliation of going begging among the best legal minds. Inasmuch as Judson Harmon of Ohio became the Attorney-General at that time, it may be taken for granted that Mr. Harmon is only now learning that Judge Cullen was invited first.

NEW TARIFF, HIGH PRICES.

From the Nation.

ACCORDING to the Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee, the proposed new tariff will cost the people of the United States between three and four billion dollars in higher prices, of which the Government will collect only a tithe in revenue. Why are we to pay this tax to manufacturers? Because, the Republicans claim, only so can American industry be restored to health. To prove their case they have taken figures of low cost of production, especially in Germany, which the Democrats now point out are old and misrepresent the present situation. Our markets are not flooded with foreign products; our imports in 1921 were only about 4 per cent of our total production and our exports were 7 per cent. We are told that without a higher tariff industries like the manufacture of hosiery and knit goods will be ruined. Yet the United States exported four times as much hosiery and knit goods as it imported. Who are the beneficiaries of these new duties? Not "infant industries" but some of the worst trusts in America.

CO-EDUCATION.

From the New York Tribune.

IN a report to the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania the directors of the institution's Alumni Association shout for bars against women students. They declare that the university has "largely lost its quality of masculinity" and that it is time to dispatch a rescue party. Twenty-five years ago the co-education scare raged violently. But that which aroused fear was that the girls would be corrupted by the boys, not the reverse. Great was the solicitude for keeping the bloom on the face of the peach. Classroom contact with the rude and unrefined male was deemed fatally roughening. But the new scare relates to what is happening to the boys. Their virility is going. Driven to a corner, crowded into remote places and no mercy shown to them, they bleat pitifully. The state of mind to which our friends Philadelphia-way are reduced is shown by the further statement in their protest, just as a final yelp of despair, as it were, that "we oppose the proposition that the university is for the masses."

Events in the Social World

Play by Community School Association in Which Many Prominent Persons Will Take Part Among Entertainments Being Arranged for Those Who Do Not Join Exodus to Europe and Seashore Resorts This Month.

BESIDES being the month of valedictories, caps and gowns, of brides and bungalows, of garden parties and conventions, June is the month of many other things. The very mention of it is suggestive of real summer, whatever the temperature, and with its opening days comes a longing for a change of scene for the vast majority of society. It is a signal for the head of the household to study his checkbook, and to vow that he cannot afford to send the family to that fashionable summer resort, while at the same time other members of that family are packing their trunks for departure.

Judging from the lists of passport applications, Europe is by all odds the favorite destination for resort seekers, although the seacoast and lakeside resorts will have almost their quota. While the departure of the vanguard this month leaves the social ranks in St. Louis depleted, and gaieties must necessarily be fewer, there will still be the opera, the country clubs and an occasional unique entertainment for the amusement of the stay-at-homes.

Among the entertainments is a play to be produced at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow evening by the Community School Association at the Community School, Wydown and De Munn avenue, for the benefit of the playground fund.

The performance is to be preceded by a prologue, stating that whereas the children of the Community School celebrate all festival days by composing and acting a play, the parents have caught the spirit of the age and have done likewise, burlesqueing both ancient and ultra-modern education. The cast includes: Prologue, Sears Lehman; Ye Old Skulemarm Spinster, Samuel P. Goddard; Ye Tykes of Olde, Eugene Angert, Emanuel Grossman, Samuel McPheeters and Duncan Meier; Ye Female of the Species, Mildred (Mrs. Harry G.) Hurd, Virginia (Mrs. Philip Bond) Fouke; Kathleen (Mrs. Robert) Wallace; Justine (Mrs. Frederick) Elsman; Louise (Mrs. Eugene R.) McCarthy; Virginia (Mrs. Kenneth) Davis. Scene shifter, F. W. A. Vesper. Second act, The Observing-Director Carol (Mrs. Hugh McKittrick) Jones; The Visiting Male, Mortimer Burroughs, Mrs. Samuel P. Goddard is directing the performance.

After the play the Yale Quartet will sing groups of songs and refreshments will be served, followed by a dancing party.

The Committee on Refreshments will be Mmes. C. D. P. Hamilton, Mortimer Burroughs, Guy Oliver, Harry G. Hurd, Duncan I. Meier, U. David Thompson, Ira Bretzfelder and the hostesses of the evening will be Messrs. and Mmes. Lionberger Davis, Philip Fouke, Ira Bretzfelder, Alanson Brown, Duncan I. Meier, Samuel P. Goddard, Harry G. Hurd, Guy Oliver, Robert Wallace, Eugene Angert, Taltan Francis, F. W. A. Vesper and Mrs. D. O. Ives.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Lawnin of 5138 Washington boulevard will depart about June 20 to open their cottage at Waupaca, Wis. Their daughters, Miss Josephine and Miss Julia Lawnin, will follow a week or so later. Mr. and Mrs. James E. Crawford, the latter of whom was formerly Miss Charlotte Nelson Lawnin, will leave St. Louis in August to join Mr. Crawford's mother, Mrs. G. Lacy Crawford, and his aunt, Mrs. Lida V. Bevis, at Spring Lake, N. J., where they have leased a cottage for the summer. Mrs. Crawford and Mrs. Bevis will motor East, departing about June 11 and Mrs. Lida Crawford Carr will join her mother a few days later.

Mrs. David G. Evans of 6363 Pershing avenue, and her son, Dr. J. Archer O'Reilly, will depart early this month for Kingston, Mass., where Mrs. Evans has a summer home. They will make the trip by motor, and Dr. O'Reilly will attend the reunion of his class at Harvard. Mrs. O'Reilly will join her husband and mother in Kingston. Miss Mary Carter Davis, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Davis, will depart next month for New Mexico, and will visit Miss Mary Jane Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Soulard Turner.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Richard Boyle of 25 Lenox place, and their children, will spend the summer at Wequetonsing, Mich., where they have taken a cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Frances G. Eaton of Vandeventer place will also go to Wequetonsing for the warm months. Miss Mary Lawrence Eaton will visit in Colorado Springs, and will join her parents later.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe of 50 Kingsbury place will leave St. Louis soon for Woods Hole, Mass., where they have a cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Nims of 56 Portland place have purchased ground at that resort and are planning to build a home there.

Mrs. J. B. C. Lucas, who has spent the winter in St. Augustine, Fla., with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hart, will spend the summer with them at their cottage in Douglass Lodge, Mich. Mrs. Hart will come to St. Louis this week en route north to prepare the cottage for occupancy.

Mrs. Kate Howard of Vandeventer place will depart June 15 for Wequetonsing. She will have as her guest, Mrs. Potter of Baltimore, a friend who was a bridesmaid at Mrs. Howard's wedding.

MRS. Oliver Abel of 6810 Waterman avenue, gave a luncheon yesterday at which announcement was made of the engagement of her niece, Miss Margaret Morall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Morall of 508 Lake avenue, and Gerard W. Wolf of Kirkwood.

Miss Morall was educated at Washington University and the St. Louis School of Fine Arts.

Mr. Wolf is a graduate of Washington University, class of 1921, and a member of the Alpha Chi Omego fraternity. The wedding will take place in the fall.

A NOTABLE wedding of the month was that of Miss Eugenia V. Barroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rollinson Barroll, of 4603 Pershing avenue, and Andrew Cole Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Duncan of 5646 Kingsbury boulevard, which took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barroll.

The bride wore white bridal satin with draperies of filmy silk lace on the sides of the skirt, while panels of the lace fell at the front and back of the gown. A court train of the lace lined with tulle and bound with white satin, was suspended from the shoulders, and she wore a veil of tulle. Her flowers were orchids and lilies of the valley fashioned into a shower bouquet.

Mrs. John E. Mitchell Jr. was the bride's only attendant, and was gowned in flesh-colored lace with touches of French-blue ribbon as trimming. Her flowers were Ophelia roses and blue delphinium. John J. O'Fallon served as best man.

Missourians Taking Part in Washington Social Affairs

Dedication of Lincoln Memorial Was Chief Event of Week and a Missouri Son Led Guard of Honor.

20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—General Pershing, Missouri's soldier son, led the guard of honor that escorted the remaining handful of veterans of the gray and the blue who assembled before the Lincoln Memorial on Decoration Day, and dedicated that shrine to the martyr President. Conspicuous in the throng of 200,000 persons who listened to President Harding and former President Taft, were Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, the Princes Cantacuzene, a granddaughter of Missouri's great Civil War General, and his great-granddaughter, the Princess Ida Cantacuzene.

Missourians at Ceremony.

Missouri has a special interest in this dedication for on the official programs for the day was printed the name of one of her sons, who though dead, yet had so vital a part of the erection of this memorial that the committe paid him the unusual tribute of printing his name among those of the living members. This was Champ Clark, an enthusiastic member of the committee since its inception. The late speaker was a great admirer of Lincoln and the memorial was a favorite project to him. He lived to see the construction on the building begun, but not its completion. Many friends of Clark at the memorial exercises commented on the fact that although living in Missouri since the age of 18, Champ Clark was born in the same county in Kentucky which gave Lincoln to the nation.

Every member of the Missouri delegation in the House and Senate was in his place in the special stand below that of the President when the ceremonies began. Many Members of their families were also in the specially reserved sections roped off for Congressional families.

The Missouri contingent will attend the graduating exercises of George Washington University on June 7 for Miss Nelle Millspaugh, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Frank C. Millspaugh, will be among those who will receive their diplomas. Representative Millspaugh is president of the Missouri State Society. Miss Millspaugh was one of the special guests at the dance given Wednesday night at the home of Miss Ella Middlepage for the senior class.

Admiral and Mrs. Robert E. Coontz have gone to Annapolis, accompanied by their young daughter, Miss Bertha, for the June week festivities. Miss Bertha Coontz is the center of a group of sub-debutantes comprising Miss Janet Moffitt, daughter of Admiral Moffitt, chief of the Bureau of Naval Aviation, and Mrs. William A. Moffitt; Miss Emma Stitt, daughter of the Surgeon-General of the Navy, and Miss Eugenie LeJeune, daughter of the commandant of the U. S. Marine corps, and Mrs. John A. LeJeune. These young girls were among those who assisted Mrs. Henry Wilson, wife of Admiral Wilson, Superintendent of Annapolis, at the garden party given Wednesday in honor of the graduating class.

turn to Washington early in the week.

Former Governor and Mrs. Joseph W. Folk, were among those who attended the dedication of the Lincoln Memorial on Tuesday. Mrs. Folk wore a becoming costume of lilac crepe with sleeves of flowered chiffon and wrap of black satin lined in blue. Her hat was medium sized mushroom straw trimmed with a huge satin bow.

Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the late Senator from Missouri, also attended the exercises with her sub-debutante granddaughter, Miss Beatrice Henderson. Mrs. Henderson wore a gown of embroidered white mull over pink satin and pink hat of satin and straw. She carried a handsome white lace parasol. Miss Beatrice Henderson wore a white silk sport dress and wide trimmed sport hat.

Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, who was with her husband in the section reserved for Senators and their families, wore gray embroidered crepe, a gray hat and carried gray cape over her arm.

Pershing Entertains Officers.

General Pershing entertained a group of officers at a luncheon at the Shoreham Tuesday, and was host at an informal luncheon Monday night.

President and Mrs. Harding greatly surprised the throng of visitors at Arlington by slipping in on the memorial exercises there. They came as quietly as such a distinguished pair could and sat in rear seats. They were soon discovered and given box seats, although the President steadfastly refused to occupy a seat on the platform with his party. The rest of the week for both the President and Mrs. Harding was taken up with a round of receptions of visiting notables, informal teas and so far as Mrs. Harding is concerned with making preparations for the veterans' garden party, which is the talk of every service hospital for miles around. With Congress remaining in session there is little prospect in sight for the needed vacation for the President, and the First Lady of the Land. It is said that both are longing for the opportunity to go back to Marion for a few weeks and talk things over with the home folks. But this joy will probably not come to them for many, many months to come, judging from present indications.

In this regard, Mrs. Coolidge, wife of the Vice President, is more fortunate, for it is understood that she intends to spend part of the summer at their cozy home at Northampton with her schoolboy sons, Calvin and John, whose holidays from the military academy they attended in Pennsylvania are just about to begin.

Guest of Mrs. Spencer.

Mrs. Coolidge was the guest of honor on Thursday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, wife of the Missouri Senator at the Chevy-Chase Club. Other guests were the ladies of the Senate, 60 in all. Pansies were used to decorate the tables. Tiny pots of the fragra nt flowers were placed at each guest's plate to be taken home as souvenirs of the party.

After the adjournment of Congress, which will not be until late in August, according to present expectations, Senator and Mrs. Spencer will go to California.

Gen. Pershing went to New York

Stick to Senreco and Your Teeth Will Stick to You

Have White, Radiant Teeth That Will Compel Unstinted Admiration.

Don't neglect your gums, whatever else you do, or you'll be sorry later on.

Keep them strong, sturdy and full of life. Bear in mind that a hearty plant won't grow in foul soil. Neither will unhealty gums produce good teeth.

Your druggist is one of your best friends—don't forget that—see him often—many thousands of men and women are enjoying health today because of the dentists' knowledge and skill.

You can have white teeth so radiantly clean and fascinating and so free from film or coating that they will compel unstinted admiration. You can have firm, healthy gums with no taint of disease if you will only visit your dentist occasionally and use Senreco toothpaste night and morning.

Senreco is a dentist's formula, a combination so perfect that, besides being the finest cleanser of teeth and the most enjoyable of dentifrices, is an active enemy of the vicious germs of pyorrhea—that all too common and abhorrent disease that attacks the gums and causes them to bleed, recede and grow soft, tender and spongy.

Get a tube of Senreco today—the good results will astonish you—in just a few days your teeth will radiate purity. Stick to Senreco and your teeth will stick to you.

Shall It Be Buds and Birds or Brooms and Dust-Pans?

DOES June mean a joyous time of buds and birds, sweet breezes and light hearts, of hours spent out'o' doors in the full enjoyment of living—

Or is June a work season between winter and summer in which thoughts of housecleaning and its health-destroying toil and turmoil drive all joy from your heart?

There is no "housecleaning day" or "Spring cleaning time" in the home that knows the electric vacuum cleaner.

The never-ending grind of sweeping, dusting and beating has given place to a few minutes of easy electric cleaning.

The housewife who electric vacuum cleans starts the morning without the towel-turban and "housecleaning dress" of the broom-and-dust-pan days of unhappy memory.

Unexpected company finds her always ready to receive. She has more time for her family and her social and other affairs. She can grow up with her children instead of watching them grow away from her.

She can keep up with her husband, and abreast of the times in which she lives. Her home has the cleanliness, brightness and freshness that is the envy of every woman.

And she has the satisfaction of knowing that her prized floor coverings, hangings and upholsteries retain their beauty and value and last longer without the expense of employing outside help.

Better than all the eulogies of electric cleaning is a thorough trial in your own home. Now is the time to have it. Any dealer or your lighting company will make it for you.

Your purchase of a vacuum cleaner marks an epoch in your life. It gives you more time for your children; spare hours for recreation, entertainment or education. Electricity makes possible that forward step.

Is your city or town moving forward equally swiftly? No city can unless it can see clearly and has all of the power it can use. Is your city helping its electric light and power company to grow steadily and prosperously so it can furnish that light and power service?

CAULFIELD OBJECTS TO U. R. TAX VALUATION

Return Is Excessive and Will Make Fare Cut More Difficult, City Counselor Says.

The tax return made by the United Railways Co. a week ago, placing the value of all the company's tangible property at $64,835,979, is a factor tending to make the reduction of the 7-cent fare more difficult, City Counselor Caulfield has protested in a letter to the State Tax Commission. He contended that this valuation is excessive.

Caulfield says that since the Engineering Department of the Public Service Commission had placed a value on the United Railways of only $48,220,316 and found that there was an accrued depreciation of over $14,000,000, which would make the depreciated value $33,673,471, the latest return is unreasonably high.

These figures do not include the Missouri Electric Company (St. Charles Line), the full value of which, Caulfield says in the letter, has been placed at $716,497, and depreciated value of $502,988. These figures are as of Dec. 1, 1918, he points out, since which time about $2,000,000 in value has been added to the value of the whole United Railways property, excepting the Missouri Electric Company, by way of additions and betterments.

"My reason for making this suggestion," Caulfield writes, "is that since the company has been permitted, contrary to its franchise contract, to charge in excess of a five-cent fare, the rate prescribed in the franchise, the car riders are compelled to contribute sufficient by way of car fare to pay all the operating expenses of the company, including taxes, and in addition thereto, a reasonable return upon the fair value of the property.

"It is of vital interest to the car riders that the burden imposed upon them, through the company's operating expenses and taxes, be kept as low as can lawfully and properly be done."

Canfield pointed out as significant that during the years 1899 to 1918, while the 5-cent fare was in operation, the assessments for the company's property, in the city of St. Louis alone, did not exceed $20,000,000.

$50,000 VERDICT FOR WORKER

Kinloch Company and Laclede Gas Light Co. Were the Defendants.

A verdict for $50,000 damages was returned Friday in favor of Leon L. de Guentz, 34 years old, 2617 North Sarah street, by a jury in Circuit Judge Landwehr's court, against the Kinloch Telephone Co. and the Laclede Gas Light Co., for injuries suffered by the plaintiff when in the employ of the telephone company as a lineman.

On May 11, 1921, de Guentz was at work on a pole at Union boulevard and Terry avenue when he came in contact with an electric wire of the Laclede Company. He was thrown to the ground, suffering injuries from the wire and fall which required the amputation of his left leg below the knee. He also suffered paralysis of his right arm. The suit was for $75,000 damages, alleging negligence on the part of the defendants.

How to Make the Most Delicious Cherry Jam You Ever Tasted

New Certo Process Astonishes Housewives

Never Fails, Requires One Minute's Boiling, Retains All the Color and Flavor and Makes Much More from Same Amount of Fruit

Cherries are now plentiful at a low price, sugar is cheap and housewives are putting up cherry jam and jelly as never before. The reason why is that the brand new and revolutionary Certo Process for making jams and jellies has eliminated every reason why any housewife should hesitate to make these delicious conserves. Any one can now easily make a perfect cherry jelly, at a very low cost, with all the flavor and color of the fruit retained.

The new Certo Process for making cherry jam is very simple: Sour cherries give finest flavor; stem, pit and thoroughly crush about 2½ lbs. of fruit. Measure 4 leveled cups and ¼ cup water into large kettle. Tie 2 heaping tablespoonfuls of pits in cotton cloth and crush with hammer. Place this in kettle with cherries, stir until boiling, cover kettle, simmer 15 minutes, then remove pits. Add 8 leveled cups (3½ lbs.) sugar and mix well. Stir hard and continually. Bring to vigorous boil over hottest fire. Boil hard one full minute, continually stirring. Take from fire and add 1 bottle (scant cup) of Certo, stirring it in well. From time jam is taken off fire, let stand 5 minutes only, by the clock, before pouring into jelly glasses. During this time skim, stir a little to cool slightly and pour quickly. This makes about 11 half-pound glasses of jam. For making cherry jelly, see Certo Book of Recipes.

The former guesswork or worry of making jam or jelly is now past. The Certo Process is endorsed by government authorities and cooking experts; it insures perfect results with every batch. Jam and jelly made this way keep perfectly. It is also very economical, never requiring more than one minute's boiling and thereby makes two-thirds more jam or jelly than the old method. It also makes all kinds of jam or jelly, some you have never tasted before, like raspberry jelly and rhubarb jam, or unusual combinations like strawberry and pineapple, etc. Many housewives are exhibiting with no little pride the new flavors and better quality of jams and jellies made with Certo. Certo always pleases.

Certo is absolutely pure—contains no gelatine or preservative. It is Mother Nature's "jell-maker." Housewives, experienced and inexperienced, have received it with open arms because it is so certain, so economical, so simple and so useful. They are recommending it to all their friends. Ask some of your neighbors about it. Then get a bottle of Certo with recipe book from your grocer or druggist at once. Try it right away with fresh fruit like cherries, currants or raspberries. Then you will do all your preserving the new and modern way, the easy, economical, and better Certo process.

SUMMER ACTIVITIES OF TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY

Open Air School and the Night and Day Camp Will Be Maintained.

The Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis is obliged to keep all departments running at full capacity during the summer. This year the question of carrying on these departments is complicated by lack of funds. At a meeting Thursday, the officers decided to continue them at as full capacity as funds would allow.

The Social Service Department follows up former camp girls and Open Air School children through the summer, as well as keeping in touch with the homes of all the camp girls and Open Air School children now in these institutions. It arranges for vacations for the camp girls and Open Air School children and obtains jobs for them. The open air schools operate during the entire summer except two weeks just before the opening of the other schools. The plan for open air school education is six days a week through the entire year. The society pays for meals of all children in these schools who cannot afford to buy their own. At present there are 286 children in the two Open Air Schools and the society is paying wholly or in part for 70 per cent of the children at a cost of 25 cents a day per child for three meals.

The Residential Open Air School is maintained in conjunction with the Night and Day camp, is a seven-day-a-week institution with boarding as well as school facilities. In this institution also the society carries the cost of all children who cannot afford to pay their own expenses.

Work at Koch Hospital goes on all summer and a clinic in North St. Louis where cases are diagnosed and treated is being conducted by the society.

In the Night and Day camp there is much more necessity for work in the summer than in the winter. The summer capacity of the camp is 65 and it costs the society about $1.08 a day per girl to maintain this camp, which is for self-supporting girls and women exclusively.

The administration expense on the undertakings of the organization is about 10 per cent of the entire budget.

"FIRE-LANES" IMPRACTICABLE, SAY PANZER AND M'KELVEY

Fire Chief and Public Safety Director Think Proposed Plan Would Increase Number of Accidents.

Establishment in St. Louis of "fire lanes" streets specifically designated always to be used by fire apparatus in responding to alarms, was declared impracticable by Fire Chief Panzer and Director Public Safety McKelvey yesterday. The April grand jury, in its final report Friday, recommended that such a system with automatic warning signals along the routes, be put in force here to prevent accidents.

Objections of McKelvey and Chief Panzer to the proposal were that too much time would be lost in answering alarms and that accidents would increase if all apparatus ran over the same streets at one time. They both expressed approval of the Kansas City plan, by which downtown areas are divided into districts and automatic gongs send traffic to the right curbing throughout affected sections when an alarm sounds. Installation cost was held too great to have this system considered here now.

McKelvey is having an ordinance drawn providing for $25 to $500 fines for the use of bells on any vehicles except fire, police, salvage and public health department apparatus. Large copper bells, capable of being heard 12 to 15 blocks, were ordered for the Fire Department shortly after the recent street car, automobile and fire truck collision which resulted in three deaths. They are to arrive in about a month.

WORK ON NORTH HILLS CLUB LINKS TO START THIS WEEK

Members of the North Hills Country Club, Florissant road, which is in process of formation, will celebrate the beginning of construction of their three golf courses this week. Samuel Lyle, a construction superintendent of a New York and London company which builds golf courses, has arrived here and selected workmen. He said that the ground for the North Hills links possesses many natural advantages. There will be two 18-hole courses and one of nine holes.

The first members of the board of governors of the club have been appointed by the Liberty Central Trust Co., which is trustee for the club estate. They are Guy Alexander, W. E. Russell, C. E. Bernet, George A. Bayle Jr. and Erastus Wells. Ten more are to be appointed. The club membership will elect their successors after the first year.

GIRL'S GRADE IS ALMOST 100

With an average percentage of 99 10-11, Mary Humphrey Yarbrough, a daughter of Prof. J. H. Yarbrough of the Belleville Township High School, ranks highest of 987 pupils of the seventh and eighth grade in the schools of St. Clair County. She made 100 per cent in every one of the 11 studies of the test with the exception of writing, in which her average was 99 per cent. The girl is physically weak because of illness. She, Celest V. Peach of Belleville and Grace Renner of Lebanon will receive special diplomas ranking one, two and three in the final test. The graduation exercises will be held at the Township High School June 14.

Do you buy tires this way?

There are two important factors to consider in buying a tire:
(1) The tire itself.
(2) The policy of the maker.

When you buy a tire you want to be certain that it is the policy of the maker to give you honest value in long, uninterrupted service at reasonable cost. That its tread will last the life of the tire, giving continued traction and protection against skids.

DRYS' SUPPORT TO BE FACTOR IN COUNTRY

Belief Prevails That McKinley, Rural Candidate, Was Strengthened by Last-Minute Entries of City Men.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 3.—Five questions about the race between eight Republicans for the nomination for the United States senatorship are agitating Republican politicians. They want to know whether the Kiel-Goldstein wards in St. Louis have been committed for delivery to State Senator David M. Proctor of Kansas City. If so, how will the Mayor square himself with William Sacks of St. Louis, an aspirant who managed Kiel's last fight for the mayoralty? Then, will City Collector Koeln follow the Mayor and Goldstein on the senatorship? Who will get the support of Republican Committeeman Jacob L. Babler, Walter S. Dickey of Kansas City, E. E. L. McJimsey of Springfield and Charles D. Morris of St. Joseph, who nearly always are found behind a common candidate? Lastly, who will be supported by the Rev. W. C. Shupp, and the Anti-Saloon League?

Besides Proctor and Sacks, the other candidates are former Lieutenant-Governor John C. McKinley of Unionville, Sam A. Clark of Carrollton, Attorney-General Jesse W. Barrett, R. R. Brewster of Kansas City, Col. John H. Parker of St. Louis and Sterling P. Bond of St. Louis. This is the largest group of Republicans that have contended under the primary law for this nomination. Proctor, first to file, had the field to himself for months. Then McKinley got in, but still the rest waited. Finally in the last week came a rush of five. Several others hovered around the brink, but did not take the plunge, notably Charles D. Morris and Congressman Faust of St. Joseph, who decided at 10 p. m. on the last night to leave the race to the previous entrants.

City Committee Defied.

At the instance of Senator Spencer, who ostensibly wants no brother Senator from St. Louis when it again becomes his time to run, four years hence, the Republican City Committee of St. Louis adopted a resolution last week backed by 17 of its 28 members, notifying the State that the organization in St. Louis wanted no St. Louisan to run for the Senate. Two days later, Barrett, also a St. Louisan, took the challenge and filed. In his wake came Parker and Bond and finally, on the afternoon of the last day for filing, Sacks waded the Rubicon, having made decision and mailed out announcements the night before.

Proctor went to St. Louis a day or so after the committee had acted, was warmly received by the Mayor and Goldstein, and apparently became the favorite at court, so to speak. He already had obtained the outspoken aid of State Senators Blodgett, Anderson and Warner, with whom he has been very friendly in the Senate.

On the other hand, however, is Sacks, to whom the St. Louis organization is under obligation for financial aid, who managed the last campaign of Kiel for Mayor and who long has been a political friend of Babler, Dickey, Morris and McJimsey. Money always is required to finance a political campaign, partcularly where "organization" is stressed. It is wondered by some rural politicians whether Sacks, reputed wealth as a Texas oil operator, St. Louis banker and office building owner, might not have a helpful effect on his standing with the organization as a primary possibility.

Friend of Jake Hamon.

Sacks was a friend and political associate of the late Jake Hamon, Republican National Committeeman from Oklahoma, and through him and Babler became close to the inner group in the Republican National Committee. Whether that will avail him in St. Louis must await primary day for determination.

In that connection it has been observed within the last year that in Republican affairs in Missouri a singular harmony of ultimate aim has existed between Babler and the Rev. Shupp, superintendent in Missouri for the Anti-Saloon League.

During recent weeks, when Dickey and McJimsey were casting the dice of fate to choose between "to run" and "not to run," it became known that in all likelihood Shupp would not have opposed either. Both are friends of Babler.

Sacks put up a barrier between himself and the Anti-Saloon League backing which it is expected that not even the friendship of Babler could overcome, however, when he declared for beer and light wine, although favoring strict law enforcement.

Just who will profit by indorsement of the militant drys is another question. It is known that the Anti-Saloon League is anxious to find a Republican dry enough to merit its backing and yet who has sufficient strength to defeat Senator Reed should be obtain the Democratic nomination, that being the central Anti-Saloon League aim in this campaign. Up to the present time, the Rev. Shupp has not warmed up to Proctor, Barrett or McKinley. Further developments in this direction

MEETING ON MINIMUM WAGE FOR WOMEN

Commission of Legislature to Investigate Needs of Law on Question.

Plans for drafting a bill providing for a permanent commission on minimum wages for women in Missouri are to be taken up Friday afternoon at a meeting in the Chamber of Comerce Building of the commission appointed at the last session of the State Legislature to investigate the need for such action.

Miss Marie Ames, a vice-president of the St. Louis League of Women Voters and a member of the present commission, said yesterday that the fixing of a set minimum wage for the entire State is not contemplaed. Instead an elastic scale, devised to meet local and individual conditions, is the aim.

The bill hoped to be put through the Legislature will likely provide for a permanent commission of three, a representative each of the employing class, the employes and the general public. One of the three is to be a woman. The fixing of wages will be by temporary boards called to consider specific requests or complaints, and will be based on the cost of living in the locality in question, the nature of the work and the amount of training or experience needed by the employer.

"To Protect the Woman."

Obedience to the commission's findings will be mandatory, while power to reconvene the temporary boards, when living conditions change in cases already considered, will also be sought.

"We are trying to protect the woman in industry who has no trade union association or other organization to protect her," Miss Ames said. "At the same time our plan provides for full fairness to the individual employer, who will have every opportunity to put his side of the question before the temporary boards. For this reason I expect the bill to go through successfully."

Campaign Is Planned.

An educational campaign, to be pushed by women's organizations, to show both industrial and rural communities that the commission is not intended for the arbitrary fixing of an inflexible minimum wage for all industries, regardless of circumstances, will be carried on before the Legislature convenes next January.

"Wages for women in Missouri compare very favorably with those in other States," Miss Ames declared. "Many concerns are now paying well above any minimum that might be established for their class, and they will not be affected in any way by the formation of the commission."

State Senator David M. Proctor of Kansas City is chairman of the committee to draft the proposed bill. Miss Ames and Frank Smith, a St. Louis representative in the State Legislature, are the other committee members. Fenton Stockard of Springfield is chairman of the investigating commission, and Senator Peter Anderson of St. Louis is one of its nine members.

will attract much interest, for while dry indorsement is expected to hurt in the cities, it has been shown to have a helpful effect in the rural sections.

Old Guard in Quandary.

Two of the interesting questions hinge around the probable recipient of the Koeln support and the quandary in which the Old Guard finds itself with none of its wheelhorses in the race. Dickey, Morris and McJimsey conferred, deliberated and then refrained. At the last minute they considered Faust, but he followed their example. Now they know not where to throw their votes.

Clark, Parker and Bond are expected to figure little in their calculations.

Then there is said to be personal objection by some of the Dickey men to both Brewster and Proctor, it being said of Brewster by some of the Kansas City "boss" faction that he is too close to Gov. Hyde to suit them.

Whether they will cast in their lot with Sacks, McKinley or Barrett is unknown, though it is reported that McKinley is receiving favorable consideration from them. General opinion here is that the former Lieutenant-Governor, more than any other, benefited by the large number of filings, for most of the late entries as city residents cut into the support of each other, while he, relying upon the "one-gallus boys," came through with little damage.

Koeln's Intentions Unknown.

Koeln's intentions are utterly unknown up State, though it has been suggested once or twice that he has always been friendly toward Barrett. Whether he will back the Attorney-General, follow the Mayor and Goldstein on the Proctor band wagon or order the light wine and beer of Sacks is yet beyond the veil.

Gov. Hyde has studiously declined to commit himself openly, although he is known to be a strong friend of Brewster and is expected to do what he can to aid in the Kansas City man's nomination. In like manner, the other elective State officers have adopted a policy of silence, though it is thought that Secretary of State Becker and State Treasurer Thompson are for Barrett at heart. State Auditor Hackmann has manifested no leanings, though a number of his employes are for Proctor.

H. Max Steindel to Sail for Europe.

H. Max Stendel, solo cellist of the Symphony Orchestra, will sail in about 10 days on the steamship Finland for a three months' vacation abroad. He plans to visit France, Italy and Austria, and later to meet relatives in Germany. He hopes to unearth some new compositions for the violoncello.

DEMENTED MAN STABS THREE WITH ICEPICK

Looking for Job "Picking Ice on Streets," He Is Felled With Broomstick and Captured.

Schivo Zegarac, 37 years old, of 26 South Seventeenth street, who became demented and stabbed three men on Olive street, downtown, at 7:30 yesterday morning, is being held under observation at the city hospital. He attacked several other passers-by until he was knocked insensible with a broomstick.

Zegarac told the policemen who finally took him into custody that he was looking for a job "picking ice on the streets." He was armed with an ice pick. With this he attacked Albert Saettel, of 1829 East Prairie avenue, at Ninth and Olive, stabbing Saettel in the right arm, without warning.

He proceeded west to Tenth street, where his next victim was Simon Bascharra, 67, a street sweeper, who he stabbed in the left chest, above the heart. A little farther on he plunged his pick into the left arm of Sam Copalo, another street sweeper, then turned to attack Tom Verreos, proprietor of a restaurant at 1131 Olive street, who was able to beat him off.

By this time many persons were pursuing Zagarac, who struck toward all who passed him. At Twelfth street he was knocked down by a broomstick in the hands of Ben Campbell, of 1210 Chouteau avenue. Those whom he had stabbed were treated at the city hospital and were able to leave there soon.

ACCUSED OF STEALING WAR STAR

Two boys, 13 and 15 years old, were arrested on King's highway while in possession of 16 stars, made of brass and engraved with the names of soldiers who lost their lives in France in the World War, which had been taken from the trees in the parkway between Natural Bridge and Lorraine avenues.

Howard Shipley, 5026 Claxton avenue, who had seen the boys taking the stars, notified the police. One boy had nine stars and the other six. They "guessed" they wanted the stars to "play with." The stars were placed on the trees by the American Legon.

MASS MEETING TO OPPOSE DRAINAGE CANAL IS PLANNED

Improvement Association in East St. Louis to Co-operate With Granite City Club in Opposing Project.

Opposition to the proposed $8,000,000 East Side drainage canal and appreciation of the Post-Dispatch's comprehensive survey of the project, published May 26, were expressed last night at a meeting of the East End Improvement Association, composed of property owners in the residence section of East St. Louis, east of Forty-second street. In its north and south course the canal will cross East St. Louis at Eighty-first street, cutting the residence section in two. It will intersect many streets.

Following a discussion, in which nearly every member present participated, it was decided to call a mass meeting in the near future to get the sentiment of as many of the residents as may attend. The estimated population of the district is about 4500. No tentative date was set for the meeting, but it was suggested that it should be held within the next 10 days. Last night's meeting was held in the Edgemont Baptist Church, Eighty-sixth and State streets.

"It is needless for me to tell you that the drainage canal project is of vital interest to this association," said President Mark Millard, displaying a copy of the Post-Dispatch containing a history of the project. "This newspaper has given us an opportunity to be heard, a thing we had been striving for in the last five years.

Letters Were Ignored.

"We, as an association and as individuals, have been writing letters of protest to the East Side Levee and Sanitary District and to the East St. Louis Journal, but our communications were ignored. The Post-Dispatch has brought this matter to public attention and has placed us in a position where we can accomplish something.

"We know how the residents of East St. Louis, particularly the taxpayers, feel about this project, but I would suggest a mass meeting, before we take any official action. In the meantime, the association will co-operate with the Granite City Commercial Club, which has retained counsel to prevent the resumption of the digging of the canal."

The Rev. Christopher Goelz, pastor of St. Philip's (Catholic) Church, 8300 St. Clair avenue, who has taken an active part in the opposition to the proposed canal, offered a motion that the Post-Dispatch be given a vote of thanks for the service it had rendered the citizens of the East Side in arousing the taxpayers to the objectionable course of the levee board. The motion was unanimously adopted.

"The Post-Dispatch article was the first thorough, comprehensive and accurate exposition of the situation ever printed," he said. "It shows the enormous expense which is contemplated, and shows how more than half of it could be avoided. We have never been able to get an expression of our sentiment in the East St. Louis Journal, and, as a consequence, the levee board has been able to carry on in a high-handed way without any interruption on the part of the citizens.

People Do Not Want Canal.

"As the article pointed out, the present levee board was elected on the understanding that it would revoke the contract for what is known as Project No. 12, and which had been awarded by a previous board. Now the members say they are legally bound to carry out the contract, which calls for excavating at 35 cents a cubic yard, when the same work could be done at 10 cent sa cubic yard. But that is not the only thing. The people of the East Side do not want the levee, and they object to being taxed $1.43 on a $100 valuation for something they do not want and which they can get along without."

At the conclusion of the meeting the secretary, W. H. Rabe, was directed to send a letter to the Post-Dispatch, expressing the appreciation of the association.

Jury Fixes Value of Land Taken for Canal at $200 Per Acre.

A verdict placing the value of the land at Centerville taken for the construction of the East Side Drainage Canal at $200 an acre was returned last night by a jury in the Circuit Court at Belleville. No damage was allowed for adjoining property, although the land owners showed that the canal would deprive them of access to the eastern ends of their farms, but damage to the amount of $1391.70 for crops destroyed were allowed, bringin the total amount of damage to $6149.70.

The drainage project was referred to as the "Baby Panama Canal" by counsel representing the land owners, in their arguments to the jury. The value of the land taken had been estimated by the owners at $500 an acre, and that of the land adjoining at $400 an acre. Real estate experts called by the Board of Trustees of the East Side Levee and Sanitary District appraised the value of the land at from $100 to $200 an acre.

The owners of the property have announced that they will appeal the case.

School of Fine Arts Closes.

The school year at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts was closed last night with a dinner at the school, Skinker road and Lindell boulevard. The Wayman Crow medal for general progress was awarded to Miss Helen Beccard.

Romantic Story of Life of Cahan, Jewish Editor

Socialist editorials, wishing with all his heart that he had time to write the other things.

His literary discovery was an American realist. There was a man writing books in America, he discovered, who did not write according to the American formula. His name was Howells—William D. Howells. This man evidently had some other message than that "they married and lived happily ever after." He was breaking from the traditions more and more boldly.

"America," Mr. Cahan explained to me, "was at this time losing a good deal of her freedom. The big fortunes were being made. The trusts were becoming more and more dominant. The rule of property was becoming more and more rigorous and the individual had less and less chance for self-expression. This repression began to be reflected in American literature. Mr. Howells' treatment of a subject was quite intelligible to a Russian."

Finally "Arrives" in America.

Cahan read Howells' novels as fast as they came from the press and he passed them on to other unthought-of readers in that part of Europe known as New York's East Side. One day Howells himself wandered through the East Side looking for atmosphere and almost accidentally met young Cahan. That a Socialist organizer and labor agitator should refer to his novels by name was most astonishing. He made an appointment to "discuss literature" with this strange person and his amazement grew. Criticism had never been a highly developed art in America. It was second nature to every Russian, and Mr. Howells soon found himself being analyzed and microscopically examined in most extraordinary fashion. A few years later, when Abraham Cahan took his place among American novelists, the critic who introduced him most enthusiastically to the American public was William Dean Howells.

But Cahan at this time had not yet reached America. That event followed his resignation as editor of Forward. The Socialist daily was a going concern, but it was not a newspaper. Cahan had done his duty by it and implored the comrades to let him rest. He pleaded poor health, nervous breakdown, anything, and everything but his pent-up longing to write about the things that lay outside. Little things, some of them, things that it would be beneath the dignity of a Socialist journal to put down in black and white. Forward was for the purpose of expounding Socialism. Almost every Jew was a Socialist when he first landed from Russia, but unless Socialism were constantly expounded, how could they all be kept in line?

He Is Here at Last.

But eventually Abraham Cahan broke away and made a bee line for America. He went to the office of the New York Commercial Advertiser, a "capitalist sheet," and asked for a job as a reporter. Lincoln Steffens, one of the strangest "tools of capitalism" that ever represented that monster in America, was then city editor. That Cahan was a Socialist meant nothing to him. He wanted writers who were interested in life. Cahan was more than that. He was eager. Within a few months Cahan took his place in Steffens' council of budding American literati, and the fact that he was an East Side Socialist only made him all the more interesting. Carl Hovey was a member of the group, also Norman Hapgood, Hutchins Hapgood and Edwin Lefevre. Abraham Cahan had the time of his life.

But breaking into America had its embarrassments. The first one came the very first day he went to work. Steffens asked him to phone for some information. Cahan couldn't do it. He had lived on the East Side for 10 years and had never used a telephone. The telephone was even then common in America. Cahan had read about it. He understood the theory perfectly, and he could have written an essay for Steffens explaining the exact part which the telephone was playing in hastening the fall of capitalism; but actually taking down the receiver—that was a different matter. That was not a thing to be discussed. It was something to do. To this day, Abraham Cahan dates his arrival in America, not from the time he came down the gangplank, but from the moment he finally got the receiver off the hook. These were wild young years for Abraham Cahan. He didn't discard his theories, but no longer did he live in them. He was as much a Socialist as ever, but he found himself learning things that were never put in book. And then he had the fun of putting them in books whether they had anything to do with surplus value or not. He still maintained his acquaintance with the East Side, but his life was no longer bounded by it. New Yorkers enjoyed his East Side stories. The Sunday editors began to bid for them. They were fresh. They were human. They had a point, too, but it was almost sure to be a point which a West Sider would never have discovered and an East Sider would never have talked about.

One of His Ghetto Stories.

There was an Italian boy, for instance, over on Essex street, who fell in love with a Jewish girl. He wanted to marry her and her parents consented if he would agree to become a Jew. He agreed. The Jews of his acquaintance, particularly the girl's brother, didn't live a life so very different from his. They went to the synagogue perhaps twice a year, and as for kosher food, it had its points of excellence. Only the initial ceremonies frightened him, but what were they compared to losing the girl? But the girl's mother ruled that household and, after the wedding Angelo discovered that he had miscalculated sadly. It was no easy going Jew which he was expected to be. He had to be orthodox. He had to obey the Mosaic code to the last jot and tittle of the law. In the morning, for instance, he could not eat breakfast until he had wound the phylacteries seven times around his left arm and over his forehead and completed the long Jewish prayers.

"Why do you make me do this?" Angelo protested. "It isn't fair. Not one Jew in a hundred has to stand for so much. You don't even ask it of Samuel, your own son."

"Yes," mamma replied, "but he is a Jew and we can be sure of him, but you will have to be watched for a long time yet."

Obviously this was not socialism, but it was life on the East Side and Abraham Cahan enjoyed it. So did the people over in the world which he had just discovered. It was possible, he learned, to be a socialist and still retain an interest in such extraneous incidents as this. That discovery was an important one to the socialist movement. Also it had much to do with the history of the Jews throughout America. For the time came when Lincoln Steffens left the Commercial Advertiser to go with McClure's Magazine. More news and less literature was his successor's aim, and Abraham Cahan eventually resigned. Then at the earnest solicitation of the party leaders he then became head of the Jewish Daily Forward. But he was a different editor.

Again He Edits Forward.

He announced ahead of time that he would be a different editor on no other condition would he accept the job. He must have a free hand. He must be allowed to run a newspaper. The paper must be allowed to tell about life, whether inside the Socialist movement or out. The result is the present Jewish Daily Forward, with 200,000 circulation; a paper with a power almost incalculable; a paper that has transformed the East Side. No other Jewish periodical, radical or conservative, has anything like its prestige. When Cahan took hold of it on this second occasion it contained much more Socialism, but, with 6000 circulation, it seemed to make little difference to anybody except the Socialists what it did contain. Today it talks intimately every day with nearly every Jew in New York and other cities who has not yet learned the English language, and it makes a vast difference to everybody what that paper says.

"What is your biggest achievement?" I asked Mr. Cahan.

Mr. Cahan dodged the question. He preferred to talk about the achievements of the Jewish Daily Forward. He did not look upon it as a one-man affair. It was but the instrument through which the East Side had become articulate and was thus finding itself. So long as its newspapers were mere organs of opinion, he said, this could not have happened, for the human mind learns to express itself, not by swallowing general principles and attempting to apply them, but through observing concrete incidents and working up from them to the abstract principles involved.

"Take the question of labor unionism," said Mr. Cahan. "The East Side has always believed in unionism, but in spite of that nothing very important seemed to happen. It was not until the East Side became articulate that effective unionism developed, and I am proud of the part which Forward has played in this truly revolutionary work. For the unions have revolutionized the East Side. They have made the clothing worker not only a self-respecting, independent and relatively prosperous citizen, but an eager co-operator in America's industrial advance. For these unions have been constructive. They have built up the clothing industry. They have accomplished this not through endless argument over economic dogmas, but through straight dealing with industrial facts. Of course, Forward has aided the movement in every way it could.

How He Wins Strikes.

"But Forward could have done nothing," Mr. Cahan continued, "if it had not first become a newspaper. That was my big fight. In the old days, a strike could be declared and no one would know about it. We have changed all that. I could cite a hundred incidents. In one case a bakers' strike had been completely lost when Forward took it up and won the strike in just two days. We did it by appealing to every housewife on the East Side—every buyer of bread. We asked what conditions they wanted in the bakeries, and we stated very simply the conditions which existed contrasted with those for which the union was fighting. The answer was instantaneous.

"Now, suppose that Forward, instead of becoming a newspaper, had devoted itself to long articles advocating unionism. The articles might be excellent, but few people would have read them, and when such a situation as this arose, we would have been helpless. But by printing stories, by entering into the intimacies of life in home and business and street, we achieved a degree of power which sometimes almost scares us. It wasn't Socialism, but it was mighty good Socialist tactics and little by little the dogmatists had to admit it."

Mr. Cahan has found time in an extraordinarily busy life to write several successful novels. It was "Yekl" which so aroused the enthusiasm of Mr. Howells. "The Rise of David Levinsky" is his most popular book. Others are "The Imported Bridegroom" and "The White Terror and The Red."

"What is your great message to the Jews of America?" I asked Mr. Cahan.

"To become Americans," he said.

The answer was something of a shock. I know that Mr. Cahan had little sympathy with certain propaganda known as "Americanization." His paper is printed in Yiddish. Editorially it is definitely critical of some generally accepted governmental principles here. It still stands for Socialism. But America has a definite meaning to Mr. Cahan. It is the land of reality. It is the place where things are done, not a mere forum where they are talked about.

America as Jews' Promised Land.

"Yes, I suppose the answer will sound strange," he said. "Some well meaning people proposed sometime ago that all foreign language papers be suppressed. How these people were ever going to make Americans out of these foreigners through cutting all lines of communication with them I never could figure out. The Jewish Daily Forward however, has kept the lines open. We are probably the largest single school of English in the United States. We have made it a regular practice to print easy lessons in English and we have urged our readers to use the language in preference to their own. To us Yiddish is just a fact to be dealt with, not a sacred principle to be forever cherished. One can be as good a Jew in English as he can in any other language. In America he can be a better one, for he can live a much larger life."

"Who is your American hero?" I asked.

"Lincoln," he said. "The life of Abraham Lincoln should be an inspiration to every Jew. He was a pioneer. He was forward looking. He was steadfast in his faith, but he was not a dogmatist. He dealt in realities. He faced concrete situations with concrete thinking. He was great in his simplicity, his teachableness, his ability to grow. He typifies America to me. If the term 'Americanization' ever comes to mean the acceptance of a fixed formula, America will be no longer great.

"The Jews," Mr. Cahan concluded, "sohuld have come to America a thousand years before they did. There is nothing to stop them from realizing the full measure of manhood here. They can enter any profession. They can engage in any business. They can join with their comrades of every race to help make this nation all that a nation may become. There is no anti-Semitism here."

"No anti-Semitism!" I interrupted. "Except after 6 o'clock," he added, "and that doesn't count."

"ANIMAL ACT" LAWS SUGGESTED

House of Commons Urges Legislation to Prevent Cruelty.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 3.—Wild animals used for exhibition purposes or in "animal acts" in the circuses and theaters should be protected from the wanton cruelty displayed by some of their trainers, declares the report of a House of Commons committee.

Performances in which the animals are terrorized or subjected to risk of injury should be forbidden, the report recommends, the training of chimpanzee and all other anthropoid apes should be prohibited and performances of the larger carnivora, such as lions and tigers, carefully supervised.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MONTEVIDEO, April . 5.—The British island of Tristan da Cunha, in the middle of the South Atlantic, with its 120 odd souls, mostly descendants of Napoleon's St. Helena guards, who hardly hear from civilization more than once in two years, is at last to have a missionary and radio communication.

For more than 18 months an English clergyman named Rogers and his wife have been trying to reach the island from Cape Town and finally induced the captain of the Japanese steamship Tacoma Maru, which left Cape Town on March 26 for the River Plate, to deviate from his regular course and land them at Tristan da Cunha.

W. Denis Myers, a passenger on the Tacoma Maru and a lawyer of Cape Town, who has just arrived here, tells of the vessel's call at the island with Mr. and Mrs. Rogers and thinks the population is truly in need of a missionary.

"The student of evolution, the psychologist as well as the missionary, would find much to interest him in this curious, forgotten community," says Myers. "The settlement originated, it is said, when a detachment of soldiers who were guarding Napoleon at St. Helena, to the north, were dispatched to Tristan da Cunha to forestall the remote possibility that Napoleon might attempt to escape thither. Two of the soldiers remained and, importing wives from St. Helena, laid the foundations of one of the strangest settlements in the world.

"From time to time shipwrecked mariners have added to the inhabitants on the island, who have married and intermarried till relationship after a century has become a hopeless tangle. Nearly all the present population were born on the island and have a colored strain in their blood. They speak English with a peculiar drawl, resembling West of England speech. There is one old Italian among them, shipwrecked from a sailing vessel, who appears to have forgotten his own name and in fact his mother tongue.

Continued intermarriage has in this generation produced some pitiful children. Some of them are idiots, some lack limbs, some are deaf and dumb. The population does nothing agriculturally except to cultivate potatoes. On this food, together with fish and penguin eggs they chiefly exist. There are few wild cattle and a few sheep and out of the wool of the latter the women knit rough woolen stockings. That is their only manufacture. They wear old clothes, mostly seamen's, begged from the ships, usually wanderers, windjammers, that visit the island at rare intervals. There being no commerce, there is no need for money.

Regards Visitors Curiously.

"The islander's attitude toward visitors is curious. As he stands before one his head droops, his arms fall listlessly to his side and he answers limply and uninterestedly questions as to his life and mode of existence. He seems to have no other interest than to trade a penguin, an albatross skin, or a seal's flapper for an old shirt, a little tobacco, or anything from civilization that would be useful. He articulates slowly and with difficulty as if he had almost forgotten speech. I did not see one smile.

"Tristan da Cunha is a mountain 4000 feet high rising out of the ocean wastes like an inverted pudding bowl, and as we saw it, was wreathed in swirling mists. The little colony lives in stone huts on a green strip of pasture land at the foot of the mountain.

"Having no commerce and no money, these people certainly cannot worship Mammon, but it is doubtful if they worship God. The two plucky missionaries who have exiled themselves among them for at least two years will try to teach them. They brought large quantities of supplies and civilized comforts and a radio set, so that henceforth Tristan de Cunha wil not be cut off entirely "from the outside world."

Y. W. C. A. Bible Meeting June 17-29.

The eighth annual Piasa Bible Conference of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held at Arcadia Heights, Ironton, Mo., June 17 to 29, with a large advance registration of St. Louis women. Miss Angy Manning Taylor of Chicago, a Bible teacher and founder of a number of missions in the mountains of Virginia, will be one of the teachers; others include Dr. William Ray Dobyns of Birmingham, Ala., and Dr. Henry Blanchard of Wheaton College.

NIGHT AND DAY BANK LIQUIDATOR APPOINTED

D. W. Ross, by Working on Salary, to Save Depositors $18,000 to $20,000, Says Chief.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 3.—D. W. Ross, bank examiner, who has had charge of the Night and Day Bank since Jan. 6, when it was closed by the Commissioner of Finance, today was appointed Special Deputy Commissioner of Finance at a salary of $350 a month, by Commissioner Hughes to complete the liquidation of the bank's affairs. As examiner, Ross had been receiving $200 a month and expenses up to $6 a day.

By thus employing Ross, Commissioner Hughes estimates that he will save the depositors $18,000 to $20,000, as, under the statute, he is empowered to appoint a Deputy Commissioner in liquidation proceedings who may receive 3 to 5 per cent of money collected, which would be $18,000 on approximately $600,000 that Hughes expects to collect in the Night and Day liquidation.

Hughes will continue to supervise the liquidation, with Ross actively in charge.

Joker in Fordney-McCumber Measure Makes Possible Extortion of $750,000,000 Annually in Increased Prices.

A careful inquiry into the provisions of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill now pending in Congress has been made by the Post-Dispatch and New York World. The results of this investigation in which each of the provisions of the measure are reviewed will be presented in a series of articles, the third of which follows herewith. Another will be published tomorrow.

By ELLIOTT THURSTON.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Investigation of the cotton schedule in the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, which Republican leaders are now trying to shove through to passage in the Senate, discloses the well laid groundwork for another contemplated raid on the public's pocketbook, this time to the possible tune of $750,000,000 a year.

Tariff experts who have dissected the technical phraseology of the cotton schedule arrive at that resounding figure as the added burden which could be imposed upon the buyers of all sorts of cotton goods, especially the numerous items of wearing apparel, if the bill lives to become a law.

Other schedules designed to extort an "invisible" tax from the consumer are not so well disguised. The cotton schedule conceals its mission ingeniously.

It's Lippitt's Handiwork.

The joker lies in paragraph 905A, which prescribes, on top of other rates already jacked up an average of 45 per cent above the present Underwood tariff, that an additional duty of from 12 to 15 per cent shall be levied on "all cotton cloths woven with eight or more harnesses, or with Jacquard motions, or with drop boxes, or with lappet or swivel attachments." Which looks dull and innocent. But this is what investigation shows:

That joker is the handiwork of the skilled veteran of tariff making, former United States Senator Henry F. Lippitt of Rhode Island, superlobbyist for a group of politically powerful manufacturers, general manager and a director of the enormously prosperous Manville company, which has extensive plants in Rhode Island and keeps the matter of its earnings secret.

Practically every yard of cotton cloth imported into this country would be subject to the additional tax superimposed by this paragraph.

Would Create Embargo.

Importations for the last 20 years, under both high and low tariffs, have never exceeded a fraction of domestic consumption. But the joker would knock that small fraction in the head.

It would create an absolute embargo, thereby opening up the way for marketing domestic goods at prices as high as the traffic will bear.

Here is what tariff experts for the minority side of the Senate Finance Committee interpret the joker to mean to the women shoppers of the country:

Ginghams, striped cotton flannel, flannelette, dotted Swisses, colored sateens, fruit-of-the-loom—the largest selling cloth in America — and nearly every other kind and grade of cotton cloth in use could be doubled at retail prices by reason of the monopoly rights the joker would accord its beneficiaries.

For example, on the cheaper grades of ginghams, used for aprons and workingmen's shirts, an increase of 161 per cent over the present rates of duty in the Underwood Tariff Bill is provided. On cotton imitation flannel, used for women's and children's wear, the present duty is 2½ per cent, or 4 cents a yard.

Some of the Increases.

The duty under the joker would be over 8 cents a yard, an increase of 103 per cent above the current tariff.

Jacquard waisting, used for women's and children's wear and men's shirts, now pays five to six cents a yard duty. The "Jacquard motions" detail in the joker would make the duty 13.78 cents a yard, or an increase of 136 per cent. Fancy flannelette, used for the same purposes, and now paying five cents a yard duty, would be caught under the "eight or more harnesses" clause. The duty would be 15 cents a yard, or 185 per cent higher than before.

Colored cotton sateens, used as a substitute for silk, linings and women's underclothing, would likewise fall into the "eight or more harnesses" trap. The duty is now 11 cents a yard. It would become 28 cents a yard, or 146 per cent more. The popular fruit-of-the-loom used for all sorts of women's apparel and men's shirts, now pays three cents a yard duty.

The new rate would be 5.8 cents a yard, a 96 per cent boost. Chambray, used for dresses, now pays two and would pay four cents a yard duty, this being 100 per cent more.

Aim Is to Allow Retail Boosts.

As to cotton handkerchiefs, they would also be snared by the "eight or more harnesses' net. Whereas, the duty is now 46 cents a dozen, it would skyrocket to $1.18 a dozen, just 158 per cent higher.

The handkerchief now retailing for 25 cents could, according to estimates, be raised to fully 50 cents.

Dotted swisses, likewise popular, would be entrapped by the "swivel" clause. The swivel makes the dot. A doubling of the retail price is estimated as the probable result of the proposed duty. Bleached nainsook, bed sheeting and pillow cases appear to escape the joker, but are amply taken care of elsewhere with respective increases of 52 and 86 per cent above the present duties.

All fancy dress ginghams fall under the "drop box" portion of the joker. Instead of 2.9 cents, they would pay a duty of 8.4 a yard, or 190 per cent more.

The full significance of the exorbitant increases on the foregoing materials lies in the fact that under the present rates importations are now negligible, so there is no reason for putting on increases except to allow retail prices to be boosted as high as the public will endure and to insure that no relief could come from increasing importations. Certainly none of this cloth will be able to get into the country over the towering tariff barricade.

Could Double Hosiery Price.

All doubts as to who dictated the joker to the Republican leaders are dispelled by consulting the testimony of the Senate hearings on the cotton schedule. There will be found the Lippitt draft of the joker, as handed to the obedient draftsmen of the bill and inserted virtually word for word.

The minority experts are still at work exposing the consequences of this unrivaled cotton schedule. They estimate that cotton hosiery could be increased 50 per cent in retail price under the extraordinary duties proposed.

Some notion of the tremendous increases can be obtained from this comparison: hose and half-hose now paying a duty of $1.50 a dozen would have to pay $2.45 a dozen under the terms of the Fordney-McCumber bill. Estimates are that in terms of retail prices this means that hosiery now selling for $1.50 a pair could be increased to $2.25.

Similarly, they show that by the tax on laces, amounting to 50 per cent more than present duties, the inexpensive varieties sold mainly for dress trimmings could be almost eliminated from the stores.

Tribute Exacted of Public.

Likewise, duties on cotton gloves, dictated by Lucius N. Littauer of New York, as super-lobbyist for cotton glove manufacturers, would permit the retail price of the universally used cotton glove that sold for 50 cents before the war, and has been slowly getting back to that price, to go soaring up to $1 a pair. Twenty-two inch cotton gloves could go from $1 up to $1.75 a pair in the same way.

The imprint of the favored few exacting tributa at the expense of the general public marks the entire cotton schedule. The record shows no serious attempt to compare competitive conditions at home and abroad, or to bring out the profits reaped.

From another record, Department of Commerce statistics for 1919, it appears that the cotton manufacturers as a whole earned 18 per cent on their total capitalization after paying all costs of production, wages, income taxes and salaries to officers. This was under the present Underwood tariff bill, which they consider ruinously low.

KEWANEE

If you propose to build an apartment house, and you hope that the people who live in it will be contented enough to pay a fat rent, don't skimp on the heating boiler.

If you want your tenants to refer to you as a "mighty nice man," instead of a "tight-fisted clam,"—if you want them to speak to you at church, which is the big test of social standing, put a Kewanee All-Steel boiler in your building.

If sometime you want to sell the apartment building, the Kewanee boiler will be your strongest selling argument. And contented "tenants" will be another. But remember there isn't any such animule as a contented tenant with a heating boiler that is spasmodic or temperamental or which stutters.

Going to bed to keep warm is out of date. Imitating the Eskimo and wearing your furs to breakfast is passay. The Kewanee All-Steel boiler, which has no joints or knuckles to leak and crack, is the only type of heating boiler which guarantees continuous heat and keeps the plumber safe and sound in his own home.

A Special message to tenants:
Don't be an Eskimo!

Look in the basement first!

Write to The Old Man Behind the Boiler. Ask him for the A. B. C. of heating boilers. He'll talk your arm off but his conversation sounds like gold dollars.

Views of Union Labor and the Radical Press

THE Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorials or articles in the organs of labor unions and the Socialist and Communist parties showing the tendency of thought on public topics among those bodies of citizens, and indicating causes of social unrest.

"SEEIN' THINGS THAT AIN'T."
(From Industrial Solidarity, I. W. W. Organ.)

"Was there ever a more complete confession of the failure of Marxian Socialism?" queried Lloyd George, commenting on the admission of Premier Le Lenin in regard to the failure of State communism in Russia.

Not if we know our Marx was there any such confession. In fact, the situation in Russia furnishes the clearest proof of the soundness of Marxian Socialism, for there is being proved beyond controversy that politics do not determine economics, but economics politics. At no time in the history of the world has the iron march of events so completely backed up a scientific theory as it is backing up today the "Materialist Conception of History," which is the heart and soul of Marxian Socialism. Not a treaty has been made, not a conference held by the bankers' politicians that has not been torn up or brought to confusion by the relentless law of economic determinism.

All that Lenin's confession proves is that which was shown by Karl Marx years and years ago, viz.: That the superstructure of society, its ideas of law, justice, government, politics and religion, all are finally determined by the methods used by the people to produce and distribute the means of life. "Give me the machinery by which a people produced and distributed the means of life," said Marx, "and I will tell you approximately what that people's form of government and religion were and its ideas of law and justice as well."

All of which proves that Lloyd George and many, many others are "seein' things that ain't." But facts are facts, and the sooner the American people learn to think about and act on economic facts instead of political delusions, the better off they will be, the nearer to real, true freedom. The political state, not Marxian Socialism, has failed.

HOW MEN ARE "SELF-MADE."
(From the New York Call, Socialist.)

The process by which some of our most eminent "self-made men became self-made is illustrated in Alaska. "The Interior Department is arranging to transfer coal mines in Alaska, developed by the American navy to private mining interests by lease," reads a dispatch from Washington. The known deposits of coal in Alaska amounts to over 20,000,000 acres with more to be discovered. Since the notorious Ballinger scandal in Taft's Cabinet, attempts have been made by big corporations to obtain control of the fabulous natural riches of Alaska. The attempt of the Guggenheim-Morgan interests, known as the "Morganheimers," to grab this natural wealth was frustrated nearly 10 years ago.

Secretary Fall is known to have a profound affection for "benevolent assimilation" by capitalists and corporations of the remaining natural riches of the nation. This is a continuance of the policy begun nearly 60 years ago to consider these resources as the legitimate booty of private exploiters. They have spawned quite a number of our parvenu rich. The policy regards these resources as a means of fertilizing private and corporate capital at the expense of millions of workers for whom these resources would serve as a means of settlement and winning a measure of economic independence. Is there any necessity of asking to whom do the Government and its natural resources belong?

"YELLOW-DOG CONTRACTS."
(From the Minnesota Union Advocate.)

The power of the Government is behind Federal injunctions that now plaster the mining sections of West Virginia. Most of these injunctions are in support of the individual contract which the antiunion coal owners make their employes sign before they give them work. In this contract the worker agrees not to join a union while so employed. This contract was upheld by the United States Supreme Court in the case of Hitchman vs. the miners. * * *

There can be no greater mockery than to call this forced pledge a "contract." Miners contemptuously refer to it as "yellow dog." It violates the first element of contract making—that both parties to a contract must be free agents; that there must be an absence of force or intimidation. * * * The miner cannot offer his services as does the worker in populous centers. His choice is limited to mining that is controlled by a small group of men who act together. Who will say that under these conditions contract making is equal and the miner is a free agent when he is told that he will not be given work unless he signs a contract not to join a trade union? Who will say a coal owner is free from intimidation when he knows that if the miner does not sign his wife and children will suffer? * * *

There is neither morality, ethics, justice or elemental law in the "yellow dog." It is based on the hunger of babes and the needs of women.

BRYAN EAGER TO "TIE MORE TONGUES OF EVOLUTIONISTS"

Offers $10 to Each West Virginia University Professor Who Will Match Dr. Spangler's Answers.

By the Associated Press.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 3.—An offer of $10 to each professor at the head of a science department in West Virginia who will make the same answers to a set of questions on the Bible as were made by Prof. R. C. Spangler was contained in a letter from William Jennings Bryan to Dr. Spangler, made public here today by the latter.

Mr. Bryan, in his letter, withdrew the charge he previously had made that Dr. Spangler was guilty of "cowardly evasion" in accepting the Commoner's offer of $100 to any professor who would show harmony existing between the Bible and evolution, and expressed regret that he had used the words.

After stating that he felt his $100 paid to Dr. Spangler had been spent because "at least one evolutionist's tongue will be tied in the classroom and among the students," Mr. Bryan made his offer to other members of the University faculty, "because I regard this as of so much value to the students that I am willing to invest a little more money if by so doing I can tie a few more tongues."

In reference to Dr. Spangler's assertion that he did not believe man was descended from the "ape of today," Mr. Bryan asked him what animal he preferred as an ancestor. "One man recently told me," the latter said, "that he would prefer to come from a Jersey cow if he had to come from any animal, while another who was fond of hunting preferred the Setter Dog as an ancestor. What is your choice?"

Missourians Win Harvard Awards.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 3.—The university scholarship, one of the highest available at Harvard, has been awarded to Samuel Teitelbaum of St. Louis, a senior. Teitelbaum has won other academic honors at Harvard. He has also been in athletics and the high averages attained in academic studies have qualified him for many honorary societies of which he is a member and in some cases an officer. The Gorham Thomas scholarship goes to Gorden Gunther of Jefferson City, Mo.

Precision plays an important part in the manufacture of the Special-Six. It is largely responsible for the dependable service that has singled out the Special-Six as an incomparable value.

Six hundred and eighty inspectors safeguard precision in the Studebaker factories. They literally inspect every part that goes into every car—and every operation on every part. Before cars are passed for delivery 9,500 inspections are made.

In the Special-Six there are 1,120 mechanical operations to the accuracy of one-thousandth of an inch, 360 to one-half-thousandth.

As to the car's performance, a brief experience will reveal its superiority far more convincingly than we could tell it.

Studebaker cars make friends quickly, because they give most for the money. And they invariably keep these friends, because of the universal satisfaction they give in fine performance, economy and service.

HELD FOR MAN'S DEATH ON ANTE-MORTEM STATEMENT

Charles Freese Denied Shooting Joseph Bucceri When Accused by Dying Man in Hospital.

Charles Freese, 30 years old, a shoe worker residing at 2716 Semple avenue, was ordered held to the grand jury in connection with the death of Joseph Bucceri, 31, who was shot the night of May 31 in rear of his home, 2740 Burd avenue, at the close of a Coroner's inquest yesterday.

Virtually the only testimony against Freese was a statement said to have been made by Bucceri at the city hospital in the presence of Freese and police officers, charging Freese with the shooting. Freese, it was testified, denied the schooting when he confronted Bucceri and said to him, "You are crazy. I did not shoot you."

Mrs. Dorothy Bucceri, widow of Bucceri, was placed on the stand but threw little light on the shooting. She talked through an Italian interpreter. She testified that about 9:30 the night of the shooting Bucceri was putting his horse in the stable at the rear of his home. She heard seven shots and ran out to the barn, finding her husband lying in the barn severely wounded. Mrs. Bucceri declared she did not see who did the shooting and saw no one running from the scene.

Bucceri and Freese, Mrs. Bucceri said, had a quarrel the day of the shooting, growing out of trouble between their children.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE RADICAL AND LABOR PRESS

It demands men by forcing them to agree not to do a thing they have a lawful right to do.

THE CHILDREN OF THE POOR.

• • • These children of the poor find their way in increasing numbers to the haunts of vice and shame. The darkness of the hovel and sweatshop is relieved by the red light of the slums. The children of the poor are food for misery and crime. The vile groggery for the boys and the house of horror for the girls. So do millions of the children of the poor pass through this "vale of tears."

And so it will ever be while capitalism is suffered to rob the children of the poor of their inheritance. Deplore it as you may, these are the conditions as they are, and only a new social system can change them. Child-labor laws, factory-inspection laws and other remedial legislation may ameliorate in some degree the wrongs suffered by the children of the poor, but all such palliatives are powerless to end them. As long as labor is merchandise and production is carried on for profit, child labor will have preference and the children of the poor will be ground into luxuries for the children of the rich.

CESARIAN MADNESS.
(From Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.)

Recent reports in the European Communist Press indicate that Nicolas Lenin is in the first stages of the Cesarian madness. He calls for the blood of his adversaries even if they merely state a different opinion in public. • • •

Lenin has fallen from the dizzy perch of a world dictator because he tried to do as the leader of a minority what can be achieved only by a highly enlightened and organized majority. Now he feels even his own Russian ground trembling in the conflict between his theory and his practice. He forbids the world to notice this conflict. Carried to the brink of that awful chasm which has swallowed so many swashbuckling challengers of fate, he seeks to still his nagging conscience with drunken ideas of bloody revenge on men who record his fatal misreading of plain facts.

Unless his friends hasten to his rescue and save him from Cesar's disease, soviet Russia will soon have to get a new head. Let us hope, in the interest of the Russian workers, that soviet Russia can find enough balanced heads to avert the Napoleonic outcome of the Russian revolution.

BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.
(From St. Louis Labor.)

It seems almost ridiculous to talk about the brotherhood of man nowadays. • • • There is not much true and reliable brotherhood in our everyday life. There is very little brotherhood even in the church. And the relationship between rulers and ruled in our modern world is very much like that between masters and servants, only a little less human.

We therefore understand the malicious grin on the faces of the well informed people when the word brotherhood is mentioned. They doubt your sanity. • • • They believe in power based upon wealth and in using that power unscrupulously for the purpose of squeezing more wealth out of the working people. They respect and even admire every one who trusts more in his fists than in his conscience, and have nothing but contempt for every kind of idealism and sentimentalism.

If you want to characterize the real spirit of our times, the general attitude of man toward man, just mention Versailles and Genoa. Then you have the full expression of what the rulers of the world think about the brotherhood of man.

Who Won in This Game?
From the New Day.

The recent report of the Congressional Agricultural Commission shows that out of the dollar paid by labor for the products of the farm the farmer gets only 37 cents. Processing, distribution and profits amount to 6 cents.

In 1912 the farmers got $6,000,000 for what they sold; the consumer paid $13,000,000 for it. Therefore, this condition is not caused by war. It is a product of the competitive system. The war has aggravated it by creating vast debts upon inflated prices, then deflating the prices but not deflating the debts.

And who won in this ruthless game? Big business promoted the rise, gambled on it and won, discharged its men, promoted the fall, gambled on it and won again. The total relative holdings of big business are enhanced far more by the decline than by the rise, while the farmer, laborer and little business are shuttled into bankruptcy.

"That Is My Answer"
And She Started Singing with the New Edison

At the home of a noted singer who had made records for a talking machine, as well as the New Edison, she was asked which was the best reproduction of her voice. Just then her Re-Creation, "Love's Dream After the Ball" was being played on the New Edison. She started singing with it and upon ending the song—merely said: "That is my answer."

If you get a New Edison from our store you know you have a phonograph so perfect that human ear cannot tell is Re-Creation of music from the original music, and the only phonograph so perfect, because no other phonograph sustains the test of direct comparison. Listen to the New Edison, then listen to an ordinary talking machine. Note the difference.

Members of the Artists' Guild had their annual outing yesterday afternoon and evening at the home of George S. Johns, at Sappington, St. Louis County. A full contingent was present.

The program—which was largely a matter of spontaneous inspiration on the part of the guests—included some humorous sketches that were presented in the adjacent grove, and there were musical numbers in which the performers strove for originality rather than harmony.

A buffet lunch was spread. There was dancing on the veranda to music in which the whippoorwills occasionally joined.

Imperial Theater Building Property Involved in Action.

Suit for $27,396.08 based on unpaid rent and taxes for the Imperial Theater building property at Tenth and Pine streets was filed yesterday by the owner, the Stifel Estate Co. The property was leased to Oliver L. Hagen in 1891 for a period of 30 years and he assigned the lease to the Imperial Theater Co. In 1919 the old lease was canceled and a new one to run 10 years was made. The petition states that the yearly rental was fixed at 6 per cent of the valuation of the property, which in 1911 was appraised at $154,166, but the defendant has failed to keep up payments in rent and taxes since 1917. For several years the theater part of the building has not been occupied.

BARGE SERVICE SETS RECORD FOR TONNAGE IN MAY

LESS GRAIN CARRIED, OFFICERS' REPORT SAYS

Up-River Business and Increased Volume of Export Are Exceptional Factors Stressed by Statement.

A new tonnage mark of 67,347 was established by the Federal barge service on the Mississippi River during May.

Figures given out yesterday by J. P. Higgins, assistant traffic director, show what the freight carried exceeded that of the largest previous month since the establishment of the line in 1918 by approximately 7000 tons.

Especially notable was the fact that the mark was established with less than the usual tonnage of grain, which has been the mainstay of the line. Not more than 10,000 tons of grain were carried during the month, whereas the usual tonnage of that commodity has been between 25,000 and 30,000. Consequently the record movement indicates a wider use of the line by a larger number of shippers.

A Notable Feature.

Another notable feature of the month was that the upstream tonnage was approximately 32,500 much larger than any previous movement, due to a discovery by an increasing number of wholesale houses that sugar and coffee can be moved up the river at a considerable saving with arrival in better condition than by rail.

Still another factor was the increased volume of export, particularly to the Far East, demonstrating the use of the river in reaching the ports of the world on an all-water route. Most of the exports were iron and steel products for India, China and Japan, consigned chiefly by mills in Illinois and Ohio.

Two Other Factors.

Two other factors in the new record was the establishment of a ship line between New Orleans and Houston and Galveston, enabling St. Louis shippers to reach Texas by water for the first time, and the similar establishment of coastwise service to the Pacific Coast, which is putting many St. Louis and valley manufacturers in the West for the first time, rail rates having been prohibitory.

TWO ARRESTED IN MAPLEWOOD SUSPECTS IN THREE HOLDUPS

Clarence Walters, 19 years old, 5083 South Broadway, and Albert Brewer, 24, of 1552 South Third street, are held by Maplewood police in connection with three holdups in the neighborhood in which they were arrested Friday night.

They were identified as the two men with one revolver who held up Sam Tapperson and Leonard Andrews in front of Tapperson's home at 8417 Oxford avenue, at 10:45 p. m., shortly before the arrest, taking $3.60. Brewer, after they were arrested, tried to throw away a revolver, Chief of Police Brown says.

Their descriptions tally also with those of two men who held up Frank Dunnan at 9:45, taking a gold watch and $1.89, and of two who at 10:30 took $6.50 from John Fuller and W. Borkenkamp, who will be Brown said.

MAN FOUND STABBED ON STREET

George Cunningham, 53, living at the Swan House, Sixth and Morgan streets, was found by the police at 12:30 o'clock yesterday at Seventeenth street and Franklin avenue, suffering from stab wounds in the back and neck. At the city hospital doctors said the wounds were serious.

Cunningham told the police he had been stopped by a man at Thirteenth street and Franklin avenue a short time before and asked for money. When he said he had none the man stabbed him, he said, and ran away. Police were unable to verify the story. On Aug. 25, 1917, the police reported, Cunningham and another man were found shot in a saloon at Twentieth and Morgan streets, and at that time neither would tell the police how they had been wounded.

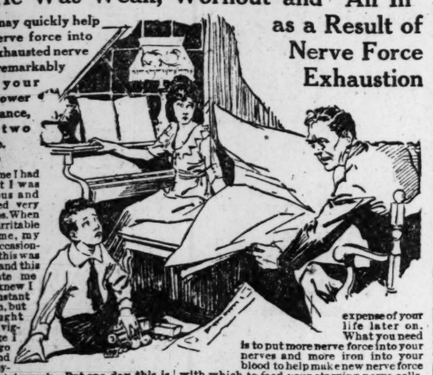
Irritable Husband Wrecks Business and Home

Says He Was Weak, Wornout and "All In" as a Result of Nerve Force Exhaustion

How you may quickly help put new nerve force into worn out exhausted nerve cells, and remarkably increase your strength, power and endurance, often in two weeks time.



For sometime I had noticed that I was quite nervous and when annoyed very much by trifles. When I was in an irritable mood at home, my wife would occasionally say that this was a sign of age, and this would irritate me still more. I knew I was under constant nervous strain, but I never thought I was strong, vigorous man like I was, could go all to pieces and become a physical and mental wreck. But one day this is just what happened to me, and very suddenly at that. Nature had given me such warning symptoms as a dull aching pain in the lower back part of my head, and sometimes a sense of fullness in the front of my head. Often I was restless and could not sleep well at night, and I noticed that I would get tired very quickly, but my principal warning symptom was nervous irritability and if I had given attention to it at the right time, I might have saved myself untold misery and thousands of dollars because after my nervous breakdown came about, I still tried to go on with my business and thereby lost nearly everything I had. I found out that exhausted nerve force not only ruins a man physically but mentally as well.

The above is a hypothetical case, which a physician says may well illustrate thousands which exist today. Homes are wrecked, children ruined; all through exhausted nerve force or neurasthenic conditions.

Very few people realize the awful suffering and terrible physical and mental tortures which may be caused by a depletion of the nerve-vital fluid.

In such cases it is often worse than foolish to take more stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. What you need is to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the nerve and brain cells of a man.

It also contains organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. This form of iron will not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It is an entirely different thing from metallic iron which people usually take. Nuxated Iron may therefore be termed both a blood and a nerve food, as it feeds strength-giving iron to your blood and the principal chemical ingredient of active, living nerve force to your brain and nerve cells.

Over four million people are using Nuxated Iron annually, and from the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Beware of substitutes, look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. After using Nuxated Iron we shall be pleased to have you write us what it does for you for publication. Your name will be witheld. Nuxated Iron for the blood and nerves is sold by all druggists.

WOMAN, AWAKENED, FIRES SHOT AT NEGRO BURGLAR

"Keep That Thing Quiet or I'll Kill You," Intruder Says, on His Way to Window.

When Mrs. Nellie Lavelle, 3709 Hickory street, awoke at her home at 1 a. m. yesterday and saw a negro burglar in the room she called to her husband and when he failed to answer she got a revolver and fired a shot at the negro. The latter stopped on his way to an open window:

"Better keep that thing quiet before I kill you both," he remarked, and when no more shots were fired he jumped out the window and escaped. Nothing was taken.

The same negro is supposed to have invaded the home of Charles Folkert of 3654 Hickory street at 2:30 a. m. Mrs. Folkert was awakened and called "Who's there?" The negro leaped out of a window, taking Folkert's trousers with him. The pockets contained $20. Later the trousers with the pockets empty were found half a block from the Folkert home on the sidewalk.

RAIL DECISIONS AND EFFECT ON GENERAL TRADE

Retention of Normal Purchasing Power by the Roads Influences the Steel and Equipment Industries Directly and Many Others Indirectly, States Review.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Confidence that the railroads will not be crushed between the upper millstone of lower rates and the nether millstone of high wages was justified at the start of the past week by the Railroad Labor Board's announcement of a cut of something over 10 per cent in the wages of two classes of railroad labor. It was intimated, meanwhile, that reductions are to follow in other departments, and it would appear that the board intends to make the cuts in these wages which are out of line with the old differentials in the transportation industry and with market rates in other branches of industry. With the April earnings statements of the carriers making a reasonably good showing when the usual strike is taken into consideration, and with prospects of improvement in the volume of general traffic, it would seem that the roads have a good chance of coming through the latest readjustment without having their financial positions impaired.

"Such an outcome is of decided importance to business as a whole, as the retention of normal purchasing power by the roads affects the steel and equipment industries directly and numerous others indirectly. Buying of steel for railroad purposes has been one of the leading factors in the remarkable revival in the steel trade which has been witnessed by this year. Any interruption of this demand would have an unfortunate effect both on the steel companies and the physical condition of the transportation system. Happily, the latest reports indicate that the roads are still buying steel products.

"Unusual importance attaches to the factor at the present time, because of the fact that the other strong support of the steel market, the demand for materials for use in building construction, cannot be depended on indefinitely. The recent depression differs perhaps from all its predecessors in that it has been accompanied, on account of war restrictions, by an actual shortage in buildings. The making good of this shortage during the past year has been the principal alleviation for the severity of our industrial setback. Tax exemptions have stimulated the movement, rents are showing signs of giving way slightly, and it is possible that a redundancy position is approaching. The fact that the demand for structural steel was only two-thirds of that in April, may be of no particular significance. It remains true, nevertheless, that the building boom is not likely to last forever, which makes it the more important that no blight fall on the other lines of business which contribute to the prosperity of our heavy industries.

New High on Sterling.

"The general tone in trade circles remains cheerful. Middlemen are disposed to enlarge their commitments and commodity prices generally are holding steady. Certain commodities, such as sugar, are showing the effects of foreign buying, despite which the exchanges remain conspicuously firm. Sterling's new jump to $4.48 again narrows the gap separating it from parity and did in well with the theory that British interests, and possibly the British Government, have been steadily accumulating dollars at several rather clearly defined levels on the way up from $4. In addition, cables from London carry a suggestion that the British Government has now completed its arrangements to pay a half year's interest this fall on its debt to our Government. Certainly the exchanges point to a gradual but persistent improvement in European conditions.

"Developments at Paris continue to be encouraging. The Reparations Commission's acceptance of the German reply and the granting of a moratorium mark an important step in the negotiations. It is clear, furthermore, that both England and France wish to help Germany to float a reparations loan. Anyone who is familiar with European politics and with the obstacles which are likely to be encountered in arranging for satisfactory security for such a loan will not expect the bankers now meeting at Paris to pull the thing off in a quick or easy manner. The problem is an unusually difficult one. It is perfectly evident, however, that the atmosphere now surrounding the whole reparations matter is immeasurably better than at any time since the treaty of Versailles was signed, and that the allies and Germany have gone far on the road toward a settlement.

Oils Continue to Rise.

"Stocks were firm during the first hours' trading this morning both rails and industrials scoring advances over yesterday's closing prices. With the exception of Wheeling & Lake Erie, which advanced nearly a point, advances in the rails were fractional only while a number of industrials showed substantial gains. Most of the oil group continued to register higher prices. There was a good deal of profit-taking before the close, however, and many of the day's highs were not held. Bonds were firm in the main, but displayed no pronounced strength.

"Trading in foreign exchange opened with a brisk demand for sterling which quickly carried the price back to the high level reached yesterday before the closing reaction set in. Continental rates, meanwhile, showed a reversal of the trend of the day before and firmed up considerably, gains of from 1 to 3 points being common. French francs and Italian lire found a good market and German marks also made some improvement. Volume of trading in the market generally was more spirited than is usual for Saturday.

"Nothing of especial interest came in the overnight news to affect the commodity markets. Cotton was subjected to the usual profit-taking over the week-end, which oil absorbed in fairly good fashion and maintained a good undertone. July contracts opened at 20.90 cents, 7 points above yesterday's closing, and after some reaction recovered to a price close to the level of the day before. October was lower, at the start, but also picked up in the later trading and late prices showed small changes from Friday. Considerable liquidation appeared in July wheat which carried the price off nearly 3 points early and October was also rather heavy. Better weather reports influenced some selling.

The weekly report of the Clearing House shows decrease in aggregate reserve of $8,742,000, the total for the week being $568,093,000. Loans gained $36,598,000 and now total $4,713,230,000, while both demand and time deposits increased, the former by $22,978,000 and the latter by $1,852,000. Excess reserve, meanwhile, shows an increase of $2,980,320.

Weekly Copper Review.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The copper market has been firm during the past week. If anything, business has been a little less active, but the market is showing the effect of the large sales reported during May, and quotations for electrolytic this morning ranged from 13¾ to 14 delivered, with some sellers offering nothing below the 14 mark, Iron was firm.

ALL LIBERTY BONDS TOUCH PAR FOR FIRST TIME SINCE DATE OF ISSUE

NO EASY GERMAN LOAN EXPECTED, IS LONDON VIEW

Long and Difficult Negotiations Anticipated, but Reported Desire of France and England to Aid Sincere German Effort Pointed Out.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, June 3.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in today's financial review says:

"Immediate factors favorable to the markets include the distribution of £50,000,000 in Government dividends which are now available for investment, continued monetary ease, Italy of a lower bank rate and favorable rumor regarding a German reparations loan. The chief unfavorable factor is Ireland.

Desire to Aid.

"News regarding the negotiations between the Allies and Germany continues satisfactory. The business feature is the desire of both France and England to aid Germany in any sincere efforts to meet the reparation payment or to effect budgetary and currency reforms, by the flotation of the German international loan. In considering the German offers, it should be carefully noted, however, that such offers are largely contingent on obtaining a loan. This does not necessarily impute bad motives to Germany, because the plain fact is that Germany probably is unable to carry out her reforms unless her exchange position is relieved by an external loan. Nevertheless, it is considered that the suggestions for the loan will be long and difficult. As regards America, especially, the prospects of the loan are difficult for the reason that Germany does not owe you reparation payments. It is assumed, however, that the American portion of any loan probably will not exceed whatever Germany owes you for the expenses of your forces on the Rhine.

"It is still believed that the conference of central banks will be held here in the autumn following. The Hague conference is the most. The feeling here is, however, that your official attitude toward European affairs necessarily may be obscured for some months pending your autumn elections. There is a growing desire among our business men to see our debt to you definitely funded. Now that you have appointed a Funding Commission it is considered that we should at once fix matters without awaiting any developments with reference to other interallied indebtedness.

More Active Trade Seen

"Our banking position is showing signs of the effects of deflation and total deposits are nearly £100,000,000 below those of a few months ago. Nevertheless, it is thought that having regard to the extent of the fall in the prices of commodities and the reduction in our currency notes now outstanding the effect should have been greater. Therefore the improvision gains ground that a trade revival might equally occasion dearer money.

"The business opinion holds, however, that the second half year will be characterized by slightly more active trade rather than dearer money.

"A moderate reaction in investment securities has occurred, but June may easily see a further rise. It is impossible to dogmatize you concerning bank rate prospects."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Dealings were large on the Curb Exchange today and the market was firm. Profit-taking, which is usual on Saturday, was encountered from the floor traders, but the offerings in most instances were well absorbed. Independent oil shares took the lead. Mexican Seaboard was in active demand and touched a new high record before realizing sales caused a recession. A new top also was made in Skelly and Marland and Mexico was a feature, with a sharp advance. Mutual Oil and Fensland were firm. The Standard Oils were less active and advances were confined within smaller limits than recently. Standard Oil of New York, Standard Oil of Kentucky, Imperial Oil of Canada, International Petroleum and Anglo-American holding firm.

Interest in the miscellaneous group was confined mainly to the when-issued stocks. North American Steel was in supply and broke. Tobacco Products was firmer and rose a fraction. Glen Alden Coal and Goodyear preferred were higher. The radio issues were irregular, Dubilier holding steady with Radio common heavy. Motor stocks showed only small changes. Hudson and Packard were firm, while Reo was easier.

Bonds were in fair demand and steady. Prescott Texas 7s were again in demand and reached another new high record.

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 3.—It was another day of excitement on the Stock Exchange, a repetition of the markets of previous days, but with trading setting even swifter pace. The view was expressed that, flushed with success, the Wall street pools were carrying on their campaign in the same reckless manner that they were in April. As was the case two months ago, the center of speculation was the oil shares. Friday's violent upbidding of stocks like California Petroleum and Pacific Oil was followed this morning by fairly rapid advances in other numbers of the oil groups. While these new leaders were being pushed on enormous transactions, the stocks of the Pacific Company were heavily sold.

All through the list there was the same sort of conflicting price movements as there was in the oils. A score or more of specialties were brought to the front while heavy unloading was going on in the favorites of other days. Shares of coal companies were actively bought in some instances on reports of favorable dividend prospects and in others in anticipation of an early ending of the coal strike. The stocks of can manufacturers were bought. The merger craze swept some of the low-priced rails, especially the Lake Erie & Western and Wheeling & Lake Erie. Sugar stocks were very strong at the opening, but later were not prominent. While these and various other chosen isues were moving forward the general list, while it did not yield ground, gained little or nothing. These are characteristics of a market in a highly speculative day.

The market ended with quite as many net losses as gains. Prices came down quite generally in the last quarter of an hour and the close was unsettled but not weak.

The Bond Market.

The publication of the Atlantic Fruit Co.'s plan for the readjustment of debt capitalization caused a 5-point jump in the 7's of debenture bonds today. They were only a couple of points below their high for the year. Under the plan which has been submitted to the stockholders the deposit of the debenture bonds before July 1 is called for. A deficit for 1921 of $1,728,774 was reported.

In the railway section of the market, the Peoria & Eastern incomes which had such a sharp upturn Friday afternoon advanced to a new high price for 1922. The Erie convertible D's gained over a point, and the new International and Great Northern adjustment 6s, which were floated this week, were very active at about 54½, as compared to yesterday's low of 53¾. The general railway list was strong, especially in the speculative quarter, with some irregularity among high-grade mortgages. Greater New York traction bonds were fairly steady, the Interborough 5s crossing 69 and then dropping fractionally. Industrial issues moved unevenly. American Sugar 6s were up about a half point, United States Steel 5s were firm around 102, and Distiller Securities went up about a point.

Liberty bonds were active as yesterday's closing level. United Kingdom 5½s of 1922 and 1929 reacted slightly. Czecho-Slovakian 8s were heard of, and Canadian provincials, the volume of trading increased late this week and there was a greater demand for securities.

Big Output of New Issues.

One explanation for the halt in the upward movement in bond prices lies in the competition now offered by the output of new capital issues. These flotations last month aggregated $417,918,000 as against $324,632,000 in April and $323,174,000 in May, 1921. For the first five months of the year this new financing reached the prodigious total of $1,377,931,550.

Big Trading in Oils.

There were no developments in the oil trade situation to account for the big speculation in oil shares, which kept on today. Popular imagination had been caught by the extraordinary case with which stocks like Skelly and Wheeling & Lake Erie. Sugar stocks were very strong at the opening, but later were not prominent. While these and various other chosen isues were moving forward the general list, while it did not yield ground, gained little or nothing. These are characteristics of a market in a highly speculative day.

The market ended with quite as many net losses as gains. Prices came down quite generally in the last quarter of an hour and the close was unsettled but not weak.

All Liberty Issues to Par.

During the past week for the first time all Liberty Bond issues sold at par or better.

Financial Notes.

The Standard Tank Car Co. has been awarded a contract for building 700 new box cars for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. It has also established an order comprising 1100 box cars and gondolas for an Eastern road, it is reported.

The Western Electric Co. has declared an initial quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the increased stock, payable June 30 to stockholders of record June 16.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, June 3.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review, today says:

"The most important feature of the foreign exchange market during the past week was the urgent and heavy buying of sterling which came into the market late on Thursday, following the bankers' conference in Paris. Sterling had previously made a rally which carried it up to a new high for the past three years when it crossed $4.40 for demand, but late Thursday night and all through yesterday important institutions here, as well as in London and Paris, bid for sterling in large blocks and were heavy buyers in all the leading markets. Demand sterling made a new high since 1919 on the buying, selling at $4.48. The movement was helped to a considerable extent by the absorption and creation of credit balances on account of tourists, and estimates were made by some dealers as to the amount of funds represented by the outgoing passengers on a single steamer. These requirements, however, in the first three days of the week were offset by heavy buying of commodities and staple products for foreign account. Continental exchanges at times yielded during the week, and exchange on Paris was directly influenced by the strength of sterling at Paris, causing francs to decline while sterling advanced. German marks were in fair demand in the first half of the week, advancing from 35¾ to 38. Dutch exchange made a new high record for the year, guilders selling at 39.07, but met a supply at that level and reacted in the later dealings.

"Trading in foreign exchange opened with a brisk demand for sterling which quickly carried the price back to the high level reached yesterday before the closing reaction set in. Continental rates, meanwhile, showed a reversal of the trend of the day before and firmed up considerably, gains of from ½ to 3-points being common. French francs and Italian lire found a good market and German marks also made some improvement. Volume of trading in the market generally was more spirited than is usual for Saturday.

LIVE PORK VALUES LOWER FOR WEEK

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week.	Prev. wk.	Year ago.
Cattle and calves.	17,348	21,739	15,642
Hogs	37,209	76,722	94,942
Sheep	18,907	11,229	18,811
Totals	103,455	109,690	83,395

A slight decline was forced in live pork values at the St. Louis National Stockyards the past week and sheep and lambs ruled sharply lower. Cattle, on the other hand, held up fairly well, some of the better grades closing on an improved basis. Notwithstanding the holiday Tuesday, combined receipts of all livestock showed a fairly good total, the sheep and lamb supply being liberal. Cattle were in moderate supply and quality graded medium. Steers and yearlings showed strength, closing 10c to 15c and in some cases 25c higher. Some butcher cows also showed a stronger undertone, although canners and cutters closed on a slightly easier basis. Bulls also showed a tendency to weaken on the close, after holding to a steady level earlier in the week. The top price paid for cattle was $8 per cwt., scored for two cars of steers, one of yearling weight and the other slightly above. The best weight steers available cashed at $8.00 and the bulk of all steer and yearling stock passed through a range of $7.50 to $8.50. Butcher cows sold largely from $4.75 to $5.75, with best making $6.25 and $6.50. Cutter cows on the close were quotable at $3.50 to $4.50 and canners at $2.75. Some common canners Friday sold as low as $2.50. Weighty beef bulls during the week sold mainly from $4.50 to $5, bolognas $4 to $4.50 and canners $3 to $3.50. Stocker and feeder cattle were in comparatively light supply and demand was about proportionate. Steers at $4 to $6.50 and heifers (quality was plain), showed slight strength. Stocker she-stuff held about steady. Veal calves reflected slight improvement the first part of the week, but closed minus the early gains, the top for the period was $10.50, bulk $10 to that figure. The week's run included eight cars of South Texas yearlings, which were inspected and accepted on arrival. Offerings cleared mainly at $6, $6.50 and $7.10 the latter the market closing 10c to 15c up.

Hog Market Lower.

Receipts at the hog market made a very good showing, considering the fact that one day was a holiday. While the total supply was 28,000 head smaller than the week previous, the average daily offering was considerably larger than a week previous, and due to the fact a less active inquiry from Eastern shippers, prices hit the toboggan. Starting out at $10.85, the top by Wednesday, the close was $10.30, Friday's trading value the lowest point in a month. Rallies followed each decline, the close on top stood at $10.70, closing values were 15c to 20c below the close a week previous. All weights, from 150 to 350 pounds, sold close together, and the few heavies found a ready outlet at strong prices. Light pigs continued scarce and there were available sold on an active and steady to strong basis, offerings weighing 80 to 100 pounds bringing $9.50@10.25, and 100 to 150 pounds $10.25@10.50. Stronger weights sold right in with hogs. Rough sows shared the decline, but stags continued to bring good prices because of the light supply at strong to higher rates. Pigs, together with light buying, sold at $8@9, and stags from $7.75 to $8.25.

Sheep Receipts Heavy.

The week witnessed the heaviest movement of sheep and lambs of the year, notwithstanding the fact that one day was a five-day week, one day being a holiday. Receipts totaled the liberal number of 18,907 head, against 11,229 the week previous. The market was oversupplied and prices receded sharply all along the line. Lambs at the present time are selling $1@1.25 below the close of the preceding week, with mutton sheep 50c to $1 off. Clipped lambs, unless strictly good, and all half-fat lambs were practically unsalable. The top for the week was established Monday when two loads of good Southern lambs went to a butcher at $15.50. This, however, was out of line and the bulk of offerings on that day ranged from $14.50 to $14.75. The top Wednesday was $14.25 and Thursday $14.10. At this time wool Kentucky lambs are quotable from $14 to $14.25, natives $13.50@13.75, clipped lambs $8@10.50, wethers $7@7.75, full mutton sheep $6@6.25, heavy $3, canners 50c, and choppers and bucks $2@2.50. Breeding ewes were in good demand at all times, the best selling from $7 to $7.75 and fair to good kinds at $6 to $7.

Horses and Mules.

Horse and mule receipts were again comparatively light for the week, and average values were unchanged. A little better than 100 horses arrived on commission, most of which cleared at auction. Demand was again largely for good Eastern chunks and big horses and some thought these kinds stronger. Plain work horses were about steady and Southerners of all kinds and plug stuff again sold on a cheap basis.

Approximately 200 mules made the offering out of first hands and values were generally unchanged from a week ago. The main outlet was for good big mules and miners.

LACK OF DEMAND REFLECTED IN SLUMP IN PRICE OF WHEAT

CHICAGO, June 3.—Ending of the big May wheat deal of 1922 made this week a notible one for the grain market. After a struggle which had lasted for months, speculators who believed that scarcity of supplies would force a big advance in prices were finally driven to abandon their position.

Instead of the predicted scarcity, immense shipments of wheat glutted the market of Chicago, and it was estimated that 14,000,000 bushels of wheat had been piled up in Chicago elevators or in loaded cars on railroad side tracks within the city limits. The speculators striving for higher prices had exercised their prerogative of demanding delivery of wheat which had been contracted for, and sellers found themselves compelled to make extraordinary efforts before it was apparent that the assumption of an end-of-the-season scarcity was, after all, without sufficient basis of reality.

After the memorable May delivery was over, reported indications of better export and milling demand helped to restore the market to a normal basis, with the crop outlook a leading factor and special notice being taken of news about black rust in Texas.

Corn prices reflected in some degree the downturn of the wheat market. Oats were steadier, helped by a good shipping demand.

Increase of the stock of lard here checked any advance in the value of provisions.

Wheat futures slumbed 2c to 3c in the week-end trade on the Merchants' Exchange, final prices being near low for day. Corn prices were off about 1c to 2c.

In the St. Louis cash grain market Saturday wheat was weak, red wheat bringing 1c to 5c less than previous day. At the lower basis there was narrow local milling demand. A few cars were taken on order. The sales late in day of light No. 3 red wheat and some No. 4 wheat at $1.15 were reported. Some cars were carried over. There were but small offerings of hard wheat and demand was limited, prices falling 2c. Ordinary No. 2 hard brought $1.19. The general corn market was ½c to 1c lower, but No. 3 yellow was off 1½c to 2c. The demand was narrow and was largely for filling of scattered shipping orders, together with light buying for elevator and mill account. Less than half of the sentiment in the wheat market was bearish and after a lower start prices slumped further. July wheat at one time being off 2½ cents. Corn also went lower. Liverpool was closed but Argentine latest quotation was weak. A Canadian acreage report was of bearish character. Weather favored the bears. The main apparently ran into stops, however, and July wheat opened at $1.14⅞, a loss level. July wheat opened at $1.14⅞, Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO.—The feature of the wheat market was the extreme weakness of the July option, that delivery being at a discount under the September compared with 3c premium the night before. Bulls have lost confidence in their position and the lack of demand was just as much responsible for the decline as the liquidating pressure. The selling of July was of such character as to lead the trade to believe that cash wheat holdings were being hedged. The failure of the market to reflect black rust reports yesterday was repeated today. Wheat harvest is on in Southwestern counties of Oklahoma and this tends to assure the trade that the crop is too far advanced to be hurt. Returned visitors to the millers' convention at Kansas City say the Kansas crop is a good one and estimates vary as to the yield, ranging from 100,000,000 to 130,000,000 bushels. The demand for cash wheat is quiet. Receipts are light. Exporters were bidding 10 cents over July f. o. b. Montreal for No. 2 hard wheat. Purchases of 250,000 bushels of new wheat to arrive were reported. Market closed 2c to 3½c lower. July $1.15 to $1.14⅞, Sept. $1.15⅛@1.15⅝. Dec. $1.18⅛@1.18.

Corn was weak. There was liquidation in evidence and houses with cash connections sold. Shorts were the principal buyers. Weather has turned more favorable for the crop but some reports of an uneven stand were being received. Receipts were heavy and visible supply showed improvement. In the domestic shipping demand was noted. Market closed 1c to 1⅝c lower. July 60¾@60¾c. Sept. 63⅝@63⅝c. Dec. 61¼c.

Oats also were weak and lower on selling by locals and liquidation. Armour bought Sept. and sold Dec. at 2½c difference. Cash demand was slow. Market closed 1c lower; July 37¾c. Sept. 39¼c. Dec. 41¼c.

Trade in provisions was confined to lard. The product was easy with grain. Lard closed 5c lower and ribs 5c to 10c higher.

POINCARE DEMANDS SOVIET REVERSAL

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 3.—Premier Poincare, in a memorandum forwarded yesterday to the United States Government, and to all the Powers which have received invitations to attend The Hague conference on Russian affairs, demands that the Soviet government withdraw its memorandum, presented at the Genoa conference on May 11, as a condition for French participation at The Hague meeting with the Russians.

The Premier demands also that Russia abandone her claims for damages on account of the participation of allies in military operations against the soviet power.

The French Premier, in the course of the memorandum, declares the reconstruction of Russia depends upon the extent of agricultural production, which he thinks cannot be obtained without a change in the regime that would assure the peasants the proceeds of their labor.

M. Poincare holds that the memorandum was a Soviet document, replying to a memorandum of the inviting Powers, and that it should be treated in the same way as the original Russian memorandum since it confirmed the attitude of the Soviet Government with respect to refusal to restore the property of foreigners, indemnity owners for damages sustained or recognize the Russian debt. The original Russian memorandum at Genoa was withdrawn by Russia after allied objection to it had been expressed.

The Russian's, the French Premier maintains, never have accepted any of the principles laid down as conditions for negotiations for the reconstruction of Russia, with the exception of the provision that the various nations cannot claim mutual rights to dictate the principles for each other's interior policy. He points out what he considers an error made by the Soviet representatives at Genoa in apparently regarding foreign Governments as controlling capital as well as public and private property. He notes that the disposition of capital is in fact in the hands of private owners, while the disposition of public property alone depends upon the will of the national parliaments.

Therefore, the French Premier argues, conditions of security for investments must satisfy private holders of capital, the Governments being unable to control this capital, their only course being to indicate the manner in which the best guarantees may be obtained.

Russia's war debt, M. Poincare says, will be treated on the same basis as the debts of the allies, when a settlement is reached, providing Russia has agreed to the same conditions as the allies, but there is no reason to accord her exceptional treatment in reducing her war debt as was suggested at Genoa.

The French Premier's memorandum rejects totally the Russian claim of $50,000,000,000 gold rubles damages for the allied participation in military operations against the Soviet regime, as "founded on inadmissible pretentions and the most faulty calculations."

M. Poincare holds that the first requisite to the restoration of Russia depends upon the revival of agricultural production, and he expresses the view that this is impossible until the Soviet authorities decide to give the peasants assurance that they will be able to enjoy the fruits of their labor.

He declares the work of the conference at The Hague must be prepared for by a clear and complete plan to which the Soviet authorities must subscribe before negotiations are resumed with them.

Replies to this memorandum, with suggestions, are expected from the Powers to which it is addressed.

Summer Opera's Fourth Season Begins Tuesday Evening, on New Basis

Virtual Clean Sweep in Personnel, and Chorus Is Five Weeks Ahead of Musical Schedule.

WITH the promise of a new slate, the Municipal Theater Association begins its fourth season Tuesday night at the open-air auditorium in Forest Park, the initial offering being Reginald De Koven's romantic comic opera, "The Highwayman." The management has made virtually a clean sweep of its former personnel, both in artistic direction and cast; and it has taken radical steps to obviate a reproach of previous years, to the effect that the first two or three performances of each week were in the nature of "dress rehearsals."

Five months ago there was established a Municipal Opera Training School, at Jefferson Memorial, in which 270 candidates, all St. Louisans, received free tuition in the works to be given this summer. From these 90 were chosen as a permanent chorus; and it is the boast of the management that for allround excellence—vocal and dancing ability, youth, good looks and intelligence—this is the best light-opera chorus ever assembled in America. Thanks to the new policy of preparedness, the chorus begins the season five weeks ahead of schedule in the music, and two weeks ahead in stage "business."

As stage director, the management has enlisted Frank Rainger, who comes with many years of experience in large-scale productions under Charles Dillingham, manager of the New York Hippodrome. The musical director this year is Charles Previn, associated in the past with numerous Erlinger productions. Ralph Nicholls will again serve as stage manager, and William A. Parson, who directed the chorus training school, will act as assistant musical director. They are the only two members of the personnel who have been with the enterprise since its beginning.

At the right—Frank Moulan as Constable "Foxy" Quiller in "The Highwayman"—Municipal Opera.

Sophie Brandt as Lady Constance Sinclair, in De Koven Work Which Opens Summer Opera Season.

Selecting the Cast.

THE selection of a cast is one of the most difficult problems; first, because there is only a limited number of singers with light opera training, and, second, because principals at the open-air theater are expected to do everything that such vocalists normally do, and in addition to meet the peculiar requirements of a great out-of-doors auditorium, where extraordinarily sonorous and carrying voices, both in singing and speaking, are needed.

Only two members of the casts of previous summers survive on the present list. They are Frank Moulan, principal comedian; and James Stevens, baritone, whose work last summer won universal approval. The newcomers are Miss Sophie Brandt, prima donna; Arthur Geary, tenor; Miss Lorna Doone Jackson, contralto; Miss Eva Fallon, soubrette; Jerome Daly, bass, and William McCarthy, second comedian. George Sweet, a professional dancer, engaged for juvenile roles, appeared here during the final week of last season.

The stage settings will be designed by Lawrence Ewald, a St. Louis architect, who has had experience in staging dramas at the Little Theater of the Artists' Guild.

The choice of the repertory is another formidable problem, but it has been solved in such a way that seven of the eight works scheduled for the summer are new to the municipal theater. The only repetition is Emmerich Kalman's "Sari," which, by common consent, was the gem of last summers operas.

Two Operas of Highest Type

TWO of the forthcoming works at least stand in the very front rank of their class. "The Yeomen of the Guard," by Sir Arthur Sullivan and W. S. Gilbert, has the distinction of being the opera which the authors regarded as the best work they ever created. "The Queen's Lace Hankerchief"—in which Cervantes is a leading character—is by Johann Strauss, who was not only the "Waltz King" of the world, but the foremost name in the delectable field of Viennese operetta.

"The Highwayman" is pronounced by some authorities to be superior musically to "Robin Hood," and "The Geisha," by Sydney Jones, is generally regarded as far outclassing the same composer's "San Toy," which was given at the municipal theater last summer. "Sweethearts" is a representative comic opera in Victor Herbert's better style, and "The Spring Maid" is another Viennese operetta. Only "Miss Springtime" is listed as a musical comedy; but the score is by the composer of "Sari."

The season will continue for eight weeks, and as in previous years, the opening performance of each week will be on Tuesday night, and the sixth and concluding performance on Sunday night. Monday evenings will be devoted to dress rehearsals.

The Repertory.

THE summer's repertory, in the order of production will be as follows, according to plans as at present arranged:

"The Highwayman," romantic comic opera in three acts; book by Harry B. Smith, music by Reginald de Koven; produced at the Broadway Theater, New York, on Dec. 18, 1897.

"Sweethearts," comic opera in [illegible] book and lyrics by Harry Smith and Fred de Gresac and Robert B. Smith; music by Victor Herbert; first produced at Academy of Music, Baltimore, March 24, 1913.

"Sari" ("Der Zigeunerprinzas"), operetta in two acts; English adaptation by C. C. S. Cushing and E. P. Heath, from the German of Julius Wilhelm and Max Gruenbaum; music by Emmerich Kalman; first American production at Liberty Theater, New York, Jan. 13, 1914.

"The Yeomen of the Guard," comic opera in two acts; music by Sir Arthur Sullivan; libretto by W. S. Gilbert; first produced at Savoy Theater, London, Oct. 3, 1888.

"The Geisha," Japanese musical play in two acts; libretto and lyrics by Owen Hall and Harry Greenbank; score by Sydney Jones; first performed at Daly's Theater, London, in 1896.

"The Spring Maid" ("Die Sprudelfee), operetta in two acts; book and lyrics by Harry B. and Robert B. Smith, after the German of Julius Wilhelm and A. M. Willner; music by Heinrich Reinhardt; first American production at Tremont Theater, Boston, Dec. 5, 1910.

"The Queen's Lace Handkerchief" ("Das Spitzentuch der Koenigin"), comic operetta in three acts; English adaptation by Louis C. Elson, from the German of Von Bohrmann-Riegen and R. Genee; music by Johann Strauss; first produced at Vienna on Oct. 2, 1880; first American presentation in New York Oct. 16, 1882.

"Miss Springtime," musical comedy in three acts; book and lyrics by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse and Herbert Reynolds; music by Emmerich Kalman; first production by Klaw & Erlanger in 1915.

Story of "The Highwayman."

IN "The Highwayman," written during 1897, Reginald de Koven and his librettist returned to the field of English banditry which they had so entertainingly worked seven years before in "Robin Hood." The character of Constable Quiller of Bow street, in the latest opus, enriched the slang of the day with the phrase, "Foxy Quiller." In this role Jerome Sykes, a comedian of the De Wolf Hopper type, won a popular success about 25 years ago.

The scene of the comic opera is laid in England, toward the close of the eighteenth century, and the acts

'FOOLS FIRST,' 'FIGHTING STREAK,' 'ACROSS THE CONTINENT' IN MOVIES

Liberty Closes for the Summer Season After Tonight's Show and Will Reopen in the Fall.

Marshall Neilan's latest production, "Fools First," with Claire Windsor and Richard Dix, is the feature at the New Grand Central, Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric Theaters. The picture is based upon a popular magazine story that had for its inspiration the quotation from Robert Louis Stevenson: "I have seen wicked men and fools, many of both, and I believe that both get paid in the end—but the fools first."

Tommy Frazer, the hero, is a gangster, but he is never quite able to get the real spirit of the underworld and the heritage of virtue from his mother causes his dismissal from the gang. He is sentenced to prison for manipulating a set of books, and upon his release gets a job through the influence of a girl who wishes to use him in a big bank robbery that has been planned for more than a year. The story is said to end with a surprising twist.

Buster Keaton's new comedy hit, "Cops," also will be shown at all three theaters. The Bella Vista Society Dance Orchestra will be an added attraction at the New Grand Central.

Wanda Hawley in "Bobbed Hair" is to be shown at the Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric the last three days of the week, beginning Wednesday.

"The Fighting Streak," a new motion picture with Tom Mix in the leading role, has been chosen as the feature attraction at the Liberty Theater to close the season. The Liberty will conclude its season with tonight's performance and the theater will be dark tomorrow, to remain so until it will reopen in September.

In his new production Mix is seen in the role of a brawny young blacksmith in a little Western town, and through the medium of this character he starts on a series of daredevil stunts and adventures.

On the bill also is Al St. John in "The Village Sheik."

Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent" is the week's attraction at the Liberty Theater. Reid has made a good deal of capital out of his foundness for traveling at high speed in an automobile. He has appeared in several pictures in which the plot turned around his daring and proficiency as a speed demon. His present offering is another of these dramas of the high-power car. A feature of the story is a transcontinental race, Theodore Roberts and Mary MacLaren are in the cast. The engagement of the Royal Garden Jazz Orchestra continues.

"Drums of Jeopardy" Roll Muffled Rataplan

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, June 3.

THE Drums of Jeopardy," adapted from Harold McGrath's novel by Howard Herrick and produced Monday night at the Gaiety Theater—is a play about an evil bolshevist and two beautiful emeralds. It is dreary.

In the fourth scene the bolshevist villain tied an old musician in a chair and then broke his beloved violin before his very eyes. The old man screamed in agony and the villain admitted that he had made a mistake. He said that he should have destroyed the instrument a little at a time. However, this technique of torture was not entirely neglected. The author used it in telling his complicated story. He broke it bit by bit throughout the five scenes. It was distressing.

The exposition was often muddled as well as tedious. One of the high points of the story mystified us completely. In the third scene the Russian Prince played a violin about two feet away from Kitty Conover, the heroine. According to the scheme of the story he played very well. So well indeed that Kitty fell into his arms. And then he kissed her twice.

Don't We, Though?

WHEREUPON she drew back and said, "So you're that sort. We don't do that in America." There is room, we think, for debate on that.

Most of the people talked very queerly. They said, "I know not" instead of "I don't know," and the villain, in the heat of passion, called an enemy "an error in chronology."

It was because of something that happened to little Anna "behind the great walls of that white palace." Perhaps daylight saving was responsible.

We found nothing fine in the play but the highfalutin language. "The Drums of Jeopardy" is designed to curdle the blood. Failing that, it does nothing. The acting is neither objectionable nor important. In the cast are William Courtleigh, Marion Coakley, C. Henry Gordon, Paul Everson and others.

Return of McIntyre and Heath.

TO say that Messrs. McIntyre and Heath are "as funny as ever" would simply be echoing what the audience at the Shubert Theater said Monday night. We think McIntyre and Health in "Red Pepper" are funnier than ever. They have come back in a musical comedy that is not such a much when the veteran blackface comedians are not on the stage. But any one with an ounce of good judgment will sit through "Red Pepper," slow as it becomes at times, for their sake alone.

The awful two-foot razor, the huge pair of intellectual dice, the billowy rolls of stage money and the funny costumes are brought on again as they were in "The Ham Tree" and in "Hello Alexander," but there are new traps and new conundrums you've never heard before. The boys have been thinking hard since they last were seen on Broadway.

This new production is named after a race hoss which, at the conclusion of the first act, brings to a galloping climax a Havana hoss race which carries the chorus, principals and part of the scenery scrambling about over the footlights as if they intended bursting headlong into the audience.

There is negro singing and there are Western scenes with rope throwing and dancing duets and scene after scene devoted to the good-natured jokes of McIntyre and Heath.

Two dainty little girls, Miss Sybil and Miss Gladys Forshee, distinguish themselves by their grace and pettiness in dances and songs, and Florence Rayfield, a bright little lady adds to the beauty of things.

The music numbers by Albert Gumble and Owen Murphy, while not excellent, keep the girls, jigging—and there are some pretty ones among them too.

Pollock in "The Pinch Hitter."

A COMEDY by H. M. Harwood, entitled "The Pinch Hitter," was produced Thursday night at the Henry Miller Theater under the management of Allan Pollock, who also appears as leading man. It is an amusing little second-rate play designed to display Pollock's gift for light comedy.

His role is broadly farcical, but it is curiously wistful clowning. For all the deftness of the performance it is not quite possible to forget the fact that it is also courageous. Pollock achieves the rather rare effect of making high spirits a little tender.

The implausible story is related briskly. It concerns a down-at-the-heels gentleman who agrees to act

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

ANOTHER new experience for Bebe Daniels. She is going to die for the first time, in or out of pictures, in the coming production of "Pink Gods," in which she is featured with James Kirkwood. This is a story of the diamond mines of South Africa, with an exceptional cast including also Anna Q. Nilsson, Adolph Menjou and Raymond Hatton.

"Teddy," the famous screen dog, is the latest addition to the all-star cast of Cecil B. de Mille's production of "Manslaughter." As the canine friend of the chief feminine character—played by Leatrice Joy—"Teddy" shares screen honors with many of the notables of the cast, which includes Lois Wilson, John Miltern, Dorothy Cummings, Jack Mower, Julia Faye, Edythe Chapman, Casson Ferguson, Sylvia Ashton and James Neill. One or two roles remain to be filled as the story progresses.

Mitchell Lewis, as the French heavy in "The Siren Call," has the same type of role that first won him screen fame in the memorable production, "The Barrier." This is his first appearance in a Paramount Picture since he played a heavy supporting role in Betty Compson's first Paramount starring vehicle, "At the End of the World."

Lila Lee is about to embark upon her third successive role as a dark-eyed daughter of Spain. The first was as Juanita Rivas, daughter of the South American revolutionist in "The Dictator," starring Wallace Reid. The second was as Carmen, the pretty Spanish wife of Gallardo, the toreador, played by Rodolph Valentino, star in "Blood and Sand." The third is as Marchesa Maria Theresa, the Spanish Princess and owner of the ancient castle which is infested by ghosts, in "The Ghost Breaker," starring Wallace Reid.

After four years in comedy in which she was a target for custard pies, Dale Fuller has turned to drama. She was the maid in "Foolish Wives" and now she plays the role of an 1850 maid in "Borderland," Agnes Ayres' latest picture.

"Son of the Wolf" is the latest Jack London novel to be filmized. Norman Dawn is responsible for the picture version, which features Edith Roberts and Wheeler Oakman.

A new series of rustic comedies will reach the screen when the veteran comedian, Dan Mason, will be seen in laughmakers to be known as "Plum Center Comedies." Mason is rounding out 50 years of stage and screen work and is remembered for his portrayal of the "skipper" in the "Toonerville Trolley" comedies. He will now appear as the pilot of the village mail coach which has been meeting the mail trains for the past 40 years without the loss of as much as a post card.

Harry Carey, the energetic Western actor, is hard at work at his first picture under his new contract with R-C Pictures Corporation. It is to be known as "Combat" and the story was written especially for the smiling cowboy. He is being directed by Val Paul, and his leading lady is none other than pretty Ethel Grey Terry. A notable member of the cast is the veteran screen actor, Henry B. Walthall, who has been known to picture-goers ever since his performance in the leading role in "The Birth of a Nation. "Combat" will be issued to theaters in the early fall.

The admirers of Pauline Frederick will have their last opportunity to

'PROVIDENT SUNDAY' IS PLANNED

June 11 or 18 to Be Set Aside by Churches to Aid Campaign.

The churches of St. Louis will co-operate with the St. Louis Provident Association by setting aside Sunday, June 11 or 18 as "Provident Sunday," when an appeal will be made to aid the Provident Association in obtaining funds for carrying on the work to the end of the fiscal year.

The association needs $65,000 to continue its work until Oct. 31. Of this amount $5000 has been subscribed. The remaining 60,000 must be raised during the summer months. A number of the pastors have requested social service workers and others interested to speak on the work of the association at their churches.

Music School Commencement.

The eighteenth annual commencement exercises of the Kroeger School of Music will be held Wednesday night at the Delmar Baptist Church, Skinker road and Washington boulevard. Diplomas will be awarded as follows: Postgraduate course, Misses Marie Kessler, Clem Leming, Frieda Maurer and Carolina Rodiguez; artists' course, Miss Ida Agruss; collegiate course, Misses Marie Joos and May Rogers, and teachers' course, Misses Gisella Bachluber, Rubye Caldwell, Ella Conrad, Ernestine Hoeltmann, Helen Alice Peeck, Mary Jane Sinclair, Helen Tiemann and Cynthia Bliss Gorrie, and Mmes. CHARCOAL DRAWINGS AND CANVASS EXHIBIT

Leopold Seyffert, Philadelphia Artist, Has 49 Works on View at the City Art Museum.

The City Art Museum is showing today a collection of 59 paintings and charcoal drawings by Leopold Seyffert, a prominent young artist of Philadelphia who recently has been made the instructor in portraiture in the art school of the Chicago Art Institute. In his specialty of portrait painting, Seyffert has acquired great proficiency. His likenesses are produced with bold, free sweeps of a full brush, which accomplishes modelling and drawing at once with delightful and impressive spontaneity. Such is the rendition of the portrait of Charles G. Johnson, noted Philadelphia lawyer and art collector, which is one of the outstanding paintings of the present exhibition. Its verve and spirited modelling, its fine feeling for the rugged and aggressive character of the man, make it a powerful work.

Has Received Awards.

This picture received the award of the 1913 Fellowship Prize at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, Philadelphia. He has since received the award of a gold medal at the Philadelphia Art Club, 1915; a silver medal at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, 1915; the Altman prize at the National Academy of Design, 1918; the Temple gold medal at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, 1921, and the Proctor prize at the National Academy of Design, 1921.

The exhibition at the museum also contains portraits of Gen. Thayer, Horace Taft, Arthur B. Carles, Jr., and others, which are of interest for their spirited workmanship and forceful characterization, qualities which excuse a certain hardness of outline which Seyffert has not yet outgrown. A full length portrait of the artist's sons, Dickie and Peter Seyffert, is a charming rendition of childhood; and the figure study called "The Blue Green Hat," is notable for its fresh, clear color.

In a group of studies of Dutch peasants is shown a different phase of Seyffert's art, which concerns itself with quaint old world racial types—picturesque survivals untouched by the rush of modern progress. In such canvases as "Tired Out," "A Dutchman," "The Bridal Bonnet" and "A Dutch Girl" he presents striking studies of this sturdy race, with often a touch of pathos in the careworn and weather-beaten faces. In a number of canvases of Spanish subjects Seyffert presents a more recent phase of his art and one in which may be readily traced the influence of modern Spanish masters, particularly of Ignacio Zuloaga. There is the same type of picturesque Spanish gypsy which is met with in Zuloaga's works, the same sweep of brush and the same boldly patterned and sombre color scheme, with its insistence upon broad masses of black against tumultuous gray blue skies.

The Charcoal Group.

Among the subjects are "A Spanish Gypsy," "A Group of Spanish Peasants" and "A Spaniard." There is also a striking portrait of Mrs. Seyffert in a statuesque pose, done in the boldly patterned Zuloaga manner.

These Dutch and Spanish canvases, however, appear to be merely a passing phase of Seyffert's art and no more significant of what his final style will be than are the copies of Velasquez and Goya that are included in the collection.

But we find the artist again at his own in the imposing group of 35 charcoal portrait studies. Here are the likenesses of great musicians, singers, artists and men of affairs, done in crisp, clear tones, with a touch that is sure and unerring in its feeling for character and individuality. In this distinguished group are portraits of Leopold Stokowski, John T. McCutcheon, Robert B. Harshe, director of the Chicago Art Institute; Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit orchestra; Hans Kindler Edward B. Butler, Harry Pratt Judson, Marshall Field Jr. and Julius Rosenwald, to mention only a few.

The collection will remain at the museum until June 30. Other temporary exhibits of importance which are on view today are a collection of wood engravings by Auguste Lepere and a collection of original drawings by Rembrandt.

New Church to Open in Clayton.

The Clayton M. E. Church, South, of which the Rev. James N. Broadhead is the minister, will hold its opening services in the new church building at Henderson and Bemiston avenues tomorrow. An 11-day program marks the opening celebration, special sermons song services and recitals continuing throughout next week and until Tuesday, June 13. By An Easterner

DECIDE now that you will not do the usual thing this summer, but that you will see new scenery, do new things—in fact, live a new life for a few weeks at least.

Decide now that you'll know the value of this complete change that has won the favor of so many people—that you'll rejuvenate yourself in mind and body in this way that you, perhaps, now think impossible.

Surprise and delight yourself with this experience. Try it, as I did, and then come back and tell your friends what you have found.

Not Youth's Fountain, but as near to that long sought for panacea as anything you'll ever find!

I—an easterner—was once sent to Southern California in the summer by a physician.

I remember my first comment—"why, it's too warm to go there during summer."

But he showed me U. S. Weather Bureau figures taken from a 44-year record and proved my mistake to me.

These figures are printed on this announcement. Read them for yourself.

This Great Outdoors

repairs the waste of work and worry almost magically

I was "run down" and in need of rest and new diversion.

In three weeks I was re-made—a new man. I took my wife and children, and we were all repaid, following that vacation, by the most healthful year that we had ever known.

The result is we have spent six summers there since then.

This great outdoors, so enchanting and so different, repairs the waste of work and worry almost magically.

You can't appreciate it till you know by experience.

A myriad interests are provided. 4,000 miles of paved motor roads take you to the mountains, sea shores, lakes, trout streams, fertile valleys, old Spanish missions, a desert like Sahara, to fine golf courses, to impressive canyons and sublime mountain retreats.

And all are within a few hours' ride by motor car, train, boat or trolley from the ninth city in size in the United States. You can even climb a peak by trolley.

Where else can you find these features—this great difference and invaluable change? Why do the "usual things" each summer? Why not something like this?

Decide now that you will go this summer to Southern California for the best trip of your life.

Ask any railroad ticket agent for further information, or mail coupon below.

Do it now. You never will regret it. You'll be glad all your life.

Temperature

The average mean temperature in Southern California for the past 44 years (U. S. Weather Bureau Records) is as follows: June, 66—July, 70—August, 71—September, 69.

The same records show that a great city in the center of this section has on the average only one day in June, two days in July, three in August and three in September when the thermometer touches or exceeds 90 degrees.

The air is usually dry, so higher temperatures are comfortable here that would be uncomfortable in the East where humidity emphasizes heat.

Southern California averages 309 days of sunshine. Summer is the rainless season so you can plan on perfect weather for your fun.

as a dummy correspondent, so that a misguided lady may obtain a divorce from a loving husband and marry a rotter. She perceives her folly in time to leave everybody happy except the rotter.

Pollock has the part of the wistful wastrel. He receives telling support from Pamela Gaythorne, as the woman who would be free. There is also a capital piece of work by J. M. Kerrigan, as an agreeable scoundrel of a divorce broker.

New York, June 3.

THE 1922 edition of the Ziegfeld "Follies" will open at the New Amsterdam Theater Monday night, without the usual out-of-town tryouts. There is a chorus larger than ever before, and there are more than 30 principals, including Will Rogers, Mary Lewis, Mary Eaton, Florence O'Denishawn, Muriel Stryker, Lulu McConnell and Grant Simpson, Andrew Tombes, Brandon Tynan and Gallagher and Shean.

The music and book are attributed to Victor Herbert, Gene Buck, Dave Stamper, Louis Hirsch, Ralph Spence and Ned J. Haney. The production is staged by Ned Wayburn.

At the Empire Theater, also Monday night, will begin a week's revival of "The Rivals," by the Players' Club. In the cast are Francis Wilson, Patricia Collinge, Violet Heming, Robert Warwick, Tyrone Power, Pedro de Cordoba and Mary Shaw.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

see the famous emotional actress on the screen in "The Glory of Clementina," an adaptation of William J. Locke's novel of the same name. Miss Frederick recently declared her intention of leaving the screen to return to her first love, the spoken stage. "The Glory of Clementina" was recently completed.

Motion-picture producers are willing to go to any amount of expense and trouble to get an effect of real rain. Experts on the various technical staffs are continually racking their brains for new ways to "put over" the effect of water pouring from the sky. Conservatively speaking, a simple little shower, which may show in only a short scene, costs several thousand dollars. Even then, the scene has to be photographed many times until the desired effect is obtained. In "The Understudy," a new Doris May production just filmed by the R-C Pictures Corporation, a little of what is in California referred to as "unusual weather" provided all the background required. While preparations were being made to "shoot," the heavens took a part in the proceedings, and a welcome one. With hardly the warning of an overcast sky, the water simply poured down. Seiter rushed players and cameramen into their positions and, within a few minutes, the scenes were being taken.

In the George Melford Company, filming "Burning Sands" for Paramount pictures, there were two weddings. Cecil Holland, playing the role of the Old Sheik, slipped away before the picture opened to Martinez, Cal., and made a bride of Norma Mary Taylor, sister of Cecil's "buddy" during the war. While the company was encamped at Oxnard, Cal., Bert Glennon, chief cameraman, drove away one cloudy morning with Nannie Grace Heron. Mr. Melford's script assistant, procured a marriage license in Ventura, and used it right there.

George Fawcett, veteran character actor, who recently signed a year's contract to appear in Paramount pictures, had been added to the cast of "The Old Homestead," the Paramount picturization of the famous stage play. Fawcett will be the old skinflint in the picture. Another addition to the already powerful cast is Edward Brady, who will play the role of the Constable. The cast so far includes Theodore Roberts, T. Roy Barnes, Fritzie Ridgeway, Harrison Ford and Ethel Wales. James Cruze will handle the megaphone for this production.

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair

GRAY hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhance its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored, and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

"I'd rather get a letter like that, says Peterson of Buffalo, than have John D. Rockefeller give me a thousand dollars. It does me a lot of good to be able to be of use to my fellow man.

For years I have been selling through druggists a large box of PETERSON'S OINTMENT for 60 cents. The healing power in this ointment is marvelous. Eczema goes in a few days. Old sores heal up like magic; piles that other remedies do not seem to even relieve are speedily conquered.

SUMMER OPERA SEASON BEGINS TUESDAY EVENING ON NEW BASIS

are located as follows: I. The Cat-and-Fiddle Tavern on the York road; II. Forest near the York road, and III. The Park of Beverly Manor.

The characters include Dick Fitzgerald, an Irish soldier of fortune; Lady Constance Sinclair, a belle of the court; Sir Godfrey Beverley, a sporting Baronet; Lady Pamela, his daughter; Capt. Rodney, an officer serving under Nelson; Constable Quiller of Bow street; Doll Primrose, barmaid at the Cat-and-Fiddle; Toby Twinkle, hostler at the tavern; Lord Kilkenny, an Irish nobleman; Sir John Hawkhurst, a Government attache; Lieut. Lovelace of the militia; Landlord Jarvey of the Cat-and-Fiddle; Mrs. Jarvey; Humphreys, coachman of the York mail; Jack Middleton and Lady Olivia Fairfax.

The chorus comprises fox hunters, militiamen, farm laborers, gypsies, guests and servants of the Cat-and-Fiddle, country Squires, peasants and Bow street Constables.

Mixup of Three Bandits.

ACCORDING to the story, Dick Fitzgerald, after being ruined by a gambler, Sir John Hawkhurst, takes to the highway and wins notoriety under the name of "Capt. Scarlet." Three other persons disguise themselves as "Capt. Scarlet"—Lady Constance Sinclair, who loves Dick and holds up a stage coach in order to seize her sweetheart's pardon from the hands of Hawkhurst; Lieut. Rodney, who wishes to carry off Pamela, his sweetheart, who is traveling by the same coach; and the hostler, Toby who has been informed by Doll Primrose that she will not marry him till he proves himself a hero.

The three alleged highwaymen are all arrested by different officials burning to win the reward of 1000 pounds offered for the bandit's apprehension, while the real Capt. Scarlet, masquerading as a peddler, mingles freely among his own pursuers. Then he decides to pose as Lord Kilkenny, whom he has robbed of his proofs of identity. Dick is brought to bay at last by the appearance of the true Lord Kilkenny, but Constance produces his pardon, and the usual matrimonial denouement ensues.

The musical numbers are listed as follows: Act I—Overture; "Bravo Boots," Toby and chorus; duet, "Bread, Cheese and Kisses," Doll and Toby; song, "Marching Away," Lovelace and chorus; song, "The Highwayman," Dick and chorus; gavotte quintet, "In London Town;" song, "Vive la Bagatelle," Constance and chorus; song, "Gretna Green," Rodney and finale.

Act II—Solo, "Kitty O'Brien," Dick; chorus of villagers; duet and ensemble, "The Farmer and the Scarecrow," Toby, Quiller and chorus; solo, "Moonlight," Constance; "Gypsy Song," Quiller and constables; finale.

Act III—Opening chorus and dance, "Now the Happy Bride;" sea song, "While the Four Winds Blow," Rodney, sailors and chorus; song, "On the Track," Quiller and constables; solo, "Farewell to the King's Highway," Dick and finale.

Cast for the First Week.

THE role of Constable "Foxy" Quiller will be taken by Frank Moulan, and Miss Sophie Brandt will appear as Lady Constance Sinclair. Other parts are assigned as follows: Dick Fitzgerald, Arthur Geary; Capt. Lovelace, George Sweet; Sir Godfrey Beverley, Jerome Daly; Lady Pamela Beverley, Miss Lorna Doone Jackson; Lieut. Rodney, James Stevens; Toby Twinkle, William J. McCarthy; Doll Primrose, Miss Eva Fallon; Lord Kilkenny, Grant Kimball; Landlord Jarvey, Ralph Nicchols; Mrs. Jarvey, Miss Fannie Block; Sir John Hawkhurst, Grant Kimball; Lady Olivia Fairfax, Miss Ida Moerschell, and Humphreys, coachman of the York mail, Charles Quinn.

The orchestra will consist of 50 men, assembled by Frank Gecks, and most of them are members of the Symphony Orchestra. A sounding board has been installed in the orchestra pit.

A new pergola, erected on the west side of the auditorium, completes provisions for sheltering the entire capacity of the theater in case of rain. The pergola to the east has been extended 250 feet. Permanent seats have been installed in the first seven rows. In all, $10,000 has been spent in improving the plant. Additional parking space for automobiles has been supplied.

Advance Seat Sale $50,000.

THE management expects the financial success of other years to be duplicated, if not bettered, one indication being an advance ticket sale of $50,000, which exceeds by $15,000 the corresponding figure of last year. In 1921 the opera performances were attended by 229,363 persons—a total which the management hopes to see surpassed.

The officers of the Municipal Theater Association are: Mayor Henry W. Kiel, president; G. A. Buder, first vice president; Morton May, second vice president; Nelson Cunliff, third vice president; Melville L. Wilkinson, treasurer; Frank Mayfield, assistant treasurer, and Miss Sarah Wolf, secretary.

In charge of active operations is an Executive Productions Committee, of which Director of Public Welfare Cunliff is chairman, and Miss Wolf secretary. The members of the committee are Max Koenigsberg, Arthur Siegel, G. A. Buder, Thomas Lovelace, Walter S. McDonald, Joseph Gilman Miller, Fred W. Pape, H. J. Pettingill and George W. Simmons. David E. Russell, as general manager, has charge of the business department of the enterprise.

Forest Park may be reached by Olive-University, Union, Taylor and Market cars. The city will operate five busses, beginning at 7 o'clock each evening, from the park entrances at De Baliviere avenue and at Forest Park Highlands.

Dentists to Demonstrate New Painless Method on Volunteer Patients

THE conductive anesthesia class of the St. Louis Study Club will hold its last clinic of the season at the St. Louis University Dental School, Grand avenue and Caroline street, at 8 o'clock this evening.

Twenty graduate dentists will demonstrate conductive anesthesia, the latest method of extracting teeth without pain. The method has been studied throughout the Winter by the operatives who will give the demonstration. The extractions will be made for volunteer patients without charge.—From the Globe-Democrat, March 29, 1922.

As practiced by many modern dentists today, I believe, after 3 years' trial, to be the greatest means of eliminating pain during what was once considered a painful ordeal in a deutist chair, such as grinding, extracting, filling and crowning sensitive teeth, and many other heretofore considered painful operations.

'PROSPERITY SPECIAL' DUE TOMORROW NIGHT

The "Prosperity Special," a train of 20 giant oil-burning locomotives, being delivered to the Southern Pacific Railroad by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, is due to arrive in East St. Louis over the Pennsylvania lines at 6 p. m. Monday, and to remain in the Terminal yards near Twenty-first and State streets all day Tuesday for public inspection.

The train, the largest single train of locomotives ever sent across the country, is nearly half a mile in length and weighs more than 6000 tons, exclusive of the pulling and pushing engines used to move it. Each of the 20 locomotives, although not under its own power, will be in charge of an experienced engineer. The locomotives, with tender, are nearly 100 feet long, and weigh 621,000 pounds each.

The train left Philadelphia May 26, and is following a devious route to avoid bridges not able to bear its weight and to miss tunnels too narrow for passage. The train moves by day only.

Lays Over in East St. Louis

After remaining in the Terminal yards at East St. Louis for inspection from 8 a. m. to 5 or 6 p. m. Tuesday, the locomotives will be placed in the Cotton Belt yards for movement south over that line Wednesday. Delivery will be made to the Southern Pacific in Texas. Another train of 20 and one of 10 locomotives, to complete the Southern Pacific's order of 50, are to leave Philadelphia later, the first going by way of Chicago and the second via New Orleans. All are for hauling freight over steep mountain grades in the west.

The special is in charge of W. A. Garrett, a former office boy on the Terminal Association here, who rose through the general superintendencies of the Wabash and Reading railroads, to be president of the Seaboard Air Line. He is traffic manager of the Baldwin works.

Cost at Least $3,000,000.

Railroad men here, especially those connected with traffic and mechanical departments, are to inspect the train during its stay in East St. Louis.

Local representatives of the Baldwin works said yesterday that the 50 locomotives would cost the Southern Pacific between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

All the locomotives carry an auxiliary engine or "booster," designed to enable trains to pick up speed rapidly when starting and to supply additional power on steep grades. The "booster" is attached to the trailer wheels under the cab, which, until a short time ago, were used merely to steady large locomotives, while the driving wheels forward supplied the power. By an automatic arrangement spare steam and this idle trailer weight has been harnessed to do useful work at required times.

Dairy Herds to Be Inspected.

INDEPENDENCE, Ky. — Many Kenton County farmers have listed their dairy herds for inspection as a result of a recent educational campaign carried on in the county by the College of Agriculture extension division to show the need for testing dairy cows for tuberculosis, County Agent C. A. Wicklund says. Four meetings held in connection with the campaign were attended by approximately 500 farmers.

DR. COFFEE SAYS, IF YOU SUFFER WITH DEAFNESS, HEAD NOISES OR CATARRH, HE WILL EXAMINE YOU FREE

Read About This Case.

Dr. W. O. Coffee, the noted specialist, has a new non-surgical treatment for catarrh of the nose, head, throat and ears, deafness, head noises and ulcers of the ears, especially those cases that are growing worse where one ear is bad and the other just getting started, that have crackling or other noises in the ears, that are worse and better with each cold. He treats diseased tonsils, thickened and turbinated bones. Most cases without an operation. Successfully treating thousands of cases, many in St. Louis. Mrs. Minnie Schierer, 3210 Pestalozzi st., St. Louis, said she had been losing her hearing for 48 years, had become almost totally deaf, suffered with most intense head noises; the best specialists said she could not be cured; hadn't heard a phone in 17 years. Dr. Coffee is restoring her hearing rapidly. J. W. Proctor, 3120 Whittier st., had been almost totally deaf in one ear 26 years; suffered with catarrh and weak, diseased eyes. Dr. Coffee restored his hearing so he could hear an ordinary conversation with that ear. Dr. Coffee wants to examine and explain his new method of treatment to every sufferer of these troubles. He says catarrh is a constitutional condition, must be treated through the system as well as the nose and head, and every case should be curable. He says it produces stomach troubles, rheumatism, neuritis, headaches and many other diseases. He will tell you the truth about your case as he sees it, without charge. Has had 30 years' experience in this specialty. Is author of several pamphlets on the non-surgical treatment of these diseases. He treats 50 patients a day in his St. Louis offices. He is in his offices, room 409 Odd Fellows' Bldg., 818 Olive st., every Wednesday and Thursday. Hours on Wednesday from 8:30 to 5 p. m. Thursday from 8:30 to 4:30 p. m. He has published pamphlets that tells about his treatment and thousands of cases treated. If you suffer with deafness, head noises, catarrh, eye diseases or cross-eyes, write him for his pamphlet. He will send it free. He will make a 20% discount on all glasses fitted this month. Don't submit to an operation until you get his opinion.

TOPICS OF DISCUSSION AT THE FRENCH CAPITAL

Professors Investigate Spiritualism, Gasoline Mileage Tested, German Operas Revised.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 3.—Prof. Charles Richet, of the institute of France and the Academy of Medicine and his two colleagues appointed by the faculty of Science's of the Sorbonne to investigate spiritualism and trance phenomena of mediums are achieving some curious results.

Their work thus far has been confined to seances with Madam Bisson, a medium well known among the spiritualists of Western Europe. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has had sittings with her. She is one of the few mediums reputed to exclude viscious liquid from their finger tips under trance conditions.

The professor has been told that this liquid, dripping onto a plane surface, took strange forms of faces. They have not had that result yet but have made other singular discoveries. The medium's hands, while in a trance, were held at some distance from the table, and the liquid dripping from the finger tips, they say, formed into slender sticks. When the union was established between the fingers tips and the table, by means of these slender rods, the medium could raise the table from the floor apparently without the exertion of any force.

Some of these rods have been analysed chemically, the professor's report, revealing that they contain no substances not contained in the human body.

The prevailing high price of gasoline has sharpened the wits of French automobile designers and carburetor designers with the result that the annual consumption contest at Lemans beat all records for mileage. The winner, one of the popular ten horse power automobiles carrying four passengers covered 100 miles at an average speed of 25 miles per hour on less than 1¼ gallons and about two ounces of oil. The cost per passenger worked out at one fourth of a cent per mile.

Scarcely less remarkable was the performance of an 18-horsepower sleeve valve machine which made more than 40 miles to the gallon, covering the course at an average speed of 47 miles per hour. The latter automobile, fitted with a sumptuous body, cost each passenger carried in the perfection of comfort, less than 1 cent per mile. A small eight-horsepower machine covered 78 miles on half a gallon of gasoline at an average speed of 24 miles per hour.

The production of a series of Wagnerain operas in Paris for the first time since the war has received surprising favor from the French public. The performances are under the direction of Tullio Serafin and the company is composed of Italian singers.

The theater where the operas are being produced, is playing to capacity audiences every night.

The keen disappointment expressed by all the French papers at the failure of Eugene Criqui to knock out Joe Fox in their recent bout has soured the French bantamweight champion against French boxing writers. His recent victories have all been achieved by knockouts before the sixth round, and his followers sanguine that he would dispose of Fox within the same limit, bet accordingly.

"They'll soon expect me to put these fellows away before they get their gloves on," Criqui told the Associated Press correspondent.

"They wouldn't roast me if I had lost the fight. And then they wonder why I don't fall all over myself getting into French rings."

Accompanied by his manager, Robert Eudeline, he leaves for America the first week in July, where he will be under the management of Jack Kearns.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin.

LAUNDRY OWNERS WILL MEET HERE THIS WEEK

Miss Ruth O'Brien

Representatives of all the women's clubs in St. Louis have been invited to attend the annual convention of the Missouri Laundry owners' Association at Hotel Statler, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and listen to discussions in interest to housewives. Among the speakers will be Miss Ruth O'Brien, associate professor of textile chemistry of Iowa State College, Ames, Ia., and Mrs. John S. Payne, president of the Eighth District Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, who has made a recent study of laundry matters.

Officers of the National Laundry Owners' Association, including William R. Benoit, of Biston, president; William E. Fitch, of La Salle, Ill., general manager, and Dr. A. F. Shupp, of the Mellon Institute, Pittsburg, head of the association's research department, are on the program. Other speakers will be Ralph Jones, of Cincinnati, on advertising; Dr. Charles E. Barker, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; W. G. Rathbone, of Springfield, Mo.; Dr. John T. Caskey, of St. Joseph; Ben Weidle, Mayor Kiel and the Rev. Dr. E. Combie Smith. A. O. Long of Kansas City, president of the State association, will preside.

Pure Fabrics Law on Foot.

Textiles, the subject of Miss O'Brien's address, has received considerable attention from the laundrymen whose national association is promoting a Pure Fabric Law which they hope the Federal government will enact and enforce.

Sanitation and hygiene will be touched on by Dr. Shupp of Pittsburg, who has charge of the research department of the national association.

Laundrymen are trying to remove prejudices which some housewives have against power laundries on account of supposed excessive costs and wear and tear. As to costs, the laundries now are going in for damp wash, "soft" finish, "rough dry," etc. Which means that the housewife can get various rates, dependent upon the degree of finish, depending upon what the housewife wants to pay, or to what degree she desires to be relieved of the burdens of wash day.

Recent growth of the laundry industry has been principally on account of the adding of the unfinished grades of service, for in this partment they are appealing to families in moderate circumstances. The power plants so far have obtained only about 10 per cent of the available family washing and it is expected that in a few years the improved methods and graded prices will bring about a condition where there will be as little laundry work done in the homes as there is baking of bread at home.

Old Prejudices Disappearing.

"We have made great strides in the industry and we shall make more," said State President Long. "Slowly the old and unfounded prejudices against us are disappearing We do not damage clothing. We would be foolish to do so, because the only thing we sell is service, and our future depends upon pleasing and satisfying the public. Good old soap and water methods and equipment which cannot harm fabrics, are our standby. For years experts have experimented with soaps until today we use only the kinds that combine mildness with cleansing efficiency.

"You have heard of the 'mangler' we are supposed to use. That name came from the French 'mangel' and realy is not what it sounds like. The apparatus is our flat work ironer, with softly cushioned rolls and, absolutely nothing about it to damage anything. It looks a bit like a printing press and used for ironing bed

LONDON, April 17.—London shopkeepers are anticipating a season far more brilliant than any since the war. It is expetced that more American money will be spent here this year than for many years past, and many are the plans being made to capture as much of it as possible by entertainments of various sorts.

Husband Loses "Grouchy" Feeling

Stomach Trouble Made Him Grouchy—Wife and Friends Notice Change

"There is nothing under the sun I have not tried for stomach trouble. Until I heard of Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) nothing would help. NOW I can eat, sleep and have not that "grouchy" feeling I used to have. Have recommended Adlerika to friends who are all pleased with it." (Signed) Jack Ryder.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

PARTY FOR FORMER PATIENTS AT GIRLS' HEALTH RESORT

Two hundred girls, formerly patients at the Night and Day Camp at 9500 South Broadway, will be guests at a luncheon given by the Night and Day Camp Committee and the Tuberculosis Society on the lawn at the camp this afternoon.

Following the luncheon a reception for friends of the girls and the general public will be held on the lawn at the camp from 3 to 5 o'clock. A program of addresses by Mrs. B. F. Bush and Homer Hall, and music, will be given, followed by a tour of inspection of grounds and buildings. The girls will be weighed and given a thorough physical examination to find out whether the health gained at the camp has been permanent. Nearly 800 girls have passed through the camp since it was established in 1913.

The Night and Day Camp is a preventorium and is for self-supporting girls and women exclusively. Girls who are broken down with overwork or illness go there to regain their health. The treatment consists of fresh air, regular hours, plenty of sleep and rest and wholesome food.

PART SIX. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 4, 1922. PAGES 13—20.

THE COLLEGE MAN

By W. E. HILL

Four earnest members of a course on the construction of Greek drama after Sophocles. The young man who sits taking what ought to be copious notes is making a more or less successful sketch of Lilian Lorraine. The others, aware that the hour OUGHT to be up, are wondering why the bell doesn't ring.

The leading chorus girl in the varsity show. "You'd never think, would you," each and every member of the audience will say, "that THAT dancer was a MAN!"

"In the spring a student's fancy," etc. You can supply the rest. That's why the history professor's wife feels particularly fortunate in having found a none too beautiful nursegirl. Gives a professor's wife in a small college town such a safe feeling.

The alumnus with the college spirit. "Now old son," he will say with a sob in his voice, "you know we've only got one Alma Mater! And we've got to stick by her. Now I could show you a list of subscriptions to the endowment fund that would bring tears to your eyes, fellas—God bless 'em—who are only earning fifteen hundred a year and have subscribed ten hundred apiece. But I know you'll want to give right from your heart's blood and will want to do even better. I TELL YOU, I'd hate to go back to the college and face the boys there if we fail to do our duty by our dear old Alma Mater," etc, etc.

Nat, the office boy, in the Kollege Kut clothes, that create for the discerning dresser that coveted air of undergraduate snap and abandon.

The unsuccessful candidate for something or other. Out for assistant manager's job on the college monthly perhaps—or maybe it's manager of the heavy gym team. Has all the dirty work to do.

Toward the end of the spring term. "Aw, he won't pass me in history! No SIR. He never liked me. And anyone will tell you he won't pass anyone in his class he don't like!"

The loyal alumnus—captain of the 1907 track, tennis or chess team—who gracefully steps out from the bleachers to help cheer at the big game. "Now, fellas," he shouts, "show 'em that you're behind 'em! Come on now fellas, give 'em a long heigh-dye-diddley-dye! Everybody up!"

Prof. Van Loon Has Made Romance of History in "Story of Mankind," Says Dr. Chubb

Dr. George Payne, Principal of Harris Teachers' College, Commends Post-Dispatch for Publishing This Work.

THE POST-DISPATCH has received the following letters from Dr. Percival Chubb, lecturer for the St. Louis Ethical Society, and Dr. E. George Payne, principal of Harris Teachers' College, in praise of Prof. Hendrik Van Loon's book, "The Story of Mankind," which is being printed as a serial in the daily editions only of the Post-Dispatch. The first installment of "The Story of Mankind" was printed last Monday and publication will be continued daily, excepting Sundays, until the entire work is presented. It will require about 25 days more to do this.

Making Romance of History, Says Chubb

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The secret of Mr. Van Loon's success as a historian with the young is divulged in his Foreword to his two youngsters, Hansje and Willem. History—from the memorable day of which he tells them, when he mounted the dark stairs of the high tower of old St. Lawrence and looked out over Rotterdam and the world—history has been for him a thrilling romance. He cannot keep from saying it over once in the book, after telling how the grandsom of a pirate became a great King, he exclaims: "Why should we read fairy stories when the truth of history is so much more interesting and entertaining?"

In this spirit he tries to do for all those who are young and innocent as regards history—no matter how old they are—what Mr. Wells did for those who are further along in his "Outline of History."

"It reads like a novel," yes, and it is from novels that most young people have preferred to get their history in the past—Scott, Cooper, Lytton, Kingsley. "Why, you don't need this sort of sugar-coated history," Mr. Van Loon seems to say. "Try the plain sort. It has a wonderful tang." See! it begins with this arrow-head dug-out of our Cahokia mounds; and this bit of pottery. To piece it out you can go to the museums and study the very ancient jewelry and coins which have been dug up; and the mummies, the tombstones, the clay tablets and cylinders, the bits of buildings and statuary; the weapons and armor, this old canoe, this copy of an old Viking ship dug out of the sand, or of Columbus caravel; or this old New England whale-oil lamp, this old prairie-schooner and stage coach.

And he introduces his young readers to the romance of the man who went digging for history, as Mr. Moorehead has been digging here at Cahokia. "Once-upon-a-time" there was a boy to whom his father read the story of the siege of Troy, as told by the old blind poet, Homer. The boy liked it so much that he determined that when he grew to be a man, with plenty of money, he would go and dig out Troy and learn some history. And that is what Heinrich Schliemann did.

Of course history is more than romance. Mr. Wells wrote his Outline because he believed that we can make a knowledge of history a means of securing peace for the world. We could never plunge into war if we realized our common adventure through the ages, and our common lot and destiny. We are all pilgrims along the same great highway; and fighting among outselves only hinders our advance. So he would have history made the backbone and background of education—not the history of our own country only, but, before and above that, the history of man.

And Mr. Van Loon, although he knows that for the young it is the romance of the story that will win them, is anxious for them to pass on to the serious side, and so he closes his foreword to Hansje and Willem with these words.

"History is the mighty tower of experience, which time has built amidst the endless fields of bygone ages. It is no easy task to reach the top of this ancient structure and get the benefit of the full view. There is no elevator; but young feet are strong, and it can be done. Here I give you the key that will open the door. When you return you, too, will understand the reason for my enthusiasm."

This particular door opens upon pages filled with fascinating pictures and diagrams and "animated maps"—think of a map that is alive!

Every Page Is "Animated."

If only the history of our own country could be "romanced" in the same way! Well, it seems that Mr. Van Loon is trying his hand at that. But mankind comes first—ourselves next. So let us begin by climbing this tower. It is the highest of all.

Epoch-Making Work, Writes Dr. Harris

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am personally deeply interested in the fact that you have begun a publication of Prof. Hendrik Van Loon's "The Story of Mankind." This interests me mainly because of a definite feeling that the newspapers should bring serious works of this kind to the attention of the reading public, and also because of the fact that the book may be brought to hundreds of people who would not otherwise have the opportunity of reading it. This statement may be made with reference to any great work, but I wish to say, with partic-

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY CARELESS WASHING

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

BRITISH NEWS TOPICS; SKY WRITING APPEARS

Airplane With Smoke Device Spells Out "Daily Mail" as Derby Crowd Watches.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 3.—The Daily Mail has introduced "sky writing" as a new means of advertising. The writing is done by an airplane equipped with a smoke producing device and an automatically controlled ejecter.

The first experiment was made over Epsom Downs on Derby Day, and it was so successful that great possibilities are seen in the enterprise.

The throngs along the race course first saw what appeared to be a long, slender, blackish cloud marring the otherwise clear sky. As they watched, however, they saw the gradual formation of the letter "D" against the sky. A moment later a second letter took shape.

The crowds, mystified as to how the letters were anchored in space, used powerful glasses with which they were just able to see the airplane, a mere dot emitting great clouds of smoke during its skillfully manuevered flight. The letter remained clearly defined for more than five minutes.

The nine letters composing the sign "DAILY MAIL" had been spelled backwards so that they would face the crowds below in their proper position. It took five minutes of a carefully planned flight, during which millions of cubic feet of smoke were ejected. The smoke trail composing the letters was ten miles long and the completed sign was three miles wide and two and one-half miles from the ground. It was visible over more than 80 square miles of territory.

VAN LOON HAS MADE ROMANCE OF HISTORY IN "STORY OF MANKIND"

ular reference to Prof. Van Loon's book, that because of its appropriateness in subject matter to both children and adults it is noteworthy that you have begun its publication.

The book is written in a popular style and deals with problems of fascinating interests to the young and the old. Its deeply human appeal will not only acquaint readers with the facts of the study of mankind, but will give glimpses into its future possibilities, and will stimulate the imagination of every reader to a deeper appreciation and understanding of human nature and the development of civilization.

I congratulate you upon your readiness to perform this great service for St. Louis by bringing this epoch-making work to the attention of the St. Louis public in this problem form. E. GEORGE PAYNE,

NEW LICENSES BRING NUMBER OF BROADCASTIN PLANTS TO 300

Twenty-six new broadcasting stations licensed during the past week in 18 different States bring the total stations broadcasting news and entertainment to 300. Five of the new stations are located in California which leads the list with a total of 59 stations. Ohio is second with 23, Pennsylvania has 20, and New York 18. Texas is no longer the "lone star" State according to the map of Utah, North and South Dakota each have a single star for one station.

Today every State except New Hampshire, South Carolina, Delabroadcasting stations at the Department of Commerce, as Maryland ware, Mississippi, Kentucky, Wyoming and Idaho has one or more broadcasting stations.

Although the prospective bill to give the Secretary of Commerce more control over radio transmission stations has not yet been introduced in Congress, work is progressing and it is still felt that the measure will be passed this session. Little opposition is expected, as all but seven States are directly interested, and support is guaranteed by nearly 16,000 amateurs, many newspapers and all the other broadcasters.

MICHIGAN TO HAVE THIRTEEN BROADCASTING STATIONS

Michigan is probably the first state to undertake the establishment of a State-wide radio system of its own, although some municipalities, including Detroit, have broadcasting stations. State officials recently submitted a request to the Shipping Board for 13 complete transmitting and receiving sets such as were designed for the board's wooden war fleet and completed at a cost of $5000 each. These sets will be distributed and installed in the principal cities and ports of Michigan along the Great Lakes, it is understood.

The sets are now packed and ready to ship to Michigan, for broadcasting weather, crop and market reports, and official State messages in connection with its police force, forest rangers, shipping, coast guard, and other activities which require communication with out-of-the-way places. The most valuable function of this Michigan radio set, however, will be its operation in the event of a break in the regular communication system, due to winter storms especially, for although all the wires might be down, a dozen or more radio stations could maintain a system of communication practically throughout the State, either operated from point to point or by broadcasting. As an emergency system for official use in case of disorder or a State-wide strike, Michigan will have a dependable means of communication always at hand.

The Shipping Board sets, which are 1 kw. spark transmitters, have practically a 500-mile radius, if audion detectors are used in receiving.

MORE POWERFUL APPARATUS TO BE INSTALLED AT Y. M. C. A.

Radio equipment which will transmit and receive wireless messages over a wide area will be installed this week at the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, to be operated by members of the evening radio class which is beginning the sixth week of its course, and also for use in the instructi n of the day classes which will open June 19.

In addition to an intensive study of the international code, the day classes which will be held daily except Saturday and Sunday, from 9 to 12 a. m., will offer instruction which will enable students to enter the field of radio telegraphy and telephony as commercial operators, salesmen or directors, and assemblers of equipment. Several out-of-town students are included in the list of those who have already enrolled for the day course, which is open to both men and women. Detailed information concerning the course may be obtained at Y. M. C. A. headquarters, 411 North Seventh street.

SIMPLEST RECEIVING SET YET DEVISED COSTS A QUARTER

When nearly every Radio fan had become reconciled to the fact that the cheapest set in the world would cost about $5, even when built at home, comes a Washingtonian with a receiving set good for 300 miles which can be built out of odds and ends at a cost of about $0.25 exclusive of antenna and receivers.

Mr. C. A. Briggs, of the Weights and Measures Division of the Bureau of Standards, has constructed a receiving set along metric lines, which, while not the smallest nor the most compact, is believed to be the simplest and cheapest receiving set yet designed.

Aside from the antenna, ground wire, detector and phones, which are necessary to all sets, the arrangement consists of two simple coils wound on strips of flat cardboard; no variable condenser or sliding contacts being necessary. All tuning within the range of the set can be accomplished by sliding one coil over the other, first using the upper one with one face turned to the top, and then with the other face turned up, according to the wave length of the incoming signal.

The cost of the material used, in addition to the antenna and telephone receivers, amounts to about 60 cents including the cost of the crystal detector and all screws and metal parts. But as practically every amateur can locate some of the material about the house or work shop, the actual cost can be reduced to about 25 cents, it is said. Radio broadcasts sent out by Schenectady, 300 miles from Washington, have been received without amplification.

New Naval Radio Equipment.

New radio equipment will soon be issued to many naval ships and craft, it was learned today, purchased out of savings effected by the Bureau of Engineering, and the engineering operation of the fleets.

The new equipment includes 100-watt "AC" tube sets of navy model TM, for submarines, increasing their radio range from three to five times. At shore radio stations new improvements amounting to $143,420 have been instituted. Anacostia will have a new special, high-voltage generator for development work in radio. A 2-k. w., 2000-cycle oscillator has also been ordered for sound-research work, and the installation of a powerful radio phone transmitting set at Arlington has been completed.

Static and Storm Centers.

Plans for the study of static, so troublesome to the radio fan, in connection with its possible relation to storm centers, have been announced by the Navy Department for the coming summer months. All radio compass stations, especially those along the Southern and gulf coasts, will co-operate with the Weather Bureau in taking radio-compass bearings on all static disturbances three times daily, in an effort to determine whether or not there is any connection between the center of electrical disturbances and the centers of storms. If this is found to be the case, it is said that storms originating off the southeastern coast can be followed every foot of their progress up the gulf or coast and forecasts sent in advance of them to the sections of the country which they will touch. The new static schedule went into effect May 20, at the Hampton Roads air station, reports on the quantity, intensity and bearing of atmospheric static being received by telegraph from naval compass stations, at Hog Island, Virginia Beach and Poyer's Hill daily at 8 a. m., noon and 4 p. m.

Radio Wins Out in Test.

A recent test conducted by Shipping Board representatives at San Francisco to determine the more efficient and economical method of handling communication between points gave the honors to radio. After a two weeks' trial with similar messages sent between San Francisco and Los Angeles, San Diego, Portland, Seattle and Tacoma, the average time elapsed between filing messages at Shipping Board offices and the receipt of same by addressees for wire lines averaged 37 minutes, whereas the average was only 33 minutes via commercial radio circuits. The traffic cost was between 40 and 50 per cent less using radio communication, with the result that most of the coastwise traffic is now being given to the radio circuit, although some difficulty may be encountered with summer static.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S RADIO SET INSTALLED IN WHITE HOUSE

President Harding has joined the big army of amateur radio enthusiasts, and he recently had a powerful radio outfit installed at the White House, so that he can listen in on concerts, political speeches and keep in touch with public opinion generally throughout the country.

The President's radio telephone may be tuned to any wave length between 200 and 25,000 meters, whereas the average receiving outfit of the amateur functions in the neighborhood of 600 meters. Suggesting the high regard in which the chief executive holds his newly introduced "entertainers," the instrument occupies a bookcase located alongside his desk.

The antenna is situated along the roof of the White House, extending to a towering tree on the south side of the grounds of the executive mansion. Shades of George Washington! could his imagination, in its keenest moments, have visualized such a scene of marvelous progress.

Secretary of the Navy Denby suggested the White House radio outfit at a recent Cabinet meeting, and it was approved by all present. Two hours and 35 minutes later Navy experts had completed installing it at the White House.

BREAD ORDERS BY RADIO AN IDEA IN PHILADELPHIA

The Kolb Bakery Co. of Philadelphia has equipped a delivery motor car with a radio. A complete radio receiving outfit, having a detector with three stages of amplification, a loud speaker attachment, and a ground wire attached to the frame of the car, has been installed on one of the company's automobiles.

NEW OWNERS THIRD OF OVERLAND SALES

The increase in volume in Overland and Willys-Knight sales continues to grow, according to the reports of the Willys-Overland Co., issued for the month of May.

One of the interesting facts which the analysis of Willys-Overland figures shows is the distribution of the purchases of Overland cars.

More than one-third of all Overland cars purchased this spring, according to their figures, are by buyers who never owned a car before. Approximately another third are made up of former Overland owners and the other third are made up of owners of other cars.

With rare skill, the individual fenders, individual aluminum steps, searchlight type head lamps and exterior cowl lights have been united to create a desirable and distinct impression of style.

There is a confident reserve of dependable power in the famous Haynes-built six cylinder motor, while quality is evidenced in the cord tire equipment, genuine leather upholstery, and the inclusion of the Haynes electric button starting system.

Only the immense facilities of the Haynes factories and the genuine economies of Haynes manufacture could combine so many refinements of excellence and factors of reliability, and offer them at the price of the Haynes 55 Touring Car.

CHANDLER ANNOUNCES NEW SEDAN MODEL

Recognizing the growing demand for close coupled sedans of the more sociable type, the Chandler Motor Car Co. has announced the Metropolitan sedan. This new five-passenger sedan is a worthy addition to the Chandler family, which now numbers 10 models.

This new sedan embodies every motoring requirement. The Fisher body includes interior metal accoutrements of colonial design, done in full silver finish, which blend with the upholstery.

The new model is featured by four exceptionally wide doors and individual cast aluminum steps. The elimination of protruding door hinges is accomplished in a manner reminiscent of "custom built" quality. The car has a nickel-trimmed radiator and barrel-type head lamps, trunk rack fitted with vertical and horizontal polished aluminum bars, and wire wheels.

The new sedan, a four-door, inclosed car, has a full metal back construction, differentiating it from many of the cars in its price class that have panel or fabric constructed backs. Combined with these features is the six-cylinder Continental "Red Seal" 50-horsepower motor, Timken axles and transmission bearings and special standard construction throughout. The body of the sedan is roomy and comfortable and mounted directly on the frame to eliminate rattles and squeaks. HOUSEWARMING HELD AT LEE'S OFFICES

A housewarming in the newly decorated offices of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, at 3124 Locust street, and the Automotive Employment Co. was held Thursday afternoon. Robert E. Lee, secretary and manager of the dealers' association, and officers and directors of the association and Don Livingston of the employment company were the hosts.

PAIGE TO HOLD DEMONSTRATION WEEK

The week of June 11th has been set aside as National Demonstration week by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. During that period, all over the country from coast to coast, Paige dealers will keep "open house" and play the role of hosts, extending to all, whether prospective car purchasers or not, special opportunities to ride in the Paige 6-66, try out its qualities on the road or in the city traffic and fill out a performance chart for purposes of comparison if they so desire.

National Demonstration week, for the Paige, is in the nature of an anniversay celebration. It was in May, last year, that the Paige 6-66 Daytona model, on the Uniontown (Pa.) track, broke every world's stock chassis speedway record from five to 100 miles. During the year these marks remained not only unbeaten, but unchallenged until the car that had made them, on May 7th last, or the Cotati (Cal.) speedway, in a dash against time covered 25 miles in 15 minutes and 27:95 seconds, a new world's stock chassis record. This added more than six miles per hour to the same car's previous world's record of 90.1 made a year ago.

It is not the purpose of the National Demonstration week to give the motorists who accept the Paige invitation a touch of "high life" at 96 miles an hour, but to show how the Paige responds to the nonprofessional driver and the value of its performing powers in daily service over a period of years.

Arrangements are now being made by the Newell Motor Car Co., local distributors to demonstrate the Paige to all motorists who care to afford themselves of the opportunity to test the car.

LAVIER RE-ELECTED TO HEAD RAY BATTERY CO.

The election of a new set of officers by the Ray Battery Co. of Ypsilanti, Mich., has recently been announced by letter to William Moerchell of the Moerschell Battery Co., local distributers for Ray batteries.

Thomas H. Lavier, Jr., inventor of the Lavier Formula Plates used in Ray batteries, has been re-elected president; M. M. Read of the Ypsilanti Savings Bank is vice-president, J. S. McDowell, secretary, and A. M. Colegrove, treasurer.

E. B. Eastburn has been appointed sales manager. He comes to the Ray Battery Co. from the Republic Rubber Co., where he was Western district manager with headquarters at Kansas City.

The Ray battery plates are of stone like consistency and yet are extremely porous. The high porisity allows the free flow of current from the battery and the rigidity of the plates and their toughness prevent them from washing down or buckling, which are faults almost impossible to overcome in a storage battery.

GENERAL TIRE COMPANY APPOINTS DISTRIBUTOR

Announcement is made by the General Tire and Rubber Co. of Akron, O., that the distribution of the General tire has been placed with the Frampton company, the accessory branch of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. Edward S. Block, who was in the tire business before he joined the Hudson-Frampton company is in charge of the tire department. The Frampton company occupies quarters in the large service building of the Hudson-Frampton company on Delmar, just west of Taylor avenue.

KAUT PROMOTED BY WARD MOTOR CAR CO.

S. B. Ward, president of the Ward Motors Co., Chalmers and Maxwell distributers, announces that Thomas C. Kaut has been appointed director of sales for his organization.

Kaut has been associated with leading automobile distributers and factories in the capacity of wholesale and retail automotive promotion for several years.

DORRIS AGAIN WINS YOSEMITE RUN

The 1922 winner, a Seven-Passenger Distillator equipped touring car was entered in the Economy test by Albert J. Russell, California Distributor for the Dorris Motor Car Co.

Carrying six passengers and their baggage, at a total weight of 5490 pounds, the Dorris covered the entire course of 360 miles over the mountains through mud, rain and snow on 20.4 gallons of gasoline, averaging 17.6 miles to the gallon.

Striking and Unusual Value Which Everyone Knows

The striking and really unusual thing about the public estimate of the Hupmobile is its unanimity.

Its owners give it their greatest regard because it is so reliable, so economical, so wholly efficient. Other owners look upon it almost with a tinge of envy.

Garage mechanics—who know all cars and their secrets—admire it for the sturdy qualities which keep it out of their hands and on the go.

The real test of a motor car, or any other manufactured product, is what people think and say about it.

Can you recall any other car with the good reputation everywhere which the Hupmobile has, or a value that more fully measures up to its reputation?

WHEN YOU BUY OIL the chief question is: Are you getting a specialized lubricating oil—or oil which is merely an incidental by-product of some gasoline refinery?

Price per gallon, or "looks," or "feel," or chemical tests cannot answer that question. Then how can you be sure?

Ask for a 5-gallon can of Gargoyle Mobiloil—the grade recommended for your car.

Gargoyle Mobiloil is a specialized lubricating oil, carefully refined from crude oil specially chosen for its lubricating value.

Sheer superiority of results accounts for the fact that throughout the country there are more specific requests for Gargoyle Mobiloil than for any 3 other oils combined.

FOR the transmission and differential of your car use Gargoyle Mobiloil "C" or "CC" or Mobilubricant—as specified in the Chart.

Contributions to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund continue to come in slowly, $67.18 having been received since Tuesday of last week, bringing the total amount in the fund for the babies to $509.68. Requests for tickets and refreshment placards are being received from many boys and girls, however, and it is believed that with the closing of school the work for the tenement children will be speeded up, and rapid progress made toward the $10,000 goal which has been set as the minimum amount necessary for the summer's relief work.

A group of children from the neighborhood gave a show, "The Enchanted Garden," at 5554 Cabanne avenue last week and earned $48.41 for the Milk and Ice Fund, passing the mark they established last summer when they earned $30 for the fund by a similar affair. Following their entertainment they sold refreshments on the lawn. Those who took part were: Charlotte Koons, Katherine Gilger, Isabel Kirkpatrick, Virginia Werner, Marjory Carter, Margaret Gardiner, Beth and Violet Wilson, Mary Agnes and Virginia Hawkins, Betty Sheldon, Emily Hurd and Constance Walther.

Ralph M. Abel, Jane Bayle, Francis O'Neil and Norman Gausman, who designated themselves as "the boys and girls of Ames place, University City," sent $2.77 for the fund.

Four cash contributions totaling $16 were included in the four days' receipts.

Style Show to Be Held Aug. 2 to 16.

The annual St. Louis Style Show will be held in the Municipal open-air Theater, Aug. 2 to 16, inclusive. There will be 12 performances. The tryout for the selection of models will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday in the assembly hall of the Chamber of Commerce.

170 LOTS IN NORTH WESTMOOR TO BE PUT ON THE BLOCK

SALE TO CONTINUE THREE OR FOUR DAYS

Heber Harter Co., of New York, to Conduct Auction — Many Improvements Being Made.

By Berry Moore.

The north part of Westmoor, a new subdivision at the southwest corner of Clayton road and Pennsylvania avenue, embracing 170 lots, and having an extensive frontage on Clayton road, is to be put on the auction block on Friday, June 9, at 2:30 p. m., and knocked down in lots to suit to the highest bidder without limit or reserve. The sale will continue for three or four days, or until all of the lots have been disposed of.

The auction will be conducted by the Heber Harter Co., a large auction concern of New York, and under the auspices of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, agent for the Westmoor Land Co., of which Ralph Coale is president and the dominant spirit. The land to be sold is a section of 170 acres recently acquired by a group of local capitalists headed by Coale.

The Westmoor company, with Coale as its leader, according to the auctioneers, drove a bargain in the purchase of this tract and acquired it before the flight of prices in this district began. Thus it is in a position to resell at the prices likely to prevail at the auction, which has been resorted to in order to expedite the disposition of the property.

Corner Lot Sold.

The southwest corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Clayton road, which is embraced in the subdivision, was sold a week or so ago to Morris Moltin, who resold it a week later to James A. Mazzoni. While the prices paid were not disclosed, it is understood that Moltin realized a profit of $1700. The lot has 77 feet on Pennsylvania avenue by 140 feet on Clayton road, and may be occupied for business purposes and accordingly has alluring speculative advantages.

The lots in Clayton road at its intersection with Pennsylvania avenue, has been straightened by cutting off a plot 50x205 feet of the subdivision, thereby forming a sort of island, as it were, and on either side of which Clayton road runs. This "island" which is available as a filling station, was purchased several weeks ago by Joseph Darst Jr., as a speculation.

The sales mentioned in the foregoing were made before it was decided to place the property under the auctioneer's hammer and embraced the only parcels of the subdivision, so far sold.

The tract has been platted with 15 lots on Pennsylvania avenue for business purposes. The Clayton road frontage will be offered as sites for houses, while lots on the streets to the north will be offered for apartment houses. The cost of buildings, exclusive of sites, permissible in the addition, ranges from $4500 to $6500.

Work Going On.

From 25 to 30 teams, exclusive of steam shovels and tractors are employed in grading this tract, and construction of sidewalks, streets and curbing will be launched as soon as the ground is available. Construction of sewer, water, gas and electric mains is progressing. All these improvements will be included in the prices at which the lots are sold and will be guaranteed by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust. The subdivision has been designed with winding drives and miniature parks, and otherwise will be made attractive, under the direction of Julius Pitzman, City Surveyor, who has had broad experience of landscape work.

The location, at the junction of two famous highways, is regarded as unrivaled and eligible for a subdivision of the most exclusive class. The fine combination subdivision to be launched by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust will be grouped with Moorland, Forest Ridge, Southmoor, Brentmoor and Westmoor, the restrictions of all of which preclude the erection of buildings other than those of the highest order.

The Cornet & Zeibig Trust has put up a branch office at the corner of Clayton road and Pennsylvania avenue, and has representatives there to explain the advantages of the property.

The tract is a short distance west of the Christian Brothers College, in course of construction on the north side of Clayton road, just west of Hi-Pointe, considered by real estate man as an attractive feature of this district.

The Heber-Harter Co. conducts auction sales of real estate all over the country, it recently having made large sales for S. S. Thorpe, of Minneapolis, and for F. Wood Beckman of Altoona, Pa., president of the State Realtors Association, of Pennsylvania.

Goldman Home, Said to Be City's Only True Georgian Structure

ONE of the largest houses recently built in Skinker Heights, south of Washington University, is that of Stanley Goldman, vice-president of Goldman Bros., Furniture Co.

The house is designed in the manner of the early Georgian houses, built in Bath, England, during the early part of the Eighteenth Century. That is said by the architects to be the only true example of this period of English architecture in the city.

The house contains a large entrance hall with iron stairs and a large living room running the entire depth of the house, with a large Bedford stone fireplace. An unusual feature of this fire place is the English fire bricks with which the sides and back opening are lined, and imported from London. The two ends of the living room contain book-cases extending to the ceiling. The walls are covered with a dull, bluish brocade. A polychrome decoration has been carried out throughout the details of the cornices and chandeliers by the Lukes Decorating Co.

From the living room, French doors lead into the sun room, almost entirely of glass, and which commands views overlooking Washington University and the private park of Robert Brookings.

Every modern convenience has been installed. An ice machine supplies ice to the refrigerator, an incinerator has been installed in the basement. An oil burning furnace will be used.

CEREMONIES MARK BREAKING OF GROUND FOR NEW TEMPLE

The first earth was turned last evening for a Masonic building at East St. Louis to be erected under auspices of Ainad Temple, of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. A street dance and band concert were given by Ainad Temple's band and drum corps before departing on a special train for the national convention at San Francisco.

C. H. Quackenbush, potentate of Ainad Temple, presided at the ceremonies. Several addresses were given. The dancing was on St. Louis avenue, which was closed to traffic until 9 p. m., after which the members marched to Relay Station. About 250 members of the order, many residing in cities outside of East St. Louis, who are members of Ainad Temple, accompanied by their wives, made up the party.

PROSPERITY THOUGHT TO BE SHOWN BY CASH PAYMENTS

The return of prosperity is indicated by the large number of purchasers of University Park property who have paid cash, in the opinion of John W. Higginbotham, vice president of the Cyrus Crane Willmore Corporation, owners of this subdivision in University City.

"It is astonishing," said Higginbotham, "what a large percentage of our clients have paid in full for their purchases. A year and a half ago, when we were handling another piece of property, it was hard for the acreage buyer to get together the cash to make his first payment, but today there are surprisingly large numbers who have the cash for full payments."

DYEING AND CLEANING FIRM PLAN FOR ERECTION OF NEW PLANT

The J. O. Chenoweth Dyeing and Cleaning Co., 1418 Washington avenue, is planning the erection of a new building for its plant at the northwest corner of Bayard avenue and Delmar boulevard. The contracts for a two-story structure, to cost about $120,000, will be let soon, and it is hoped to have the work completed by Jan. 1, 1923.

The building has been designed by Albert B. Groves, architect. The site, a vacant lot, was formerly used by an open air motion picture theater. The building will have sections for a dye house, for rug cleaning and for dry cleaning, and will have its own lighting plant. The exterior finish will be brick with terra cotta trimming. Edward W. Miller is president and manager of the company.

Archer, and are occupied by the Detroit Electric Sales and Service Co.

Other sales reported by the Watts company during the week are: A nine-room brick residence at 5215 Enright avenue, for Fountain Rothwell; a lot on Harvard avenue in University City, to Fountain Rothwell for the estate of Grace E. Letson Scully; two lots on the south side of Forsyth boulevard, in Northmoor, to Laura Reid, for Charles H. Porter.

EQUITABLE BUILDING SALE PRICE SAID TO BE $1,500,000

MILLS BUILDING ALSO TRANSFERRED

Eight-Story Property Goes to Sesame Realty & Investment Co. for Consideration of $265,000.

The movement in the real estate field during the last week was on a large scale, with investment and speculative opertions in the foreground. The scope of activities embraced downtown and uptown St. Louis and the suburban area. Developments indicate a broad expansion of real estate activities.

The foremost transactions of the week included the Equitable Building, a 10-story office structure at the northwest corner of Sixth and Locust streets, acquired by Aaron Waldheim for a price said to be $1,500,000, and the eight-story Mills Building at the northwest corner of Seventh and St. Charles streets, control of which passed to the Sesame Realty & Investment Co., of which John S. Leahy, a prominent attorney, is president, for $265,000, as was told exclusively in the Post-Dispatch on Friday.

The sale of the Equitable Building, including the ground, which was announced exclusively in the Post-Dispatch several weeks ago when the earnest money contracts were signed, was engineered by the Bradley Trust Co., of which George E. Bradley is president, for the Equitable Life Insurance Association of New York, and was a record cash transaction. Isaac T. Cook & Co., in connection with the Mercantile Trust Co., brought about the sale of the Mills Building, which stands on leased ground, and does not include the fee to the site.

The Mills Building Co., the seller, frontage of 70 feet on Seventh street, is situated between St. Charles street and Washington avenue. Seventh street is fast becoming one of the most important arteries of the retail trade by virtue of the business of the Famous-Barr and Grand Leader department stores. The entire Mills building is occupied by the Hess & Culbertson Jewelry Co.

The Mills Building Co., the seller, was represented by C. H. McMillan, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co. Isaac T. Cook & Co. will have the management of the building as agent for the new owner.

Big Check Passed.

The deed to the Equitable Building recites a nominal consideration, but it is understood that the actual price paid was in the vicinity of $1,500,000. The fact that the purchaser passed one of the largest checks for payment on real estate in a generation indicates, according to George E. Bradley, that the long-expected turning of adroit business men toward real estate for investment, as well as speculative purposes, has begun definitely.

Albert von Hoffman, president of the Von Hoffman Press, purchased the building of the National Lead Co. at the northwest corner of Ninth street and Clark avenue for $110,000 through Isaac Hedges, manager of Cupples Station. This purchase gives Von Hoffman ownership of all the property on the west side of Ninth street from Clark avenue to Walnut, which he has assembled with plans for a large building.

Y. M. C. A. Site Considered.

According to realty circles, negotiations are pending for the building and site of the Y. M. C. A. at the northeast corner of Grand and Franklin avenues, and for the Odeon on the east side of Grand avenue, between Cook and Bell avenues. The Odeon is one of the largest holdings on Central Grand avenue, occupying a site 117 feet 11 inches by 392 feet. Negotiations have not reached a definite stage.

While characterized by some persons as a myth, it is reported that a plan is on foot to erect in St. Louis a hotel on a scale eclipsing the largest in the city. An entire city block is sought for this project, which contemplates a structure with 1200 rooms, the story goes. The design will be different from anything in the hotel line in St. Louis and the building will be constructed of material which will give an Italian marble effect. The first three floors will be given over to business men for luncheons, conventions and the like, and will have what is known as the Arabian Caravan. There is also on foot a movement to build a bigger theater than any other in St. Louis and with many novel features.

Negotiations are progressing for several large tracts adjacent to the city. The prospective purchasers have subdivision plans. One of these deals involves $250,000. A religious institution has taken an option on a large tract in St. Louis County, which is under consideration as a site for a school on an extensive scale. Negotiations in these instances, it is believed, will be brought to a successful conclusion in the early future.

Facts About Women Who Are Candidates for Office in St. Louis and County

Three Women in City Want to Go to Congress and Several in City and County Are Candidates for Legislature.

Women this year have their first big opportunity to seek places on the major party tickets in Missouri for public office, and several of them have seized it. Three women in St. Louis are seeking nomination for Congress, two for the State Legislature, and one for Circuit Judge; two in St. Louis County have filed for nomination for the Legislature and one for Circuit Clerk, and two in St. Louis and nine in the county are seeking membership on party committees.

Most of them filed their candidacy so entirely on the spur of the moment that they have no plans for campaigning, and some of them are somewhat aghast at the idea of "stumping" their district. One said that she would circulate cards announcing her candidacy among "relatives and friends."

All have had some activity in politics, some have held party office, and Miss Lena Frank, who is running for one of the nine Democratic nominations to circuit judgeship, is now an Assistant Prosecuting Attorney. Some of those seeking office on the Democratic ticket already have announced that they are Wilson Democrats and aligned with Breckinridge Long against Senator Reed in the senatorial race.

Miss Adeline P. Wagoner, who resides at the Planters Hotel and is a candidate for Republican nomination to Congress from the Eleventh (North St. Louis) District, has long been active in Republican women's politics. She is a member of several clubs, and has been president of the St. Louis branch of the National Plant, Fruit and Flower Guild. She told a reporter that she had been so active in the work of the Shakespearean Tercentenary Society that she had found no time to plan a campaign or outline a platform.

Petition Bearer Misses Train.

W. E. Harrison, president of a State Republican organization of railroad workers, setting out Thursday night to file Mrs. Wagoner's declaration at Jefferson City, missed the last train and telephoned Secretary Becker that he was coming by automobile. But it began to look as though he wasn't when he got on the wrong road and found himself on the wrong side of Osage River at Osage City, where there is only a railroad bridge. Harrison walked across on the bridge and telephoned to Jefferson City, 12 miles away, for a taxicab. He awakened one of Becker's employes after 1 o'clock, but was permitted to file the declaration on account of the telephone not...

Miss Anne M. Evans of 3113 Kimberly avenue, practicing lawyer and Soldan High civics instructor, who is running for congressional nomination against Mrs. Wagoner and Bernard Bogy, is one woman who drives her own Ford on the right side of the street, without nervousness, without racing the engine, and without playfully scattering inoffensive widows and orphans waiting for street cars. Incidentally, she repaints it herself, she proudly told a reporter whom she gave a "lift" yesterday from the high school.

She is a graduate of the Benton Law School, Vassar College, Central High School and the Marquette School, and has always lived in or adjacent to the Eleventh District. On graduating from college she became a teacher at Carr Park playground, and since then has been engaged as a school teacher and an investigator of industrial and social conditions for the Government, the city, the Red Cross and other organizations, and has been head of research of the Missouri School of Social Economy.

Prepared to Make Speeches.

"I have worked for the city under Republican and Democratic administrations," she said, "and I have been so busy working for civic development that no time was left for much activity in politics as politics. This (her candidacy) was the next step. That was impressed upon me by numerous suggestions from friends and acquaintances. The time came when I felt that my work may better be continued directly through government."

She is a member of the Republican women's Twenty-seventh Ward organization, and said she is prepared to speak at meetings in her district, because her work has given her experience in lecturing in every State. She said also that children whom she directed in playgrounds in the district now are voters.

Miss Evans was employed by New Jersey organizations to make a study of women in St. Louis industry, and her report, with others from large industrial centers, acuated the passing of the New Jersey nine-hour law for women. From 1908 to 1910 she collected data on the condition of women and children in the cotton industry of the South, preliminary to the establishment of the Federal Children's Bureau.

She returned to St. Louis on account of the death of her mother, and sent in her resignation to the Department of Labor, but was assigned to investigate in Missouri the effects on women of employment at telephone switchboards. She later became probation officer of the Juvenile Court, incidentally gathering and analyzing records of all juvenile cases for a report which showed that delinquency followed disruption of homes by death or separation, but was removed in 1912 by a law requiring probation officers to be over 25 years old.

Tour for Government.

In 1915 Miss Evans investigated women's organizations in rural communities for the Department of Agriculture and made an official organizing tour of the country, later publishing a report which gave impetus to the movement for restrooms for farmers' wives in country towns.

She had previously been employed by the Municipal Tuberculosis Commission in investigating conditions in every shoe and cigar factory in the city and in acquainting managers, foremen and workers with the disastrous results to health of some conditions and beneficial results of others. She told the reporter that when she entered one factory, the men, knowing her business, all began coughing, but when she made an understandable test of the unhealthy state of the air with the windows close, as they were, and then with them open, they kept them open.

Miss Evans declares herself for general civic improvement, not only for women in industry, and not only for workmen, but for employers and the family as well. She favors extension of training for self-support of wounded veterans and men injured at their jobs or otherwise.

Mrs. Madeline Menaugh, 424 South Second street, seeks Democratic nomination to Congress from the Twelfth District. She resigned as city committeewoman from the Sixth Ward because she favors Long for Senator and members of the committee have come out for Reed.

Prosecutes Liquor Cases.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Lena Frank, at the time of her appointment a year and a half ago, was president of the city and State Women's Bar Associations. She had been unusually successful in prosecuting State liquor cases, but has refused to prosecute hip-pocket cases or those in which she believed the police to have been over-zealous. Miss Frank believes there is no specific need for women on the Circuit bench, but neither is their sex in itself disqualification.

Mrs. Sophia M. Doran, who seeks Democratic nomination to the Legislature from the Second District, is the wife of Charles J. Doran, a chiropractor, 2856A Salena street. She has been a committeewoman from the Tenth Ward, and said: "The candidacy was thrust upon me yesterday by other committeewomen. I have no plans yet except that of furthering the welfare of the community."

Mrs. Mary Jane Cowan of 5559 Cote Brilliante avenue, candidate for Democratic nomination to the Legislature from the Fifth District, announced herself as strongly opposed to encroachment of Federal upon State Government and to paternalistic legislation, and favored annexation of St. Louis County by the city, asserting that the county is in many ways parasitic. She is chairman of the women of the "Long-for-Senate-Committee," and represents the Twenty-seventh Ward on the Democratic Central Committee of Women.

Mrs. Meicene T. Smith of 7171 Kingsbury avenue, president of the University City League of Women Voters, running for Democratic nomination for State Representative from the Second District in St. Louis County, was named by the County Committee of her party. She is a member of a number of women's clubs, including the W. C. T. U. Her husband, E. T. Smith, is president of a printing firm.

Mrs. Smith is expected to have a fighting chance for the office, as her district includes University City and Maplewood, where most of the county Democrats reside, and county Republican women are not entirely in sympathy with the County Committee, as three attempts to secure enlargement of the committee for equal representation on it have failed. This accounts for the number of Republican women seeking places on the committee.

Mrs. Rosemary Alexander, 35 Monroe place, Vinita Terrace, seeks Republican nomination as First District State Representative from St. Louis County. She has conducted a real estate business for herself, and is a member of the Women's Chamber of Commerce, the Women's Republican Club, and the University Musical Research Club.

Miss Anne Byrd Yore, 7600 Westmoreland place, running for Democratic nomination for Circuit Clerk of St. Louis County, is a special representative of an insurance company. She also is a clubwoman.

Mrs. Elbridge Fulks, 3740 Lindell boulevard, a member of the League of Women Voters, is a candidate for the Republican City Committee from the Seventeenth Ward, at present represented by Frank Slater. She is running on a "progressive" platform.

Mrs. Mary L. Moore of 5214 Ridge avenue, Democrat, is the other St. Louis woman who aspires to membership on a party committee.

The women who seek committee memberships in the county are: Republicans—Mrs. Fannie Mitchell, 6150 Plymouth avenue; Mrs. Mathilde Winter, Sappington, and Miss Jean Nicholson, 538 Sappington road. Democrats—Ada B. Pierce, Kirkwood; Jennie F. Slevins, Ferguson; Mrs. Julia W. Billups and Mrs. Katheryn Starr, Webster Groves; Mrs. Rose Welp, Wellston, and Mrs. Amelia B. Wright, Glencoe.

ATTACKS ON FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD RENEWED BY HEFLIN

Alabama Senator Aroused by Report Governor of Body Is to Be Reappointed to Membership.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Reports that W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, would be reappointed to membership in that body on the expiration of his present term, Aug. 1, brought a renewal of attacks on the reserve board official today by Senator Heflin, Democrat, Alabama. The report that Harding would be reappointed "absolutely confirmed every statement" that had been made, Heflin said, in reiterating his charge that the board was controlled by "money changers of Wall street."

The President, Heflin said, should have asked for the Governor's resignation long ago, but did not because "Wall street says 'he is our jewel.'" He reviewed again the assaults he has made on the reserve board and its "deadly deflation policy," adding that the Senate Republicans were now seeking to put through the tariff measure "to continue in the favor of Wall street."

Reference to the deflation policy brought from Senator Gooding, Republican, Idaho, the question as to when that policy was applied and Heflin said it was invoked "the minute the Republicans got control of Congress."

The Idaho Senator then inquired whether the reserve board's program had not had the support of Democratic secretaries of the Treasury.

"Oh, you mean Houston," replied Heflin. "He was not a Democrat. I long since repudiated his democracy. He was a renegade and liked to stand with Wall street like other Republicans."

ADDITION FOR HOSMER HALL

Alumnae Buys Five Acres East of School—Additions Proposed.

Announcement was made yesterday that the Alumnae Association of Hosmer Hall, a private school for girls at 6454 Wydown boulevard, had bought five acres on Wydown boulevard, east of the school, from Thomas K. Skinker, which will give the school the entire block on Wydown from Dartford to University Lane.

Work will be begun at once on new buildings for the school, and the old building will be used as a dormitory. A new building to house 200 will be erected, and other buildings will be a library and auditorium, and a gymnasium.

NEW RULE OUSTS FORMALITY IN POLICE PAY DURING SICKNESS

Board Does Away With "Red Tape" Heretofore Required to Obtain Wages.

In order to simplify the bookkeeping, both in the office of the Police Board and the Police Relief Association, the board put into effect yesterday a ruling that gives a policeman his full pay without formality in case of illness. Also it automatically stops "sick benefits" which have been paid by the relief association to policemen at the rate of $1.50 a day for the period of the illness.

It is the first time in the history of the department that the full pay has been awarded the police, whether ill health or illness without making applications and getting them signed by doctors, etc.

The board recently heard of a case where a city employe appealed on losing his wages because of sickness and the courts decided in favor of the employe. This caused an investigation which resulted in the ruling yesterday.

Under the new arrangement a policeman will get his check just the same as though he were on duty if he is ill. He will not receive any sick benefits from the relief association, however, and this money will be diverted to the reserve funds of the association. A Sergeant will visit the home of the policeman immediately on his reporting sick. The Sergeant's visit will be followed closely by the visit of a department physician to diagnose the case.

Italian Envoy Back From Trip in West.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Senator Ricci, the Italian Ambassador, has returned to Washington from a six weeks' tour of the West extending as far as the Pacific Coast. He delivered addresses at different points, most of them to Italians with the object of inducing them to become loyal American citizens if they desired to remain in America.

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

L. C.—The silver dollar dated 1878, with eight tail feathers, proof only, also that with 7 tail feathers, is worth $1.10.

EX.—The wealth of the principal nations of the earth is estimated in billions: United States 234, Great Britain 70, France 58, Germany 80, Russia 58, Italy 21, Belgium 5.8, Spain 14, Netherlands 5, Portugal 2.5, Switzerland 3.8.

MRS. P. L.—To remove butter coloring stain from cloth, try a weak paste of bleaching powder and a weak solution of vinegar. Spread the paste on the stain and let it dry. Make a second application if necessary. The paste must be freshly prepared to be effective.

MUKY WATER.—The following is the method of sterilizing water with chloride of lime. In order to disinfect and sterilize 1000 parts of drinking water, 0.15 parts of dry chloride of lime are sufficient. The lime is stirred with a little water into a thin paste and introduced, with stirring, into the water to be disinfected. Two drops of official hydrochloric acid are added. After ½ hour the clarification and disinfection is accomplished, whereupon 3 grains of calcium sulphite are added in order to kill the unpleasant smell and taste of the chlorine.

RICH.—Examine the motor for heavy oil. If it has the same, unless it is a Knight Motor, piston and rings are worn causing lost compression when right oil is used. To test, put the car in first with the brake on, let the clutch out easy and listen for lost motion, also repeat in reverse. This will give you an idea of the tightness of the parts. Examine the steering wheel and see that there is not too much play. Jack up the rear of the car and start the engine and see if differential works properly, also examine each wheel and see that they are tight and do not wabble.

SUBSCRIBER.—The Peace Portal is a huge arch of steel and cement on the international boundary line at Blaine, Wash., resting half on Canadian and half on American soil. It was dedicated Sept. 6, 1921, commemorating the over 100 years of peace between Canada and the United States, a century without fortifications or armies along 3000 miles of border. The arch is in the Grecian Doric style. On the pilaster on the south side are inscribed the words: "Children of a Common Mother;" on the north side the legend runs: "Brethren Dwelling Together in Unity." On the interior, below one of the doors, are inscribed the words: "Open For One Hundred Years," below the other door: "May These Doors Never Be Closed." On either side of the portal a park has been designed. The structure bears two flag poles from one of which the flag of Great Britain flies, from the other the Stars and Stripes. More than 450 electric lights illumine the portal at night.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

A READER.—You can file suit for divorce.

W. H.—It would be best for you under the circumstances to consult a lawyer.

WORRIED WIFE.—As you have deserted your husband, he cannot sue him for not supporting you.

ED.—Congress has no power to declare a national holiday except as it applies to Government employes and the District of Columbia.

J. T.—It would be best for the man to make a will, he would then be assured that his wife would have no trouble in getting the money.

SUNDAY READER.—1. If the man dies without a will, the widow will be entitled to a child's share of his property, that is, if he left three children she would receive one-fourth of the property. If she prefers she may claim 1-3 of his real property for life. Her children who are not the husband's children are not entitled to anything. Consult a lawyer regarding the will. 2. Notes are outlawed 10 years after they become due or after the last payment was made on them.

SUBSCRIBER.—1. United States Senator must be 30 years old and have been a citizen of the United States for at least 9 years, and a legal resident of the State from which he is elected. 2. Congressman must be 25 years old, and have been a citizen of the United States 7 years and a legal resident of the State from which he is elected. See the qualifications of the members of Missouri Legislature see R. S. Mo., 1921, vol. 1, page 1, Mercantile Public Library. They are too long to publish in this column. The Constitution was amended on Aug. 2, 1921, so that women may now hold these offices. Members of St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners must be legal voters here, must have resided 1 year in Missouri and at least 2 years next preceding their appointment in St. Louis, and be of approved integrity and capacity.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

MED.—The mercury you are taking will not help gonorrheal germ in the blood.

LIZZY.—Correct any errors of digestion. Also have the nose and throat examined.

C. L. H.—No one should attempt to diagnose or prescribe for a rectal trouble without a careful examination internal and external. This is the one region for guess work by most physician examinations not being built up among many. If any abnormal condition exists it should be found and corrected. For the above reasons we cannot advise you.

MOTHER.—If the child suddenly suffers from vomiting, purging and prostration, send for a doctor at once. In the meantime place him in hot bath and then carefully dry him with a warm towel and wrap in warm blankets. If the hands and feet are cold, apply hot water bottles to the feet and hands. A poultice made of flaxseed meal (¼) and mustard (¼) should be placed over the body. Five drops of brandy in a teaspoonful of water may be given every 15 minutes. For sudden diarrhoea, and during the summer months, one teaspoonful of castor oil or of spiced syrup of rhubarb. Allow the child to drink freely of cold water that has been boiled.

MRS. E. H.—Many of the patent medicines are either absolutely ineffective or are positively dangerous. Many of them contain a large percentage of alcohol which acts as a transient tonic, and produces an exhilaration which the sufferer is likely to consider beneficial. Other patent medicines advise opium and other dangerous drugs, which never should be taken without the advice of a physician. When some patent medicines are made of pure drugs and are really valuable. It is obvious, however, that the layman cannot diagnose his trouble and the label on the bottle, or the pamphlet accompanying it, is likely to confuse him, (therefore it is best to have a physician diagnose the trouble and apply the right remedy.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mary Anna Sucher, who departed this life June 7, 1920:

Days of sadness oft come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow;
Love shall always keep you near us,
Though you left two years ago.
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts shall always linger
Around the grave where you were laid.

In memory of our dear daughter and sister, Frances Kraemer, who departed this life June 3, 1921:

It's hard to say it's for the best
When a sweet young life is called to rest.
We little thought that on that day
Our dear loved one would be called away.
We could not realize nor understand what
They said when the message came saying she was dead.
But God who loved her best
Took her home to rest.
Sadly missed by

In memory of our darling son and brother, Chas. H. Sanders, who died June 8, 1914:

It's hard to say, it's for the best,
When a sweet young life is called to rest;
We little thought, that on that day,
Our dear loved one would be called away.
We could not realize nor understand,
What they said when the message came,
Saying he was dead.
But God who loved him best, took him home to rest.

In loving memory of my beloved husband and dear father and brother, George Allers, who departed from us one year ago, June 2, 1921:

You are gone but not forgotten,
Nor shall you ever be;
As long as life and memory lasts
We shall remember thee.
If we had seen you at the last
And held your dying hand,
And heard the last sigh from your heart,
We would not feel so bad.
We did not know the pains you had,
We did not see you die;
We only know you went away
And never said, good-by.
It is one year since you left us,
And we sadly mourn and more;
Our hearts are filled with sadness,
For you we see no more.

Millionaires watch Maids Make Beds

Rich Methuselahs of Pasadena, "City of Unburied Dead," cheer at chambermaids' contest — Then they sit in their motor cars and catch trout, getting rebate of 25 cents from life membership fee in club for every fish hooked :: :: ::

By KARL K. KITCHEN.

I HAVE made a great discovery. What Pasadena needs is not an elixir of youth but an elixir of age.

This will come as a shock to those who regard this millionaires' playground as "The City of the Unburied Dead." But having spent a fortnight in Pasadena I am convinced that its "old boys" are not missing anything.

If I were not prematurely bald I would have had to buy a white wig to feel at home in this millionaires' colony. For there was no one under 70 in the set I moved in. But never did I have such pacemakers. At the dansants, as well as at the nineteenth hole of every golf course, they were "there" with both feet, although often with rubber heels. As one 88-year-old young man put it to me, as he pointed to his spats: "There's life in the old dogs yet."

How do the aged millionaires of Pasadena amuse themselves? I can feel your impatience at not coming directly to the point. But I want to prepare you by degrees for the mad whirl of activity and gayety into which I am to plunge you.

My most exciting afternoon in this light-hearted but heavy bank-rolled set was spent at a bed-making contest on the lawn of the Hotel Huntington, the largest hostelry in Southern California. Do not imagine that the members of the millionaire colony took part in the contest—that would have been too exciting. And with their blood pressures ranging from 220 to 290 such sport would surely have proved fatal. No, the millionaires only watched the bed-making contests, which you must admit is "some sport."

I have attended a great many different kinds of contests in my life—from pie eating to fighting in France. But I never saw anything like this bed-making contest on the lawn of the Hotel Huntington a few weeks ago.

The starter was George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, one of the biggest banks in the world. And when he gave the signal to begin the race 400 millionaires, rich and poor, trembled with excitement.

"Are you ready—set—go!" he shouted, and the eight chambermaids were "off" amid the cheers of the millionaires. How they spread the spotless white sheets and tucked them in! It was positively thrilling. And how they placed the pillows at the heads of the beds! Beads of perspiration stood out on the chambermaids' brows. The strain was terrific.

Finally, with a shout of triumph, Lena Brown, chambermaid at the Hotel Alexandria—for five California hotels were represented in the contest—called attention to the fact that her bed was finished. And it was—exactly two minutes and forty-nine seconds. But Lena Brown was not awarded the first prize. Neatness and thoroughness as well as speed figured in the contest, and after a committee of millionaires and their wives inspected each bed Frances Dominick, also of the Hotel Alexandria, was hailed the winner. She was a few seconds slower in smoothing the wrinkles out of the pillows than Lena, but her bed had the best appearance of the eight.

With this contest concluded, most of the guests retired for tea. The reaction was just that great. And despite the fact that I was almost overcome with emotion, I sought out Miss Dominick, the proud winner, to get an expression from her own lips of her amazing victory.

"How does it feel to be the champion bed maker of California?" I asked her.

"I could have made the bed much faster—and much better, too—if I hadn't had all those old guys looking at me," she replied, naively, adding: "You should see me make a bed at the Alexandria when I want to go off duty."

"I should think you would prefer me not to see you," I ventured, but my observation was topped by Miss Dominick's:

"It's a funny way the rich have of enjoying themselves," she said. "It must be a terrible thing to have so much money that you have to get your pleasure out here."

From which it will be seen that bedmaking is no drawback to philosophy—but I must carry on.

Next to this mad excitement the trout fishing at Rainbow Ranch supplies the most thrills for the millionaires of Pasadena. For at Rainbow Ranch they fish where the fishing is always good. Ah, there's zest to catching a 10-inch rainbow trout in the mountain stream at this fish hatchery. In fact, there's nothing like it in this part of the world.

Imagine a huge hatchery where thousands of rainbow and brook trout are brought up from infancy and allowed to swim into a short, artificial stream, from which they may be lifted as easily as dropping the fly in the water. Talk about sport! It makes a visit to a fish market a real adventure.

But to the aged millionaires of Pasadena who love fishing this fish hatchery is what a private game preserve is to the hunter. It is only necessary to motor out Foothills boulevard to Rainbow Ranch and bring back as many trout as one cares to eat for dinner. For the fish are there, and if one drops the fly or bait below the surface of the stream it is impossible not to catch one. The little trout literally fight for the privilege of being hooked. And to show you how sporty this sport really is—one only pays for the fish one catches!

There was a time when anyone—even a poor millionaire—could motor out to Rainbow Ranch, and, after renting the unnecessary rod and reel, fish all day at 25 cents per fish. The owner of the ranch hatched the fish so fast that even when 800 were caught in a single afternoon the survivors did not profit by their experience. However, Rainbow Ranch is now a club, and before one can rent a rod and reel there is an initiation fee of $50. Like the night clubs of London and the supper clubs of New York, anyone with the necessary $50 is made a member on the spot. Leigh Garnsey, the owner, does the proposing, seconding and electing once the 50 "berries" are in his pocket. But it is not highway or even trout-stream robbery. For every fish a member catches one may deduct 25 cents from the initiation fee, and as there are no dues it is not difficult to get even with the "club" if one is willing to spend a couple of hours taking the little fish off the hook.

While this fishing is great sport for the aged millionaires of Pasadena, it is not to be disparaged by anyone with a fondness for freshly grilled trout. Attendants at the ranch dress the fish almost as quickly as they are lifted from the stream and there are rustic open-air grills where they can be cooked on the spot. Everything is furnished, from the wood to the frying pans—and without extra charge.

As there is a tremendous volume of ice mountain water flowing through the pools and stream the fish have unusually firm flesh and, when properly cooked, a wonderful flavor. One can—and does—eat half a dozen of them for luncheon and then return to the stream for a dozen or two more to take back to the hotel for dinner.

It is actually possible for the gay old dogs from Pasadena to catch a basketful of trout without leaving their motors. All of which would make Isaak Walton gangrenous with envy.

But do not suppose that bed-making contests and fishing at a hatchery are the only sports indulged in by Pasadena's winter colony.

This winter playground abounds with golf courses, and chasing the elusive little white pill probably prolongs the lives of as many millionaires as any game yet devised.

However, the really sporty games of golf out there are not the matches on the Annandale or Pasadena links. Obstacle golf is the new multimillionaires' game. And it is played right on the miniature putting greens at the Huntington and Maryland hotels. And right here let me say that it is one of the best old men's game ever devised. For it does not take the player more than three hundred feet from the hotel, and in addition to improving one's game it provides no end of amusement for the children.

To make a 20-foot putt up grade through a barrel and a croquet wicket takes considerable skill, but that is one of the simplest hazards in the up-to-date game of obstacle golf as it is played in Pasadena.

There are many warmer and more accessible places. But riches attract riches, and that may be the explanation. Certainly more bonafide millionaires spend the winter there than any other resort in America. Their villas make Newport look like a cottage colony and their white hair puts to shame the 10,000 little black mustaches of the actor set at Hollywood, more than 18 metaphorical miles away.

TELEPHONE INVENTOR HAS HIS 'PHONE TAKEN OUT

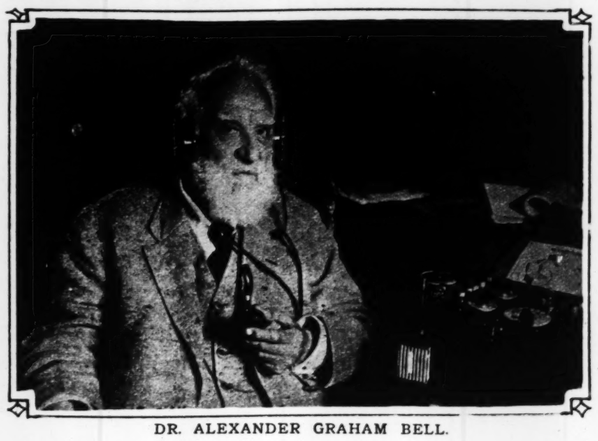
Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, in an interview with a Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine writer, says constant "dinging" of and about his device for nearly half a century has got on his nerves—He likes the radio because he can shut it off :: :: :: ::



DR. ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL.

DR. ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, inventor of the telephone, is a living proof that one may have too much of a good thing. Dr. Bell has exiled the telephone from his home. He has had the instrument taken out and his name removed from the telephone directory. He is annoyed to find one in his room when he goes to a hotel. In his old age—he is 75—he expends more or less time and energy in sidestepping this creation of his youth. He is not, and for years has not been, on speaking terms with his own child, the illustrious 45-year-old device, patented on his twenty-ninth birthday in 1876, for vocal communication between distant points. He is proud of his offspring, but considers it a bore.

Millions of people send and receive billions of vocal messages each year by telephone, acclaiming it as one of the most useful of human contrivances, but trying at times. Commercially and socially, it is in wellnigh universal use. Since the time when, about four decades ago, it began to win acceptance as a practical device, the telephone has suffered no setbacks in its rapid strides to world-wide popularity. Yet the man who gave this wonder to the world admitted the other day that as an individual he had no use whatsoever for it.

The world wondered why. A writer for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine visited Dr. Bell at his home in Washington and asked him why. Though he did not employ exactly those words, he might have said, "Too much of a good thing," for that, in substance, is the correct answer. Dr. Bell is surfeited, he is fed up, he has had the telephone dinged into his ears for nearly half a century, and the thing has become a bore to him. The dinging that annoys him is of two kinds, the ting-a-ling-ling of the little bell on the instrument, and the dong-dong-dong of the talk of admirers who, everywhere he goes, greet him as the inventor of the telephone.

Authors of famous poems or novels sometimes suffer similarly. John Hay, for instance, though secretly he was proud of them, was annoyed because his Pike County ballads, easy-written efforts of his youth, followed him with persistent dinging until his death. He had written many other things of merit and had done great work in diplomacy, yet "Little Breeches" was flaunted in his face until it became almost like a red rag waved at a bull. Dr. Bell, whose best-known creation is the telephone, has invented other useful things and has conferred permanent good upon afflicted mankind through his studies in teaching speech to the deaf, yet the too-vocal telephone which he created in his twenties has pursued him until it has got on his nerves.

The venerable inventor has no grouch against the telephone. He belongs not to that wide circle of impatient "subscribers" or borrowers who think or utter expletives because they can't get the number called, or because they are cut off in the midst of converse, sane or inane. Dr. Bell realizes to the full the superlative usefulness of his invention, but he feels that that is no reason why he should permit it to invade his privacy, keep him awake at night, or follow him forever, a voiceful Nemesis, dinging at him when he wants to talk or think of something else. He is good-natured about it, but all the same he desires that it be understood, as the interviewer gathered, that personally he prefers to be phoneless. His long life has been active, and after he discovered the secret of speech transmission by wire, back in 1874, he transferred his interest to other labors. Success with the telephone was but the starting point of new researches.

Incidentally, it is of interest to suggest here that one reason why Dr. Bell successfully evades telephonic annoyance in his own home is that Mrs. Bell is deaf and therefore does not demand the convenience which most housewives regard as necessary. Of still wider interest is the reasonable assumption that but for the inventor's devotion to the work of teaching the deaf to speak he probably would not have created the telephone. When he was 24 years old he opened the School of Vocal Physiology at Boston University and immediately became noted for his success in giving voice to deaf mutes. He had followed that line of teaching in London, when a mere youth, as had his father. But young Bell conceived the idea of a musical or multiple telegraph and gave up all but two of his deaf-mute pupils so that he might follow his inclinations as an inventor.

One of these pupils was Miss Mabel Hubbard, whose father, Gardiner G. Hubbard, was a wealthy Bostonian. Hubbard, soon to be Bell's father-in-law, financed the young man, who, in the course of his experiments, conceived the idea of charging a wire with electricity and transmitting the human voice. This resulted in the telephone. This marvel once started upon its way for others to develop to its present stage of efficiency, Bell got busy with other things. He discovered the principle of the wireless when Marconi, the young Italian who brought it to practical use, was but 2 years old. He discovered, also, how to send the voice over a ray of light. He helped to develop the graphophone and the art of flying.

History records that in 1880 Bell invented the photophone; in 1881 an induction balance with magneto-electric telephone for painlessly locating bullets or other metallic masses lodged in the human body; the telephone probe, to determine the position and depth of metallic masses in the human body; the spectrophone, for determining the range of audibility of different substances in the spectrum.

In 1884-86 he was the joint inventor of the graphophone and flat-disc records for recording and reproducing speech, music and other sounds, which was "the commercial origin of the sound-producing art;" in 1903 tetrahedral kites and kite structures; in 1903-08, joint inventor in a number of improvements designed to promote aerial locomotion. Recently he has been experimenting with submarine chasers and motor boats.

The other day Dr. Bell chuckled and roared when he was told the people wanted to know what he had against the telephone.

"There it is again," he said, when this interviewer asked him about it. He puffed out his cheeks and made his eyes large, as grandfather might do to mimic the surprise some little joke has caused his grandson.

"I just can't get away from it," he continued, drawing at a fire-scarred pipe. "The telephone has been dinging and dinging and dinging into my ears, year in and year out. I thought I was through with it a long time ago. Here you come 48 years afterward and ask me to tell you about the telephone and why I don't want to see it.

"You know, a thing gets so after awhile you just can't stand it any longer. Did you ever hear the story of the little boy who was so anxious to get into the candy store? He saw the shelves all filled with candy and thought if he could just get inside and eat as much as he wanted he would be satisfied. He wanted to get in so bad that one day he did. He ate and ate until he gorged himself and it made him sick. That is the way it was with me. I was like that little boy. I had enough of the telephone dinging and dinging into my ears.

"Why, I just couldn't get away from it. There was a telephone everywhere I went. It even followed us into the bedroom at the hotel. There was no getting away, no privacy. Of course, it didn't bother my wife, for she is deaf. But it took the place of an electric button that used to be in the hotels. She used to be able to push the button when she wanted anything once for a messenger, twice for ice water, or something of that kind. But now she finds only the telephone—and she can't hear."

Dr. Bell roared again at this incongruity. "But for me the telephone just kept right on dinging," he resumed. "One time we decided to go to Italy for a rest. Everywhere we went it was the same. We found a telephone. So finally I said: 'Let's go away somewhere to a little town where they never heard of it.' We picked out a little place, I forget the name, and went there at once. We found a hotel and a room that was without a telephone, and we thought then we could enjoy ourselves at last with a little quiet.

"Lo and behold! there came a knock at the door. I answered it, and what should I find but a card with the name of a man on it and under the name these words: 'Compagnie telephonique.'"

Dr. Bell recently adopted the radio and is getting along nicely. He enjoys the radio. He can shut it off when he gets tired.

"We have our radio set right upstairs," he said. "I can only hear the messages that are sent out locally. When I go to my place in Nova Scotia for the summer I hope to get a larger set, one that will have a radius of at least 500 miles, to keep us in touch with Boston.

"The wireless, you know, is not new. I discovered it back in 1877. I made me a set."

"I was living here in Washington," he continued. "I rowed a boat up the Potomac to Chain Bridge and dropped a couple of wires with copper plates on their ends over the side into the water. On the boat there was a telegraph key between the wires. Then I rowed in another boat down the river a short distance and dropped two other wires overboard and had a receiving set connected with them.

"I left a boy in the other boat to work the telegraph instrument. As he pressed the key, breaking and closing the circuit, the sounds were sent distinctly through the air to the wires on my boat. Finally, I found we could transmit the sounds a great deal farther down the river, as far down, in fact, as the Washington Monument, which was a mile to one and a half miles away.

"Later I made an experiment in England and sent messages across the Thames. I took two pokers—yes, just ordinary fire pokers like you see there—and drove them into the ground on one side of the river with a sending instrument between them. On the other side of the river I drove down two more pokers with a receiving set between them. We got the messages plainly across the river. Then I began experiments with the photophone."

Here Dr. Bell announced his surprise that the photophone had not come into popular use, and explained it probably was due to the fact that when he sold his telephone rights he also sold the rights to future inventions for transmitting speech. His photophone probably is stored away somewhere, placed there originally to prevent its competition with the telephone.

"That probably is why you do not hear more of it," Dr. Bell said, "for it is a most wonderful thing."

He found that a ray of light on a mirror vibrated in proportion to the voice directed against the back of the mirror and that the light would create a variable current in a selenium cell that would reproduce the human voice in a telephone.

His first test was conducted with a man on top of a school building more than a block from his laboratory. A ray of light flashed in the window and "All at once," the inventor said, "I heard plainly the words, 'Bell, Bell, Bell, if you hear this, wave your hat out the window.' And, of course, I waved my hat out the window."

Dr. Bell said the human voice can be thrown as far as a beam of light can be sent.

"I will tell you something about the telephone you will not print," he concluded, turning again to that. "It was invented in Canada, at Brantford, Ontario. The newspapers don't print that. But it was produced for the first time in Boston.

"I conceived the idea on a visit to my father. I had been teaching in Boston and was telling him of some of the experiments I had made. Among them was the use of electricity in transmitting music. We conceived then and there the idea of transmitting the human voice."

As the word "telephone" already was in use, Dr. Bell named his invention "the speaking telephone."

Of all his wide ranging among mysterious things there is one field he has not entered. He is leaving spiritualism to others. "I leave that," he said, "to Conan Doyle and Sir Oliver Lodge."

Inventors Who Started as Watchmakers

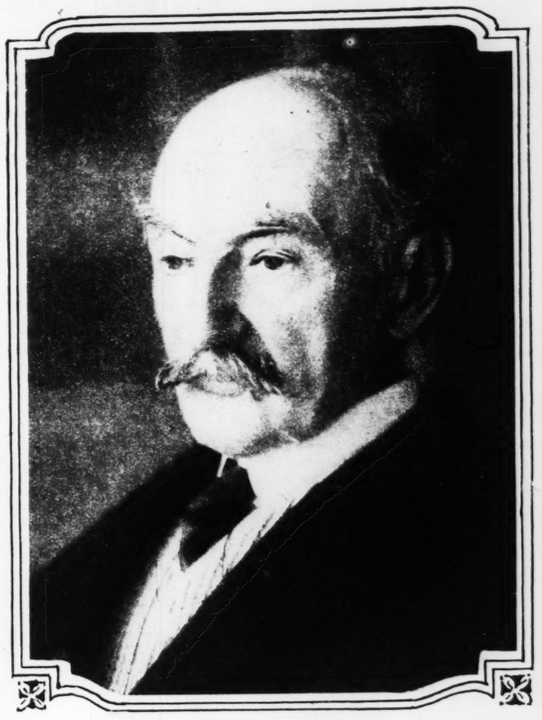
WATCHMAKING was the first step to most of the principal inventions that make modern industry what it is today, Carl W. Mitman, curator of the U. S. National Museum, declared at a meeting of the Horological Institute of America recently.

James Watt, inventor of the separate condenser for the steam engine which resulted in the development of the true steam engine and began the replacement of hand power and appliances by mechanical devices, was first a watchmaker and then an instrument maker. George Stephenson, whose locomotive first definitely established the economic worth of steam transportation, although primarily an engine man and engineer, made extra money by repairing watches and clocks.

Ottmar Mergenthaler, whose invention of the linotype machine makes the modern newspaper possible, emigrated from Germany in 1872 with no capital but his completed apprenticeship as an expert watchmaker and $30 in cash.

Thomas Hardy at 82 still a fatalist

Great novelist who turned poet after 60 presents consistently in verse his conception of "the final uselessness of existence" indicated in his prose — In lyric and ballad he depicts life's futility as he sees it, man's helplessness in the grip of sardonic forces — "Life Laughs Onward," this ironic octogenarian bard entitles a song of age lamenting youth :: ::



THOMAS HARDY.

LIVING today in more or less merry England is a very great novelist of the mid-Victorian era, who, in his old age, has become a quite remarkable poet of the Georgian reign. Thomas Hardy, 82 years of age June 2, is by far the most shining link between the old days when literature was largely a thing of joy and the new days when it is considerably a thing of jazz.

The millions who read fiction as a cat licks a milk bottle know not Thomas Hardy's tales. To them, as a fictionist, he is not and never was. Similarly, for such as peruse and praise the daily poem of the newspapers the virile verse of Thomas Hardy's old age is, if anything whatsoever, but a sealed crypt of silence. To assimilate Hardy, either in prose or in poetry, requires a hardy mental digestive apparatus—with no pun intended or implied. Yet this is not to insinuate that Hardy is hard reading, save as to some of his verse. For almost half a century his novels have been devoured and digested by a wide realm of readers. For the past 20 years a much smaller bailiwick of browsers has nibbled at his verse, some of which is poetry, and there are those who are said to have taken it in toto and digested the mass of it.

Nearly a quarter of a century ago Mr. Hardy quit writing novels and turned to poetry. He left the fiction field at the very moment when he was accepted generally by competent appraisers as the foremost living novelist in England, the most worthy successor to the illustrious group which included George Eliot, Dickens, Thackeray and three or four others. The genius of George Meredith, his great contemporary, appears to have been discovered or admitted then by only a few of the critics.

Hardy was pre-eminent, he occupied the apex, and yet suddenly he ceased to produce fiction and at the age of 60 turned his amazing energy and indubitable ability to the creation of metrical literature, commonly called poetry. After 30 years as a successful novelist—successful in the highest sense of that term—the Wessex wizard astonished the literary world by his unexpected plunge into poetry, in which vast ocean he has moved, floundering sometimes and sometimes swimming strongly, ever since.

Every now and then Mr. Hardy puts forth a book of verse. His metrical output bulks amazingly large. From all accounts that come across the waters he is just as active in that line at 82 as he was at 62, as he has been through a score of years. His powers as poet seem not to diminish. By some critics of letters he is hailed as an epochal poet, though none has been so bold as to predict that he ever will be a popular poet, in his lifetime or afterward. For that matter, he has not been a popular novelist, in the loose, latter-day definition of that adjective. His novels have been read and still are being read and doubtless will continue to be read much more widely than his poems, for reasons obvious to the average understanding. Nevertheless, as a poet Thomas Hardy is but continuing his task as a novelist, which, reduced to its naked skeleton, apparently was that of expressing the manner in which Life fights Fate and is defeated.

Mr. Hardy established a unique precedent in English literature when he changed from prose to poetry at an age when the average writer is "written out," and proved that he could use the vehicle of verse in his later years with a vigor that is astounding. But perhaps the most remarkable thing about his career is the noble consistency with which he sticks, as a poet, to the ironic conception of human existence which he expressed in the somberly realistic tales he wrote between 30 and 60. In the poems this irony is accentuated, it is more acutely evident, decidedly more intentional, than in the novels: it is wellnigh sardonic.

It was not to be expected that a man of Mr. Hardy's years and experience should write verse like a youth to whom the world is a bright rosebud just beginning to open, life an engaging adventure just begun, love a thrillful anticipation. Nevertheless, there were those amongst his readers, men and women who knew "The Return of the Native," "The Mayor of Casterbridge," "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" and "Jude the Obscure," to name a quartet of his tremendous tales of the human tragedy, who hoped that he might give them in verse something a bit less tragic than these transcripts of life as life is lived by some humans. All such have suffered disappointment, for "the final uselessness of existence" is the major note in the Hardy poetry.

In fact, Mr. Hardy in his verse goes farther into the gloom-deeps than he went in his prose. Poems written in the past eight years, since he wedded his secretary, Miss Emily Dugdale, two years after the death of his first wife, indicate that the presence of a young helpmate has not wrought for betterment in this respect. In the poems, as in the novels, the sorrows and the sins of life, life's futility, its almost malignant mechanism of tragedy as Hardy conceives it, continue to be the chief harpstrings played upon.

In the novels this came about naturally, for Thomas Hardy was writing of life as a realist, and as an artist, and not to supply happy endings as "dope" for nonthinking minds. In reading the poems one is inclined to suspect that now and then the venerable versifier plunks the tragic string with malice aforethought. However, as indicated, that noble consistency is to be admired. One who got great joy from reading the novels, because they depicted life with proper attention to the somber hues, may find some modicum of satisfaction in discovering that it is the same old Thomas Hardy who is doing the poetry.

Mr. Lascelles Abercrombie, who wrote a few years ago a critical study of Thomas Hardy, in which he devoted a generous share of space to the poems, makes this interesting observation: "Hardy, whose poems have only been a bye work of his artistic life, is in them more often disguising prose than transmuting it." He says further: "No great poetry will leave us remembering what it said unless we also remember a good deal of how this was said; the how and the what are, indeed, inseparable."

From this it would appear that Mr. Abercrombie's estimate of Hardy's poetry is unfavorable, though that is not the case at all, for he calls "The Dynasts," Hardy's prodigious chronicle play which treats of the Napoleonic era, "one of the most momentous achievements of modern literature." The same critic makes this definite estimate of the Napoleonic chronicle play: "It is the biggest, the most consistent and deliberate exhibition of fatalism in literature." Again, Mr. Abercrombie says, in discussing "The Dynasts" with regard to the purpose underlying the whole stupendous piece of writing: "This conception of the final uselessness of existence is the basis of the whole matter." This critic expresses it as his private belief that the books of Thomas Hardy are "among the greatest things in modern literature." Other recent critics, while not so superlative in their expressions, are pedestaling Hardy in the group which includes Goethe, to name but one of the immortals, and are predicting that after his death his fame will grow.

The late Lionel Johnson, whose book, "The Art of Thomas Hardy," written 30 years ago, was the first important critical estimate of the 15 novels then constituting the literary output of the author, recognized, as have the later critics, the fatalistic trend of Hardy, but he said in defense of his hero: "There is nothing so dreadful and so dark that art cannot take pleasure in molding it into fine form, nor the mind be bettered by the knowledge thus won."

The doctrine commonly known as free will is not a part of the Hardy equipment. To the contrary, throughout both stories and poems he shows, without so saying in so many words, that he looks upon human life as a helpless thing, whipped and whirled hither and yon by forces which at times seem even malignant. What many other writers are pleased to term God, Hardy defines as the Immanent Will.

Readers of the novels, most of whom probably have not made themselves acquainted with the poems, cannot fail to remember the somber topographical backgrounds, and foregrounds, too, for that matter, with which Hardy supplied virtually all of his tales. They will recall the dreary heaths of the Wessex country in the south of England, where the author has passed his long life. In many novels the descriptions of natural scenery are put in for space-filling purposes and are not essential to the interest; one may skip them altogether without losing the true import of the story. In the Hardy novels the natural settings are part and parcel of the narrative; they must be read and digested before one can gain complete understanding of the story.

Egdon heath—the forlorn figure toiling across its dreary stretch at twilight—no reader of the novels can think of Thomas Hardy without thinking also of such scenes as that; and in the poems, lyric after lyric, ballad after ballad, appears a sort of spiritual Egdon heath, with men and women, defeated or fighting inevitable defeat, toiling onward, bravely enough, to be sure, yet after all but helpless pygmy figures, cast without their will in the vast drama of living, each but a Punch or Judy automaton.

Thomas Hardy was past 30 when his first novel was published. During most of the third decade of his life, when he worked as an architect, he wrote verse "on the side," without publishing. For two years he is said to have devoted all his time to the penning of poems which he destroyed. From time to time during his novel-writing days he wrote a bit of verse, and some of these have appeared in the volumes published since he forsook prose for poetry. Only one of his earlier pieces, a Wessex ballad written at the age of 24, survives. Grim humor and tragedy such as color his novels appear in that early ballad, indicating that even in his youth the poetic trend of Hardy was toward the same Egdon heathish conception which imbues his later verse.

The same sombreness imbues the poems written during Hardy's years as a creative novelist. Such of these as the poet has included in his books of verse published since he forsook prose are dated with the year of their composition. For the most part, they express the author's serious outlook—or rather, if one may create a word for the occasion, his inlook—upon or into the inexplicable problem of human life.

Literary comparisons are odious always, but if one may venture such a thing, it may be suggested that as poets Thomas Hardy and Robert Browning have one common characteristic: much of their work makes difficult reading. This is because both have written metaphysics, though from widely different viewpoints. The comparison must stop short there, since Browning was superbly an optimist, while Hardy is a mastodonic fatalist. "God's in heaven—all's right with the world," sang Browning, which makes easy reading. At the age of 77 Hardy wrote a little poem with the delightful title, "Life Laughs Onward," though the lines themselves are not such as might be expected to follow such a title:

Rambling; I looked for an old abode
Where, years back, one had lived I knew;
Its site a dwelling duly showed,
But it was new.

I went where, not so long ago,
The sod had riven two breasts asunder;
Daisies throve gaily there, as though
No grave were under.

I walked along a terrace where
Loud children gamboled in the sun;
The figure that had once sat there
Was missed by none.

Life laughed and moved on unsubdued,
I saw that Old succumbed to Young;
'Twas well. My too regretful mood
Died on my tongue.

In those lines speaks the Thomas Hardy of youth, of middle manhood and of old age—prosaer and poet, toiling lonesomely across the Egdon heath of life at twilight.

ROME HOWLS AT FUTURIST DRAMA

Demonstration on the balcony.

FUTURISM'S latest efflorescence, the "Surprise Theater," made Rome resound with its justly celebrated howls the other night, when the first performance according to the "new art" was put on at the Sala Margherita, in the Italian capital. The audience saluted the actors with whistles, catcalls and over-ripe tomatoes. The thespians, whose preparedness did them credit, retorted with a barrage of ancient fruit and decadent eggs, which had been heaped for emergencies in ammunition dumps in the wings, and which were hurled from the stage into the close ranks of the spectators like hand grenades.

One excited playgoer of an acrobatic turn mounted the rail of the balcony and ran around it on his hands, brandishing his legs in the air and bellowing. Another leaped on the stage and promptly rebounded into his box, impelled by a kick from the rhythmic foot of Toto Fornari, futurist poet. Fornari and his brother, Francesco Canguillo, and the high priest of futurism himself, F. T. Marinetti, then invaded the Philistines and impressed the new esthetic principles upon their backs by means of sound blows with canes. It was a grand night for Art.

"Why all the uproar?" a placid American devotee of the theater may inquire. Simply because Marinetti and his collaborator, Calderone, put on a delightful little bit of "surprise drama," entitled "Toilet Music," and rejoicing in the following scenario:

"The pedals of a black upright piano are shod with a woman's elegant little gilded shoes. An actor, the piano's chambermaid, sweeps the keyboard with a feather duster, thus playing a tune. Another actor, the piano's second chambermaid, cleans with a toothbrush the piano's ivory teeth. On his knees a little hotel shoeblack, dressed in red, polishes the piano's little gilded shoes."

For some moments there was silence, while the meanings of this petite masterpiece were sinking in. Then a man in an orchestra seat, jumping up, shouted at Marinetti, who was sitting in a box: "No! You are not crazy; you are driving us crazy!" Another, in the balcony, began hissing and clapping his hands with equal violence, at the same time. "There's the first case of madness!" shrieked a third, dashing in terror for the door. And then the storm broke.

Another specimen of the "surprise drama" is called "Declamation of a War Poem, With Voluptuous Tango." It is also by Marinetti, and it was first played at the Dore Gallery in London. This is a literal translation of the directions:

"The poet declaims a war poem in words-at-liberty (presumably free verse). The noises of cannonading, rifle-fire and rapid-fire guns are exactly imitated by means of a bass drum and the hammering of invisible pieces of wood. At the same time two elegant dancers (evening coat and decollette rose-colored gown) dance around the declaimer a languorous tango."

That is all. Marinetti adds a note: "This compenetration of the soul of the soldier, (warlike fury and voluptuous nostalgia) is an important futurist invention. Everywhere in the most tumultuous halls it has had the prodigious power of nailing the admiration of the public, which, after listening to the declamation, has saluted the close with most enthusiastic applause."

Still another of Marinetti's dramas is entitled "The Contract." The scene is a dimly lighted room, with a white bed just visible. Upon it M. Paul Dami is dying. The dialogue ensues:

"Chambermaid: A shred of hope. The bullet passed through his lung.

"Friend: Tell me, was it really for that—woman, that he killed himself?

"Chambermaid: Oh, no! M. Paul committed suicide for the apartment. I will explain the riddle. You know that he worshipped this apartment. Lately he implored the owner to open for him a window looking out on the street. For the great procession. The idiot refused. Three days later M. Paul learned by chance that the owner was negotiating with a new tenant. The idea of losing the apartment drove him crazy, and he drew a revolver and shot himself.

"M. Dami (in delirium): Set fire to the house! The apartment is burning! Call the firemen!'" (He subsides. The doctor enters and soon after him a blonde lady, in black, very elegant, who approaches the dying man's bed, facing the spectators.)

"The Friend (to the doctor): Is there really nothing more that can be done?

"The Doctor (solemnly): Nothing. You see, when a man enters an apartment, the case is grave, but there is still hope of a cure. When, on the contrary, it is an apartment which enters a man, the case is truly desperate. (At this moment the lady in black passes to the other side of the bed and turns her back to the spectators. On her back is seen a little placard bearing the words: 'TO LET.' Curtain.)"

Marinetti's manifesto concerning his latest invention, the "Surprise Theater," has just reached this country. His purpose, he declares, is to "aerate the spirit of the public by amusing and surprising it with every means, feat, contrast, gesture and idea that has not yet been brought upon the stage, and that is susceptible of giving a gay shock to human sensibility."

"We have many times asserted," he continues, "that surprise is an essential element of art; that the work of art, far from being subjected to what is called reality, should be autonomous, resembling itself alone and consequently appearing like a prodigy.

"Botticelli's 'Primavera,' like so many other masterpieces, had, when first shown, the essential value of its amazing originality, besides its values of composition, rhythm, volume and color. Our knowledge of this picture, and of the imitation and plagiarisms it has provoked, have today destroyed its value as a surprise.

"The first thing we did was to glorify and renovate the Music Hall. Then our Synthetic Theater destroyed the old theatrical technique which was made up of verisimilitude at any cost, continued logic and graduated preparation. Our Synthetic Theater created new blends of tragedy and comedy, real mixed with unreal personages, compenetrations and simultaneiti of time and space, dramas of objects, dramatized dissonances, frontages of ideas, gestures, etc."

In addition, it appears, the "Surprise Theater" has invaded music. The futurist musicians, Aldo Mantia, Mario Bartocciul, Vittoria Mortari and Franco Baldi, have contrived "discussions" between pianist improvisors and between piano and violoncello; they have also presented orchestral improvisations, with every instrument making up and playing whatever strikes him on the impulse of the moment.

The paintings of Toto Fornari were shown "over the footlights" at the "Surprise Theater" in Rome; by the same method the pictures of Pasquatino Cangiullo, Marasco and Bermini were exhibited respectively in Naples, Florence and Milan. The movement, says Marinetti, has been taken up by the advance-guard society, "Art et Liberte," in Paris and Geneva; and in Prague by the Czecho-Slovak actors of the Svandoro Theater.

"Our 'Surprise Theater,'" continues Marinetti, "has been given by the Futurist Dramatic Company of De Angelis at Naples, Palermo, Rome, Florence, Genoa, Turin and Milan, and imposed itself upon audiences which were 'diabolically gay,' to quote the words of an unfavorable newspaper, 'Il Giorno' of Naples.

"At Rome the insolent reactionaries were attacked with canes by Marinetti, Cangiullo and the Fornari brothers. The kick which the futurist Toto Fornari inlaid upon the rear-brain of a reactionary who climbed upon the stage has become legendary, and is talked of everywhere. With this surprise kick the painter Fornari planted the reactionary back in his box."

From this it will be seen that the futurist leaders are quite serious. Like their program or not, as you please—it is there, and its protagonists are ready to fight for it. If it be accepted, the one canon of criticism will be: "How much of a sensation did it create?" If it crazes the audience, makes women men, drives men to drink and impels them to run amuck—then it is a success.

"Futurism," says a writer, "is nothing unless it can perpetually astonish. Unless it keeps on creating new sensations it ceases to live up to its name. It began by tossing all the canons of art and literature upon the refuse pile, and launching those bizarre forms of painting, sculpture and writing with which the world is now familiar. Then it tackled music, contemptuously kicked Bach, Beethoven, Wagner and Strauss aside, and assaulted the eardrums of the world with barbarous cacophonies.

"Now it is the turn of the stage. Shakspeare, Moliere, Goldoni and Ibsen are to be cast into the crematory of dead things. Marinetti and his followers would substitute drama of a brand-new sort, so new that playgoers are offended at what they imagine to be an insult to their intelligences, and drama critics are left gasping for breath and pawing the air in delirium."

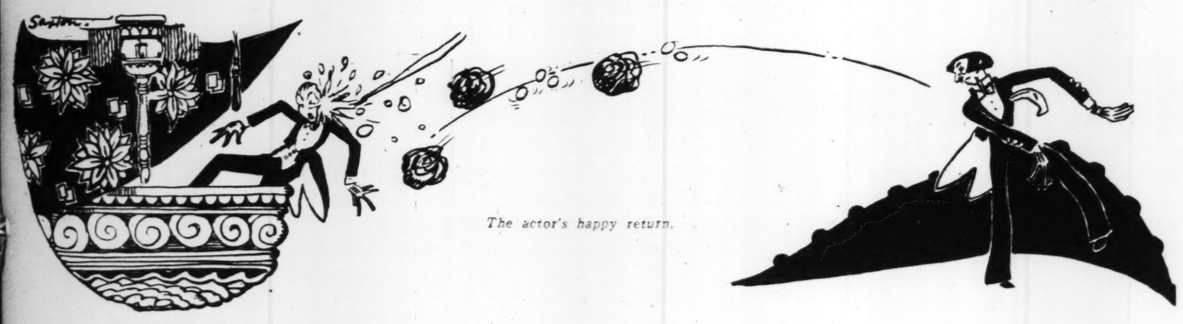
Earth's Most Torrid Region Is in U. S.

THE weather won't get any hotter than 134 degrees Fahrenheit, because that is the highest temperature ever recorded at the United States Weather Bureau's substation at Greenland Ranch in Death Valley, according to Meteorologist Andrew H. Palmer, stationed there. It is the hottest known region on the face of the earth.

In winter Death Valley offers great natural scenic attractions, but white men do not pick this region for Fourth of July picnics. Nearly every summer during the past few years the highest natural air temperatures recorded in the United States by means of tested thermometers under approved methods of exposure have been those at the Greenland Ranch station.

During the long summer days the air is excessively heated by the sun, as there is too little moisture in the air to permit the formation of clouds. The desert sand, gravel, rocks and salt are so highly heated that they do not have an opportunity to cool during the short nights.

O. A. Denton, the white man to remain the longest in the valley, stayed eight years, by making his bed in front of a revolving fan driven by an overshot water wheel, after wetting his blankets and sprinkling the floor with water.



The actor's happy return.

APARTMENTS: DOGS ALLOWED

Mrs. Edgar Saltus, novelist's widow, is putting up in New York 15-family building where animals may dwell with their owners — Says every small boy is entitled to a dog—Building will be a memorial to faithful sheep dog which was friend and companion for twelve years :: :: ::

Artist's vision of new apartment house.

AS A MONUMENT to her faithful dog, Toto, which died about a year ago, Mrs. Edgar Saltus, widow of a novelist, is building in New York a $100,000 four-story apartment house where each of the 15 tenant families will be not only permitted but expected to have animal pets, preferably dogs. Mrs. Saltus and her husband owned Toto, a California sheep dog, for 12 years. He traveled with them in Europe and in the lean period of the war in England he shared their rations. He died soon after they returned to New York, and they decided to perpetuate his memory in a substantial way by building apartments where dogs would be as welcome as human tenants.

It is Mrs. Saltus' belief that every small boy is entitled to have a dog for a friend. If he is denied that fellowship while he is a little shaver, she does not think anything that may come to him in later years can altogether compensate for the lack of that comradeship. Animals, she argues, are so often more inteligent and more faithful than human beings, that to go through life without knowing them keeps one altogether too cramped socially. She would rather see a boy brought up in poverty, with a yellow dog for a pal, than to see him surrounded by affluence and no animals and a nurse who was everlastingly keeping his hands and his clothes immaculate. She expects as a matter of course that there will be plenty of little boys and girls in her apartment building, and she wants each of them to realize that the dog will have as much right to be there as the janitor.

Clarendon Court is the name which this house will be christened when it is finished. It is being built on a triangular lot in the Bronx, on a corner of what was once an 80-acre farm owned by Mrs. Saltus' father when she was a little girl, and the old homestead stood near the site. It is at the junction of Giles, Fort Dearborn, Independence and Sedwick avenues, overlooking Jerome Park Reservoir and the Harlem Valley. The architecture is Italian and it is Mrs. Saltus' intention that it will be the most beautiful building in the Bronx. There will be a large garden in the rear, with a drinking fountain for the animals and grass plots where the children and their pets may play. Plans for the roof include a pergola with rose trellises and vines, additional grass plots for children and animals on the upper floors, and possibly—though this has not been decided—there may be kennels on the roof. Mrs. Saltus will have her own apartment erected on the top of a large garage in the rear. Window boxes filled with red geraniums will brighten the Clarendon corner and match the red tiles on the roof.

"Building a house like this is not so simple as it may seem," Mrs. Saltus admitted as she walked from the Vanderbilt Hotel to the office of the architect, where the blueprints of the garage apartment were waiting to be approved. "I do try very hard to be patient with those kind friends who tell me I am crazy to invest so much money in a house in that neighborhood. I admit that as a money-making scheme it is not a first-class investment. But one cannot always be thinking of money. I shall have enough to live on and when I die that house and whatever other property I may have will go to animal relief. It is rather nice to know that there will be a lot of wagging tails to usher me out of this life, but I also will enjoy the satisfaction of seeing some of the tails wag while I live.

"I am hoping that the children who will grow up in my house will be better men and women because of their association with animals. I have traveled about the world a great deal and I think I can truly say that the finest people I have met were fond of dogs. There is no denying that our dumb friends have a refining influence on those who take the trouble to know them well. Animals, and especially dogs, are so very decent. They are always dependable and never too obtrusive. They teach us to be kind without expecting too much in return. So long as a boy has a friend that wags his tail at every kind glance he is not so very badly off. If he is sad or in trouble he can be pretty sure that his dog understands it in a quiet way and with a delicacy of feeling that knows how to keep at a proper distance. Give a dog an opportunity to develop his capacity for affection and protection and nothing but death can interfere with his devotion. There is no denying that it is very satisfying and comforting for either a child or a grown person to have a friend who approves of him always and completely."

Mrs. Saltus is sorry dogs are not permitted to ride in the subways or elevated trains. She thinks the journey to and from work would be much more interesting for those who are compelled to travel in these trains if there were dogs on board, because she finds these animals so much more alert and interesting than the average human being.

"Toto went with me everywhere in London," she said, "in the tubes and on the busses, and after a few trips he always knew the home station and would signal to me that it was time to get off. Nobody in England ever objected to having him live with us in hotels. None of the hotels I have gone to in New York are willing to admit a dog. I just wonder how all the thousands of people in these places can live without the companionship of pets who can be sociable without ever being interfering?"

When Mrs. Saltus talks of dogs she means just dogs, the common, every-day kind that can be depended on to befriend man. She is not particularly interested in those exquisite little aristocrats that slip in and out of hotels wrapped in muffs. It is not her idea that the owner should be the servant of the dog so much as that the dog should be a friend to the owner even though he might not have a prize-winning point in his whole makeup. It was because they saw in the faces of New York people the need of just such friendship that she and Mr. Saltus decided that their new house should include special provision for animals such as those that had helped to enrich life for them. Mr. Saltus died about the time the plans were completed.

Mrs. Saltus is a Theosophist. But she insists that the primary reason she has so much respect for animals is not merely because she believes they have souls. There are a lot of human beings who are suspected of having souls on whose friendship she would not rely and whose instincts for honesty and loyalty are not nearly so fine as those of some animals she has known. She remembers, for example, a black puma in the Zoological Gardens in London with whom she held many long talks and who would let her come into his cage. And there were some particularly handsome lions there whose friendship she valued and who gave unmistakable indications of recognizing an old acquaintance when she came to visit them.

Mrs. Saltus has had letters from friends of animals in many places praising her for making provision for pets in her apartment building. One of these, Mrs. F. N. Gordon-Lennox of London, had heard only vague rumors about the proposed house. She learned that Mrs. Saltus lived somewhere in America, which was rather indefinite. She did not know many people here, but there was one prominent man of whose home address she was certain and she thought he might possibly have heard of Mrs. Saltus. So she addressed her letter in care of President Harding at the White House, and after only a day's delay in Washington it was forwarded to New York. When Mrs. Saltus learned about the hardships endured by the Gordon-Lennox dogs during the war and certain little acts of faithfulness while they were existing on rations, she invited their mistress to come to New York with her pets and live for a year in one of the flats.

The Suicide in Piccadilly Circus

Brilliant and erratic youth, son of famous scientist, ambitious to be great poet and playwright, imbiber of Samuel Butler's sarcastic pessimism, makes sudden dramatic exit at center of London's gayety by shooting himself because of hopeless passion for engaged girl

She is the loveliest child,
And her heart is made of gold—
Gold that is undefiled,
As it was in the days of old.

SO WROTE Martin Bateson, 22, brilliant son of a world-famed scientist. The youth was ambitious to be a great poet. He was a student at the Royal School of Dramatic Art in London and aspired also to become a playwright. Hopeless passion for a beautiful and excellent girl intervened. She was engaged to another. So, after a call at her home, in a sudden fit of desperation, the young man did a dramatic thing—his last act. He wrote in his own blood a supreme tragedy, on the same day that he penned, in the midst of a somewhat incoherent letter, the simple quatrain quoted above—a tribute to the girl who told him never to see her again.

In the middle of the afternoon, on a recent day of unusual brightness in London, young Bateson walked into Piccadilly Circus, a point so named because it is an enlargement, though not altogether circular in shape, of Piccadilly, where several streets meet that famous thoroughfare. In the midst of a throng of fashionable shoppers and the matinee crowds, the lovelorn poet drew from his pocket a small automatic pistol. Placing the weapon against his head above the right ear, he fired a bullet into his brain. He fell to the paving just beyond a passing taxicab, which some spectators thought had run him down. An hour later, without regaining consciousness, he died in Charing Cross Hospital.

The suicide could not have chosen for the scene of his final exit a combination of place and time more sensational from the viewpoint of dramatic effect. The hour was 3:15 p. m. Piccadilly Circus is the point of central interest in Piccadilly, that world-known street a mile in length, between the Haymarket and Hyde Park Corner. Piccadilly is a thoroughfare of great shops, where the rich purchase luxuries, and of handsome homes where many of them reside. Through Piccadilly Circus on a balmy springtime afternoon moves a human tide of wealth and title, beauty and fashion. Many units of this mass of humanity witnessed the sudden tragedy—or, more properly, the culmination of a tragedy which the potential playwright had lived in his last day of life, a day of despair which overwhelmed him and brought on the intensely dramatic finale.

At first nobody knew the identity of the self-slain youth. He was clad in a gray suit of well-tailored clothes, and wore a soft collar with silken tie. Noblemen, grand dames of society, chorus girls and flappers who were near enough to observe the apparel knew that a young man of apparent prosperity had killed himself, and speculations as to his identity were rife. At the hospital his name and the address of his lodgings were disclosed through papers in his pockets. His parents were notified by telephone and hastened to the hospital.

His father, Prof. William Bateson, is known throughout the world as the chief exponent of the Mendelian laws of inheritance, which since their discovery have revolutionized the ancient science of stock breeding. Prof. Bateson has lectured much in the United States and Canada and in 1914 was president of the British Association for Advancement in Science, which met that year in Australia. One of his books, "Mendel's Laws of Heredity," has found universal acceptance amongst scientists.

The Bateson family lives in a suburb, but for six months Martin Bateson had occupied lodgings in London. Awaiting him at his lodgings the day of his death was an unopened letter which heightens the pathetic drama of love unrequited. It is from the girl he loved, and though young Bateson had not read the missive it serves to explain his desperation on the last day of his life, inasmuch as it indicates to some extent what took place when he visited the young woman. She wrote:

Dear Martin:

After your extraordinary visit to me this morning, I have decided to write this to you. You must never come here again, as I shall always be "not at home," and I shall return any letters unopened. I am engaged, and your persistence annoys me so much that I consider it dishonorable. I am sorry.

Sincerely yours,

"The visit, no doubt," said the Coroner when this letter had been read at the inquest, "made it plain to him that any hopes he had in that quarter could never be gratified. This, acting on a highly strung, sensitive, neurotic youth, such as he undoubtedly was, seemed to have been the last straw. In a moment of intense depression and misery he shot himself."

"Suicide while of unsound mind" was the verdict. It is almost invariably the verdict in England.

Exactly what took place on the occasion of that "extraordinary visit" must remain an unwritten part of the drama, even as the name of the girl remains unpublished at the written request of Martin Bateson himself. His own parents, as testimony of Prof. Bateson at the inquest showed, did not know that Martin had a love affair. The first intimation of the young man's hopeless love for the high-minded girl whose identity he insisted should not be disclosed to the public was gained from the letter she wrote and from another which was found in his pocket after death.

Martin Bateson.

Picture taken by London newspaper photographer just as young Bateson fell dying in Piccadilly Circus.

The bereaved father was requested by the Coroner to read this latter message. He read a portion of it, broke down from emotion, and the Coroner read the remainder.

"The writing," said Prof. Bateson, "is very difficult to read, and I have made an imperfect transcript."

Prior testimony had shown that Martin Bateson had an allowance from his father for his livelihood and that he owned independently about $5000 in war loan certificates which gave him an income of $300. The letter, it appeared, had been written less than an hour before Bateson shot himself. He was a member of the Savile Club, in Piccadilly, and had entered the clubhouse at 2:30 p. m., called for a boy to turn on a light, and sat down at a writing table. He left a few minutes later, and it was found that he had "splashed the ink all over the table," and left other signs of having been unduly excited. Thus began his final message:

It is my wish, now I am about to die, as it was my wish living, since the moment I met her, that as much of my money as remains after paying debts, which should be about a thousand pounds, with the grace of God, in Whom I believe in the same sense Samuel Butler believed in Him, and with the grace of my friends, should go to her, and that her name should not publicly be mentioned in connection with my death.

In my most sincere mood I wrote:

She is the loveliest child,
And her heart is made of gold—
Gold that is undefiled,
As it was in the days of old.

That is, nevertheless, I hope she will be lucky, she will be happy. She will be blessed, if my dying wish is of any avail.

Continuing, Bateson named small bequests to several friends, and ended his letter thus:

I leave all my other property, except the Dresden china shepherdess, which was to have been her Christmas present, only she said she could not accept anything more. Except 1 and 2, "The Way of All Flesh," and Memoirs of S. B. (Samuel Butler), which are, of course, Newman's.

God bless my aunts, and everybody, and her.

MARTIN BATESON.

If my people remember, she gets 1000 pounds.

"Would you regard him as eccentric?" the Coroner inquired.

"Yes; and his eccentricity had increased very much during the past six months," replied the father.

There was testimony to the effect that at Rugby School, as a lad, he led his class, and that after he won a scholarship at Cambridge University he took eight firsts in natural science.

Mention in his final message of Samuel Butler and of that author's famous novel, "The Way of All Flesh," is significant. His father and his friends said that the young man had been a devotee of Butler, whose lifelong habit of jotting down sentiments and impressions, epigrammatic comments on life, philosophical rapid-fire paragraphs, resulted after Butler's death in the publication of a monumental volume of notebook material. Martin Bateson also was addicted to the practice of recording epigrams in notebooks.

End of first week adrift in lifeboat after ship blew up, finds 32 men deciding by majority vote to let craft drift in effort to reach the Philippines 1400 miles away—Food and water very low, men chew buttons to keep saliva active—Constant fighting in center of boat between George the Greek and five Filipino sailors :: :: ::

OCT 18. Third day in lifeboat. From Harmon's log.

All night there was quarreling and fighting among the men. Most of them had found cover under the sail spread out over them. Olsen, the second assistant engineer, cursed and struck at everyone near him. George, the Greek fireman, kept beating one of the Filipinos. There was not enough room under the canvas for all, so "Sparks," Seaman Ole Heikland and I passed the night in the cockpit at the bow of the boat. First Mate Waywood and Bos'n Mike Sutse stayed in the cockpit at the stern end. It was cold and wet, and we could not sleep for the sound of blows and oaths. Wind and current continued to take us further from Guam.

Daylight at 4:30. Moderate sea running. The lifeboat rides well. Third Assistant Engineer Mackey pointed to several sand sharks following the drifting boat, two small ones and a large one. Bos'n Mike Sutse tried to snatch a shark with the boathook, but couldn't. Then he rigged a bent spike on a heaving line and tried fishing, with a white rag for bait. The sharks were too wise to be caught. They just hung off the length of the boathook. Two pilot fish kept close to the side of the big shark. He certainly was a monster. Saw a school of flying fish near. At 8 o'clock Lieut. Holmes and Chief Engineer Howell gave each man a whisky glass full of water, a biscuit and a small square of chocolate. "Sparks" and several others tried dipping the biscuit in sea water, and said it helped. I followed their example, but did not like it.

At 9 o'clock the rope that held the sea anchor parted and the boat came around in the trough of the sea. Took in much water, and it looked bad for a while. Put out oars and tried to hold the boat bow to seas. Jennings, an old sailor, his son, the big Russian sailor Linns and Bos'n Sutse rigged out a substitute sea anchor and fastened it with cable. It worked well. Linns said that the rope had broken because the sharks had chewed it to get the oil out of it. Jennings, an able-bodied seaman of the fine old type, asked permission of Lieut. Holmes to make an outrigger from gratings in the boat and an oar, this to take the place of a keel and enable us to tack against the monsoon wind. Holmes told him to go ahead, and assigned three other sailors to the job. After hard work they had their outrigger lashed to the side of the boat, and we hoisted sail and tried to tack. We did beat against the wind for about five minutes. Then the pressure of the water against the grating forced the nails out and the outrigger collapsed. We gave the idea up.

About noon the wind eased a bit, and Lieut. Holmes ordered the oars out for another try at Guam. We pulled hard all afternoon, two men to each oar. It nearly killed us, in our weakened condition from the lack of sleep food and water. We did not seem to move through the sea at all, and from the way the boat pulled I could tell that we were still in a strong off-shore current. At 6 o'clock there was no sign of the island, and all were at the point of collapse. We had to give up hope again. A mouthful of water and a biscuit for each, and again we settled down for the night.

By this time the 32 of us adrift had gravitated into groups that maintained fixed places in the lifeboat. Sparks, Third Engineer Mackey, the sailor Ole, the big Russian Linns, Messman Metcalf and I held the bow, with its cockpit, and any outsider trying to get into our province was kicked out. First Mate Waywood, Lieut. Holmes, Chief Engineer Howell and Bos'n Sutse were in the stern, and nobody could steal a seat there. Midships the seat was held by five Filipinos. In the seat forward of them was George the Greek, with four or five men; in the seat to the rear were messmen and coal passers, mostly boys. There was endless fighting among the Filipinos, and George the Greek hit at the Googoos indiscriminately whenever trouble began. Mackey, the mate and the chief engineer would stop it by coming up with a piece of oar or a hatchet. There was not room in the boat for all the men to stretch out and sleep, and some of the fellows were obliged to snatch a wink sitting up. In good weather two men could sleep on bow and stern outside the high bulwarks that ran around the boat to protect it from the seas, not bad places except with high seas, when the water came over both fore and aft. Then the four men who slept up there had to come down and fight for places in the boat. We eased conditions finally by lashing oars across the top of the boat and covering them with the canvas sail. That gave hammock space for a number of the men.

I arose from the bed of oars and canvas at daylight, very tired and sore and hungry. Went forward and sat down in the cockpit beside Mackey, who was searching the horizon for land or ships. Nothing doing, and the monsoon and current were still taking us further from Guam. The morning sun is warm and the sea is in long swells and no spray. The lifeboat rides easily, and the sea anchor is in good condition. Everyone shows suffering from the cold night and hunger. Lieut. Holmes' uniform, once white, is now gray and coated with salt. All of us are covered with salt, from the sea water drying on our clothes. The flakes of salt fall to the floor as we stand up. Lieut. Holmes thinks it possible to make Sipan Island, which lies near Guam, if we are able to tack by using the oars on one side of the boat. All were willing to make the try.

After water had been passed around in the tin cup, and we had had our biscuit each, we hoisted sail and tried to hold the boat into the wind with the oars on the sail side. It was no use. She would not tack. We took down the sail and put out all the oars. We made a little headway against the current, but after two hours had to stop and rest. It was hot, and the work made us very thirsty. "Sparks," Jennings, Mackey and I jumped overboard to cool ourselves. Olsen and Howell drank a little salt water. I swallowed a mouthful as I ducked myself. It is cool going down, but after it is down it makes you thirstier than ever, and you want to try it again. First Mate Waywood advised us to lay off the salt water, and suck a button off our clothes instead. Sailor Ferritter said that sucking a button keeps your mouth moist.

We threw out the sea anchor at noon, and voted to take half of our evening's supply of water right then. Chief Engineer Howell let us have half an inch in a cup. It was warm, but good. Spread sail across oars, and rested under it. First Mate Waywood removed the canvas from a life preserver and made a peaked hat for himself, using palm, needle and twine. Ole and I lay down on the outside space at the bow, with a sou'wester over us for shade. I fell asleep, but in a few minutes jumped up wide awake as the bos'n shouted that there was a lifeboat over our stern.

I saw something bobbing up and down about a mile off. We put out all oars, doubled up on them and headed for the supposed craft. It did seem like a lifeboat until we got quite close, and then it proved to be a large section of bolted planks. Other timbers floated around, and we saw that we had run onto the wreckage of the Dumaru. We saw another large object several miles off. It looked like a ship. We nearly jumped overboard with joy, thinking that some vessel had discovered the wreckage and was standing by. As we pulled eagerly toward it, it looked more and more like a ship. We ran into greater quantities of wreckage, mostly wooden cases that had covered gasoline cans. Presently we saw that the thing that had gladdened us was part of the hull of the Dumaru, riding high up and decks under water. It was the stern half, and we could plainly see the two propellers shining in the sun. We wondered what gave the hull its buoyancy. The chief engineer explained that there were six empty fresh-water tanks in the shaft alley near the stern.

We had a long discussion over whether we should tie onto the propellers and stay with the wreck. Some thought that if we did we should have a better chance of being picked up, for a passing ship could see the wreck from a distance of five miles. But in the end we decided that the many floating pieces of wreckage were too dangerous for us. The metal lifeboat, rising high on a swell, would be punctured if it came down on the end of a spar. We tried to find food or bottles of milk or canned goods floating, and for several hours

THE first installment of this remarkable narrative of shipwreck told of the voyage of the Shipping Board's wooden steamship Dumaru, in 1918, from San Francisco to Guam with a cargo of ammunition and TNT consigned to the Philippines, explosion of the cargo by lightning shortly after leaving Guam, and escape of 32 members of the crew in a lifeboat. Aboard was a young navy officer, Lieut. E. V. Holmes, 24, to whom First Mate Waywood turned over command. Theron Bean, an 18-year-old youth called "Sparks," because he was the ship's wireless operator, and F. J. Harmon, first assistant engineer, made up their diaries after reaching land. From these logs the story is made up. The first installment showed how the castaways tried desperately to get back to Guam, but found the wind blowing off the island and were unable to tack.

Kane has a place under the sail, where the men off watch rest in the shade. "Sparks" is a wonder. He is only a boy, but he is doing a man's work. Mackey is the most energetic of all. He never tires, and is the enemy of all who lie down on the job. He curses them constantly. Shaw will not do his bit, and he gets it every minute from Mackey. When he was on watch this afternoon Mackey told the negro he was as yellow as his hide, but that that was all you could expect from a nigger. Shaw's answer was always: "I never was a slave to no white man, or my ancestors. I was born in Argentina and I am as white as any man on the boat. I refuse to work because it is useless. We won't be saved and we are all going to die." Through the day he continued to repeat that he was no white man's slave, and all the kicks of the crew and dousings of water could not make him take a turn at the oars.

Still keeping two-hour watches at the oars, trying to hold our position against wind and current. Day broke fair, with high wind off Guam and sea in long swells. At 8 o'clock Lieut. Holmes and Chief Engineer Howell gave out water and sea biscuits. Washed out the boat by working two pumps and letting water flow out through bailing holes. Took baths in water from pumps. Shaw and two Filipinos were forced under pumps and washed off. Bolin and Kane, both sick, were also washed off.

The sun beat down on us all day, and as we rowed we suffered greatly from thirst. Hunger has left us all, and nothing is desired or spoken of save water. The chief engineer and Second Engineer Olsen drank salt water during the day. "Sparks," Mackey and I drank a little toward evening, after the sun had gone down. The lack of food and water can be seen in the gauntness of the crew. Shaw still refuses to work. He lies on his back, with his face to the sun, and groans all day and night.

A school of dolphins circled the boat at 7:30 p. m. and stayed around us all night, as the rowing continued. No sign of sharks. Saw several schools of flying fish during the day. The wind increased at nightfall. We put a lantern on the mast to attract flying fish, or steamers, if any should pass through the night.

Oct. 22. Seventh day in the lifeboat. Harmon's log.

We are now just a week in the lifeboat, and how many miles off Guam I do not know. We have ceased to row, and are drifting, bow to the seas, sea anchor out. Lieut. Holmes said there was over five miles of water under us, that we are in the vicinity of the deepest soundings ever made. Five miles of water, and only six gallons left to drink! Mackey, Howell, Waywood, Lieut. Holmes and I decided that we would have to cut the water supply down. We are suffering horribly from the lack of water now, about four ounces twice a day. The chow is going fast, too.

The crowd is worried and angry. George the Greek, who is very hard boiled even for a fireman, hit Francisco Benedicto, the little Filipino coal passer, twice today and knocked him down for bumping against his ulcer. We are all getting tropical ulcers. The fighting at the center of the boat is constant.

Second Engineer Olsen and Chief Engineer Howell have been sitting aft and arguing all day with First Mate Waywood and Lieut. Holmes. Olsen said the mate was a fool for turning command of the boat over to Lieut. Holmes. He said that Holmes was not a Lieutenant, but an Ensign, and that no Ensign could navigate a ship or handle a boat. The mate replied that nobody from the black gang could tell him his business, and if Olsen, a second assistant engineer, who had never been off West Coast steam schooners before, had wanted to make a kick why in hell didn't he do it the night the Dumaru blew up, when the boat was turned over to Lieut. Holmes. We discussed our position. Lieut. Holmes said that we were near Sipan Island, that all our rowing and tacking had carried us that way. Olsen replied: "You know damn well that you can't shove a Lydin lifeboat against the wind. Hasn't this round-nosed can been going sideways for the past week?" Today I asked young "Sparks" whether he was sure he got the S O S off before we left the Dumaru, and he answered that he was positive of it.

I remarked: "It is very strange, when we were only 23 miles off Guam, where one of the largest radio sets in the world is located, that we have not been picked up by one of the naval patrols."

All day we talked of our position, the wind, the current, the Philippines and our chance of making those islands. Then we talked of the chow and the water, and the more we talked the dryer our tongues became, and again the men started to hit the sea water. When warned of the danger they would change their minds, and after holding the water in their mouths, would spit it out. This became a habit, and it seemed that if you started it it was hard to break off.

Around 4 o'clock we decided, after much talk, that we would take water only in the morning, and that it would be the usual amount, one inch in the bottom of the chocolate can. The sea biscuit, we decided, would be given in the evening. After that had been settled we again talked of the Philippine Island and our chances of making them. They were a long way off, but we would head toward them if we put up sail.

Mate Waywood, Chief Engineer Howell, "Sparks" and I were for it, and some of the sailors. Our strong point was that we might run across the transports Thomas or Logan, that we knew were on the Manila-Guam run. Holmes and many of the rest said that we should die of thirst and starvation before we had got half way. Some of the men thought we might make it if the wind kept its present course, which was southwest and toward the islands. After several hours of debating, the officers agreed with First Mate Waywood that we were in the monsoon winds, which blow for weeks without changing.

Mackey said: "To end all kicking, if we do start, let's have a vote. Hang on, or head for the Philippines. Majority rules." Arms were raised on the question of going. Twenty-three were counted. That was a majority out of 32 men.

Ole Heikland and I heaved in the sea anchor and the Russian Linns and Chips hooked in the sail. The wind filled the canvas and we started on our 1400-odd miles' voyage to the Philippines. And this after we had spent day after day at the oars to keep ourselves from drifting in the direction in which we now headed!

Many "Criminals" Only Sick, Says Expert

Dr. M. G. Schlapp, chairman of the Medical Board of Children's Courts, New York, declares a disturbance in chemical balance of the body underlies large proportion of transgressions — The ductless glands, which pour necessary secretions into the blood, may not be doing their duty properly — Doctor says that half of the prisoners now in jails should be in hospitals, and urges amending laws and court procedure— Something about "emotional instability"

:: ::

"THE mixture of good and evil is a marvel and a curse," said Robert Browning, poet and delver into the human heart. Certain modern neuropathologists, while agreeing with the poet, make a prosaic addition to his statement. They believe that crimes often arise, not from original or acquired sin, but from a physical cause. Briefly, from a disturbance of the chemical balance of the body.

It is an intricate subject, involving those mysterious organs called the endocrine or ductless glands, whose secretions have a vital influence upon the health of their owner. And upon his conduct, too, say these investigators.

The secretions of the glands are poured into the blood for very definite purposes. If one of the glands performs its duty improperly, by secreting too much or too little of the compound which it must supply for the body's well-being, the damage is certain and sometimes terrible.

There is the thyroid gland, for example, indispensably connected with the human being's growth, so that a defective gland causes deficiencies, both mental and physical. And the pineal gland, whose work is believed to be inhibitory in nature, concerned with regulating development, so that failure in its functions brings on precocity.

All of which is far removed from the familiar plea of insanity which many a murderer has played as his last card, in an effort to escape punishment. Indeed, the neurologist of the future, with laboratory data and conclusions firmly based on chemical revelations, will make the plea of insanity harder and harder for impostors. On the other hand, declare these investigators, science will save many a defendant from prison and put him in a hospital where he can be cured and come out a useful citizen.

If what these neuropathologists say is true, then the present administration of justice is already convicted of incompetence, stupidity and cruelty. Just because a usage of the courts has endured for many years, or for generations, is no reason why it should not be changed if present-day research shows the need, say the experts. And they declare further that judges, juries and prosecutors are unfair in their treatment of some types of offenders. The laws, enacted long before the present development of medical knowledge, must be brought up to date.

The position raises some interesting questions. Are defendants of the pathological or diseased type to be tried in the laboratory rather than in the courtroom? Is the chemist, along with the psychiatrist, to supplant the juror? Must the application of the criminal law be revised, in the light of the latest scientific knowledge?

A firm believer in the chemical basis of human conduct is Dr. M. G. Schlapp, chairman of the Medical Board of Children's Courts of the City of New York. Dr. Schlapp also is professor of neuropathology at Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, New York. He delivered an address recently in St. Louis, at the annual session of the American Association for the Study of the Feeble-Minded.

"Of the criminals now in our jails and penitentiaries, 50 per cent should be in hospitals," declares Dr. Schlapp, "even though they committed the acts for which the law sent them to prison. A great many of the cases of 'emotional instability' could be cured. If the facilities had been available, many of them could have been cured of the conditions underlying their 'emotional instability' before they committed the crimes. Other types, incurable, do not deserve to be in jail.

"The pathological cases include some who are intellectually defective, some who in addition have an emotional instability, and others where there is only emotional instability. The latter class is the one where the most improvement is possible."

Dr. Schlapp is not a sentimentalist over wrongdoers who are in prison and deserve to be there.

"If a convict needs a thrashing he ought to get it," remarked the doctor. "The concept should be formed in his mind, and in those of the would-be or near-criminals, that if they do something wrong they will get what is coming to them.

JUSTITIA.

"And I heartily disagree with those idealists who have a theory that all wrongdoing is the result of either disease or ignorance, and that the remedy for crimes already committed should be education or medical treatment. We may come to that some time, but it is not warranted by our present knowledge. We can say, however, that some persons are sent to jail unjustly, when their physical and mental deficiencies are taken into consideration."

In this connection, Dr. Schlapp has an interesting suggestion. He believes there should be a new kind of institution, midway between the insane asylum or the home for feeble-minded, on the one hand, and the prison, on the other hand. The new institution would be for what he calls "pathological delinquent types," and he reiterated again and again that many of these cases can be cured under the care of experts, although adults intellectually deficient usually are incurable.

"Such an institution would be a hospital, but it would have to be disciplinary, also," he remarked. "In the cases due to a chemical imbalance, the principal aim would be to reduce their 'emotional instability' so that intellect and reason would govern them in the future, as it does normal people.

"But at the same time, we must create an inhibitory concept in the mind, a deeply-lodged belief that good conduct is preferable, always. The delinquent type must be handled firmly, or he goes from bad to worse."

Dr. Schlapp also believes there should be in every large city a central detention station for criminals or suspects who may be pathological cases. Observation and laboratory tests there would help to decide whether they were entitled to medical attention or to the lot of the ordinary wrong-doer.

The larger institutions, for protracted care of pathological delinquents, should be quite separate from homes for the feeble-minded, where some states now send them, he declared. Putting such cases among the feeble-minded is "sure to cause terrible discriances and much wrong-doing."

He has no hope that the proposed treatment of pathological delinquents will start in large, expensive institutions, newly erected for that purpose. The beginning will have to be in some of the existing state institutions, he says, where laboratories should be installed with competent men at the head of them.

"The men in charge of this work must be well equipped for it, no mere figureheads or dilettantes," he said. "These laboratories could do especially valuable work in extending our knowledge of the various forms of intellectual and emotional disturbance, and their cause. In a certain type of offender, just what is the chemical imbalance? Which group of glands is affected, and making the trouble? Has the patient been receiving a toxin from outside, or is it the poison from a focal infection, such as abscessed teeth? In other words, just where is the seat of his trouble and how can it be remedied?

"Take the case of the feeble-minded children in our institutions. The care given them, and very generously in many states, is of a custodial nature only. They are fed and clothed and given a little schooling, and that is all. Yet many of these children could have been cured, if their condition had been recognized at the earliest possible period, and they had received proper medical treatment.

"But it is well known that children do not arrive at institutions until it is too late for much to be done for them. Today a majority of these cases cannot be cured because of our failure to develop proper methods. This laboratory work will enable us to find the causes and the methods.

"The thyroid types, if taken in hand in the very earliest period of the trouble, usually can be made normal. I'd like to show you some school children in New York City, bright and happy youngsters whom you would not recognize as cretins on a course of thyroid treatment. Aren't they much better off, and the community, too, than they would be if stolidly going through their little routine in an institution, and getting no better, because recognized too late?

"The chemical tests, which of course are controlled by the patient, enable us to put our finger on the pathological condition and correct it.

"The fact is, that emotional instability is on the increase throughout this country and other countries, too. In the last 50 years the increase has been alarming. I believe it is largely due to our industrialism, our struggle for success, our continual competition.

"All this has a very bad effect. In many people the effect is to create an emotional instability, usually based on a disturbance of their endocrine organs and hence the chemical balance of their bodies. Then come mental deficiency and insanity. And it is a well-known fact that our birth rate is waning.

"With what we positively know about some of the offenders, or can find out in the biochemical and pathological laboratories, we are not treating these defendants with real justice in the courts. It is human nature to resent crime, and wish to punish the criminal. We are just beginning in this vast subject, but already we can see that there is something deeper under the acts of an individual than the desire of the individual to do what he did. He must not be judged entirely by his act.

"Judges and juries, and prosecutors, too, should ask themselves a few questions. Has the accused been carefully examined? Is he of the pathological type? Should he be sent to jail or to a hospital-like institution, where bodily health may be restored?

"Defective types can be cured, if functional. Many of the endocrine disturbances are incidental, out toxins received from the outside and focal infections. If continued long enough may cause functional disturbances in some of these all-important glands or involve the nervous system directly. If the formative process of the cells are interfered with long enough, then the sufferer may have a deformed brain and such a case is hopeless. We cannot rebuild a brain. The functional troubles, however, offer many chances for recovery or improvement.

"Admitting and urging that even the pathological types must be made striking and flagrant examples of what will happen to the evil-doer, I still believe that our whole penal system is absolutely wrong.

"It will only be righted when accused persons are subjected to laboratory tests, including the blood and various metabolism tests, to ascertain if they are intellectually and emotionally normal, or intellectually or emotionally defective to such a degree that they are not able to adjust themselves normally to their environment because of this deficiency.

"Science knows, although the law does not, that there is a wide gulf between the two kinds of offenders."

Where "the Mountains Walked"

Details of stupendous earthquake in remote China eighteen months ago just reaching Western world — Shock caused landslides that buried cities and villages, 200,000 people perishing — Sections of highways cut out and carried a mile — Moslems planning holy war buried alive in cave :: ::

YOU live half a mile from town. Leading thither is a substantial highway lined with poplars and cottonwoods of half a century's growth. Every landmark is your familiar friend. As you make ready for bed you glance down the road. The poplars are gleaming ardently in the moonlight. A feeling of serenity, of security, serves to lull you to slumber. 'Tis an orderly world, a world of agreeable routine, a world to be depended upon.

At dawn you awaken and glance from your window down the road—the road? What—are you but half-awake, and dreaming? Is it a nightmare that enchains you? Has reason flown its throne and left you a lunatic?

The road has disappeared! It simply is not there! Just beyond your premises you see the jagged edge where the highway has been broken off. Two or three of the trees, uprooted, hang drunkenly over a sheer precipice. You rush outside and peer down, holding fearsomely to the unearthed root of one of the trees sticking above the surface at the chasm's edge. Sixty feet straight down you look, then 600 yards or more—a quarter of a mile—across to another sheer bluff that rises 60 feet or so to the level where the interrupted road begins again.

Down this new-cut canyon you send your bewildered gaze and find the quarter-mile of lost highway, poplars still standing and beginning to gleam in the sunshine, other landmarks apparently normal. You could walk or drive along that section of transplanted roadway, if you could reach it.

This is but an inadequate suggestion of one of the thousands of astounding things that happened in a remote part of China a year and a half ago, details of which reached the outside world only the other day. What scientists acclaim as the most stupendous cataclysm of modern times happened in December of 1920, and yet it has taken nearly 18 months for the amazing story to trickle through the agencies of communication and reach us here, where the world really is orderly, and of agreeable routine, and to be depended upon.

The thing that happened in China was an earthquake, primarily. Natives of the province of Kansu, where the catastrophe took place, say "the mountains walked." According to official estimate, the mountains walked over about 200,000 of the natives, burying them alive. Conservative statisticians who visited the earthquake area recently, under the auspices of the International Famine Relief Committee, cut that estimate somewhat.

Ten large cities and many villages in an area of destruction 100 by 300 miles in extent were swept away or buried under great landslides. Loose earth, a mixture of clay and powdered quartz—the loess formation—poured in vast volumes over precipices, like waterfalls, or rushed headlong down ravines, or slid away from the mountains and hills in horrible flight, leaving gigantic gashes in the slopes.

These tremendous avalanches inundated with loose earth the lower lands, where abode man and beast, and far above the new levels of loess soil arose a horrid spray of dust. For miles and miles, in certain valleys and upon certain plains, this sea of soil undulated here and there, through that terrible night, as the seismic forces underneath continued at intervals to rock and churn the mass. Men and women and children, and beasts, wild and domesticated, and houses and stables, stores and temples, camel trains, camps of caravans, all were overwhelmed in a twinkling, some to remain buried forever, others to be thrust up again as the soil-sea churned and chafed.

Yet, notwithstanding the loss of from 100,000 to 200,000 lives and a vast amount of property, the non-Moslem survivors of the cataclysm look upon the horror as a blessing. About three-fifths of the dead were Mohammedans, and the Chinese who oppose that faith declare that the earthquake was a visitation from heaven against the disciples of the Prophet. The surviving disciples, it is said, have not denied this accusation; they have become surprisingly humble.

"One of the most appalling catastrophes in history and, perhaps, the most poorly advertised calamity that has occurred in modern times," is the way the National Geographic Magazine describes the earthquake in an article entitled "Where the Mountains Walked."

"Though the tremendous shaking-up occurred in December, 1920, the story is only now beginning to spread beyond the narrow defiles which guard the entrance to Kansu Province," says the article.

"Mountains that moved in the night; landslides that eddied like waterfalls, crevasses that swallowed houses and camel trains, and villages that were swept away under a rising sea of loose earth, were a few of the subsidiary occurrences.

"Mr. Josef W. Hall (Upton Close), who visited the earthquake area under the auspices of the International Famine Relief Committee, has brought back one of the first accounts of the devastated country and the strange things that happen when the earth turns itself into a contortionist. The area of destruction, 100 by 300 miles in extent, contains 10 large cities, besides numerous villages.

"One of the most dramatic episodes of the disaster was the burial of Ma the Benevolent, a famous Moslem fanatic, and 300 of his followers, just as they had met in conclave to proclaim a holy war. The cave in which they had gathered was sealed by a terrific avalanche, while the group knelt on their prayer mats.

"By some miracle the watchman at the entrance to the cave escaped with his life, but the others were buried so deeply that, despite months of digging over an area of a mile, the Moslems have failed to recover the bodies of their leaders.

"In another district Mr. Hall and his party found that a whole mountain topped by a temple had slid into a valley. A little beyond they found that a road bordered by poplar trees had ridden the crest of a slide for three-quarters of a mile, without apparent damage to the trees or even to the birds' nests in their branches. One astonished peasant looked out of his window in the morning to find that a high hill had moved onto the homestead, stopping its line of march within a few feet of his hut.

"The most appalling sight of all was the Valley of the Dead, where seven great slides crashed into a gap in the hills three miles long, killing every living thing in the area except three men and two dogs.

"In a small town on the highway two strangers had put up at the inn on the evening of the disaster. In the terror and confusion that followed the earthquake the landlord completely forgot his two guests. It was not until several days later that he remembered them, and when, after considerable digging, their room was brought to light, both men were found alive. Stupefied by the shock, they knew nothing of what happened and imagined that they had slept through an ordinary night. The landlord, however, in spite of remonstrances, did not neglect to collect room rent for the full period of their stay.

"The subterranean dragon of Chinese cosmology, who, according to the Northwest China tradition, wags his tail every 300 years, this time played havoc, such as was never before recorded, with the face of the earth and the habitations of men. Likely no other earthquake in scientific annals ever changed the physical geography of the affected region to the extent of the Kansu cataclysm.

"The remoteness of the district in which the earthquake occurred cannot but intrigue interest. Although the concurrent quakes in Chile and Salvador, the tidal wave of Yap and the eruption of Mount Asama, Japan, are all history, the Kansu disaster is still news. What actually happened in this frontier province of China is only now, through the reports of the relief investigation expedition of which Mr. Hall was a member, being made known in any comprehensive way, even in China's capital and port cities.

"Had the quake disaster struck several hundred miles to the north, west or south, the loss of life would have been negligible. As it happened, it selected for destruction, in the agriculturally rich, terraced loess country of the southern half of the affected area, the most populous portion of the province; and to the north, although this part is principally uninhabited grazing land, several of the largest Mohammedan Chinese cities, which were leveled.

"Although the density of population is not more than one-tenth that of Shantung or the East China plain, the loss of life from landslides, collapsed cave homes and falling buildings, together with death from exposure of the unsheltered in midwinter in this high altitude, was, according to official figures, 200,000, and according to the estimate of foreign investigators more than half this number.

"Following the Sianfu-Lanchowfu-Turkestan highway, we ascended a small valley of steep grade directly west of Tsingning. Suddenly the high road for a length of a quarter of a mile dropped out of sight. It had been cut as if chopped off with an ax, leaving the 50-year-old poplars and cottonwoods with which it is lined partly uprooted, like sentinels stricken at their post, upon the edge of the 60-foot gully which occupied the position of the road.

"It was in this Valley of the Dead that the most arresting freak of the cataclysm occurred. Two sections of the ancient, well-packed highway, accompanied by the tall trees which bordered it, were cut from the line of road following the side hill, swept hundreds of yards over the stream bed, and set, intact, upon an angle on top of the heap of loose loess."

The Naked Man

by Richard Harding Davis

IN THEIR home town of Keepsburg, the Keeps were the reigning dynasty, socially and in every way. Old man Keep was president of the trolley line, the telephone company and the Keep National Bank. But Fred, his son and heir apparent, did not inherit the business ability of his father; or if he did, he took pains to conceal it. Fred had gone through Harvard, but as to that also, unless he told people, they would not have known it.

Ten minutes after Fred met a man he generally told him.

When Fred arranged an alliance with Winnie Platt, who also was of the innermost inner set of Keepsburg, everybody said Keepsburg would soon lose them. And everybody was right. When single, each had sighed for other social worlds to conquer, and when they combined their fortunes and ambitions they found Keepsburg impossible, and they left it to lay siege to New York. They were too crafty to at once attack New York itself. A widow lady they met while on their honeymoon at Palm Beach had told them not to attempt that. And as she was the Palm Beach correspondent of a society paper they naturally accepted her advice. She warned them that in New York the waiting list is already interminable, and that, if you hoped to break into New York society, the clever thing to do was to lay siege to it by way of the suburbs and the country clubs. If you went direct to New York knowing no one, you would at once expose that fact, and the result would be disastrous.

She told them of a couple like themselves, young and rich and from the West, who, at the first dance to which they were invited, asked, "Who is the old lady with the wig?" and that question argued them so unknown that it set them back two years. It was a terrible story, and it filled the Keeps with misgivings. They agreed with the lady correspondent that it was far better to advance leisurely; first firmly to intrench themselves in the suburbs, and then to enter New York, not as the Keeps from Keepsburg, which meant nothing, but as the Fred Keeps of Long Island, or Westchester, or Bordentown.

"In all of those places," explained the widow lady, "our smartest people have country homes, and at the country club you may get to know them. Then, when winter comes, you follow them on to the city."

The point from which the Keeps elected to launch their attack was Scarboro-on-the-Hudson. They selected Scarboro because both of them played golf, and they planned that their first skirmish should be fought and won upon the golf links of the Sleepy Hollow Country Club. But the attack did not succeed. Something went wrong. They began to fear that the lady correspondent had given them the wrong dope. For, although three months had passed, and they had played golf together until they were as loath to clasp a golf club as a red-hot poker, they knew no one, and no one knew them. That is, they did not know the Van Wardens; and if you lived at Scarboro and were not recognized by the Van Wardens, you were not to be found on any map.

Since the days of Hendrik Hudson the country seat of the Van Wardens had looked down upon the river that bears his name, and ever since those days the Van Wardens had looked down upon everybody else. The Van Warden estate had the appearance of a well-kept cemetery. And those Van Wardens who occupied the country place were as cold and unsociable as the sort of people who occupy cemeteries—except "Harry" Van Warden, and he lived in New York at the Turf Club.

Harry, according to all local tradition—for he frequently motored out to Warden Koopf, the Van Warden country seat—and according to the newspapers, was a devil of a fellow and in no sense cold or unsociable. So far as the Keeps read of him, he was always being arrested for speeding, or breaking his collarbone out hunting, or losing his front teeth at polo. This greatly annoyed the proud sisters at Warden Koopf; not because Harry was arrested or had broken his collar-bone, but because it dragged the family name into the newspapers.

"If you would only play polo or ride to hounds instead of playing golf," sighed Winnie Keep to her husband, "you would meet Harry Van Warden, and he'd introduce you to his sisters and then we could break in anywhere."

"If I was to ride to hounds," returned her husband, "the only thing I'd break would be my neck."

The country place of the Keeps was completely satisfactory, and for the purposes of their social comedy the stage setting was perfect. The house was one they had rented from a man of charming taste and inflated fortune; and with it they had taken over his well-disciplined butler, his pictures, furniture, family silver, and linen. It stood upon an eminence, was heavily wooded, and surrounded by many gardens; but its chief attraction was an artificial lake well stocked with trout that lay directly below the terrace of the house and also in full view from the road to Albany.

This latter fact caused Winnie Keep much concern. In the neighborhood were many Italian laborers, and on several nights the fish had tempted these born poachers to trespass; and more than once, on hot summer evenings, small boys from Tarrytown and Ossining had broken through the hedge and used the lake as a swimming pool.

"It makes me nervous," complained Winnie. "I don't like the idea of people prowling around so near the house. And think of those hundreds of convicts not one mile away, in Sing Sing. Most of them are burglars, and if they ever get out, our house is the very first one they'll break into."

"I haven't caught anybody in this neighborhood breaking into our house yet," said Fred, "and I'd be glad to see even a burglar!"

They were seated on the brick terrace that overlooked the lake. It was just before the dinner hour, and the dusk of a fine October night had fallen on the hedges, the clumps of evergreens, the rows of close-clipped box. A full moon was just showing itself above the tree tops, turning the lake into moving silver. Fred rose from his wicker chair, and, crossing to his young bride, touched her hair fearfully with the tips of his fingers.

"What if we don't know anybody, Win," he said, "and nobody knows us? It's been a perfectly good honeymoon, hasn't it? If you just look at it that way, it works out all right. We came here really for our honeymoon, to be together, to be alone."

"But where else could we have been any happier?" demanded the young husband loyally. "Where will you find any prettier place than this, just as it is at this minute, so still and sweet and silent? There's nothing the matter with that moon, is there? Nothing the matter with the lake? Where's there a better place for a honeymoon? It's a bower—a bower of peace, solitude, a bower of"——

As though mocking his words, there burst upon the sleeping countryside the shriek of a giant siren. It was raucous, virulent, insulting. It came as sharply as a scream of terror, it continued in a bellow of rage. Then, as suddenly as it had cried aloud, it sank to silence; only after a pause of an instant, as though giving a signal, to shriek again in two sharp blasts. And then again it broke into the hideous long-drawn scream of rage, insistent, breathless, commanding; filling the soul of him who heard it, even of the innocent, with alarm.

"In the name of heaven!" gasped Keep, "what's that?"

Down the terrace the butler was hastening toward them. When he stopped, he spoke as though he were announcing dinner. "A convict, sir," he said, "has escaped from Sing Sing. I thought you might not understand the whistle. I thought perhaps you would wish Mrs. Keep to come indoors."

"Why?" asked Winnie Keep.

"The house is near the road, madam," said the butler. "And there are so many trees and bushes. Last summer two of them hid here, and the keepers—there was a fight."

The man glanced at Keep. Fred touched his wife on the arm.

"It's time to dress for dinner, Win," he said.

"And what are you going to do?" demanded Winnie.

"I'm going to finish this cigar first. It doesn't take me long to change." He turned to the butler. "And I'll have a cocktail, too. I'll have it out here."

The servant left them, but in the French window that opened from the terrace to the library Mrs. Keep lingered irresolutely. "Fred," she begged, "you—you're not going to poke around in the bushes, are you?—just because you think I'm frightened?"

Her husband laughed at her. "I certainly am not!" he said. "And you're not frightened, either. Go in. I'll be with you in a minute."

But the girl hesitated. Still shattering the silence of the night the siren shrieked relentlessly; it seemed to be at their very door, to beat and buffet the window panes. The bride shivered and held her fingers to her ears.

"Why don't they stop it?" she whispered. "Why don't they give him a chance?"

When she had gone, Fred pulled one of the wicker chairs to the edge of the terrace, and, leaning forward with his chin in his hands, sat staring down at the lake. The moon had cleared the tops of the trees, had blotted the lawns with black, rigid squares, had disguised the hedges with wavering shadows. Somewhere near at hand a criminal—a murderer, burglar, thug—was at large, and the voice of the prison he had tricked still bellowed in rage, in amazement; still clamored not only for his person but perhaps for his life. The whole country-side heard it; the farmers bedding down their cattle for the night; the guests of the Briar Cliff Inn, dining under the red candle shades; the joy riders from the city, racing their cars along the Albany road. It woke the echoes in Sleepy Hollow. It crossed the Hudson. The granite walls of the Palisades flung it back against the granite walls of the prison. Whichever way the convict turned, it hunted him, reaching for him, pointing him out—stirring in the heart of each who heard it the lust of the hunter, which never is so cruel as when the thing hunted is a man.

"Find him!" shrieked the siren. "Find him! He's there, behind your hedge! He's kneeling by the stone wall. That's he running in the moonlight. That's he crawling through the dead leaves! Stop him! Drag him down! He's mine! Mine!"

But from within the prison, from within the gray walls that made the home of the siren, each of 1200 men cursed it with his soul. Each, clinging to the bars of his cell, each, trembling with a fearful joy, each, his thumbs up, urging on with all the strength of his will the hunted, rat-like figure that stumbled panting through the crisp October night, bewildered by strange lights, beset by shadows, staggering and falling, running like a mad dog in circles, knowing that wherever his feet led him the siren still held him by the heels.

As a rule when Winnie Keep was dressing for dinner, Fred, in the room adjoining, could hear her unconsciously and light-heartedly singing to herself. It was a habit of her that he loved. But on this night, although her room was directly above where he sat upon the terrace, he heard no singing. He had been on the terrace for a quarter of an hour. Gridley, the aged butler who was rented with the house, and who for 20 years had been an inmate of it, had brought the cocktail and taken away the empty glass. And Keep had been alone with his thoughts. They were entirely of the convict. If the man suddenly confronted him and begged his aid, what would he do? He knew quite well what he would do. He considered even the means by which he would assist the fugitive to a successful getaway.

The ethics of the question did not concern Fred. He did not weigh his duty to the State of New York or to society. One day, when he had visited "the institution," as a somewhat sensitive neighborhood prefers to speak of it, he was told that the chance of a prisoner's escaping from Sing Sing and not being at once retaken was one out of 6000. So with Fred it was largely a sporting proposition. Any man who could beat a six-thousand-to-one shot commanded his admiration.

And, having settled his own course of action, he tried to imagine himself in the place of the man who at that very moment was endeavoring to escape. Were he that man, he would first, he decided, rid himself of his telltale clothing. But that would leave him naked, and in Westchester County a naked man would be quite as conspicuous as one in the purple-gray cloth of the prison. How could he obtain clothes? He might hold up a passerby, and, if the passerby did not flee from him or punch him into insensibility, he might effect an exchange of garments; he might by threats obtain them from some farmer; he might despoil a scarecrow.

But with none of these plans was Fred entirely satisfied. The question deeply perplexed him. How best could a naked man clothe himself? And as he sat pondering that point, from the bushes a naked man emerged. He was not entirely undraped. For around his nakedness he had drawn a canvas awning. Fred recognized it as having been torn from one of the rowboats in the lake. But, except for that, the man was naked to his heels. He was a young man of Fred's own age. His hair was cut close, his face smooth-shaven, and above his eye was a half-healed bruise. He had the sharp, clever, rat-like face of one who lived by evil knowledge. Water dripped from him, and either for that reason or from fright the young man trembled, and, like one who had been running, breathed in short, hard gasps.

Fred was surprised to find that he was not in the least surprised. It was as though he had been waiting for the man, as though it had been an appointment.

Two thoughts alone concerned him; that before he could rid himself of his visitor his wife might return and take alarm, and that the man, not knowing his friendly intentions, and in a state to commit murder, might rush him. Put the stranger made no hostile move, and for a moment in the moonlight the two young men eyed each other warily.

Then, taking breath and with a violent effort to stop the chattering of his teeth, the stranger launched into his story.

"I took a bath in your pond," he blurted forth, "and —and they stole my clothes! That's why I am like this!"

Fred was consumed with envy. In comparison with this ingenious narrative how prosaic and commonplace became his own plans to rid himself of accusing garments and explain his nakedness. He regarded the stranger with admiration. But even though he applauded the other's invention, he could not let him suppose that he was deceived by it.

"Isn't it rather a cold night to take a bath?"

As though in hearty agreement, the naked man burst into a violent fit of shivering.

"It wasn't a bath," he gasped. "It was a bet!"

"A what!" exclaimed Fred. His admiration was increasing. "A bet? Then you are not alone?"

"I am now—damn them!" exclaimed the naked one. He began again reluctantly. "We saw you from the road, you and a woman, sitting there in the light from that room. They bet me I didn't dare strip and swim across your pond with you sitting so near. I can see now it was framed up on me from the start. For when I was swimming back I saw them run to where I'd left my clothes, and then I heard them start, and when I got to the hedge the car was gone!"

Keep smiled encouragingly. "The car!" he assented. "So you've been riding around in the moonlight?"

The other nodded, and was about to speak when there burst in upon them the roaring scream of the siren. The note now was of deeper rage, and came in greater volume. Between his clenched teeth the naked one cursed fiercely, and then, as though to avoid further questions, burst into a fit of coughing. Trembling and shaking, he drew the canvas cloak closer to him. But at no time did his anxious, prying eyes leave the eyes of Keep.

"You—you couldn't lend me a suit of clothes, could you?" he stuttered. "Just for tonight? I'll send them back. It's all right," he added reassuringly, "I live near here."

With a start Keep raised his eyes, and distressed by his look, the young man continued less confidently.

"I don't blame you if you don't believe it," he stammered, "seeing me like this; but I do live right near here. Everybody around here knows me, and I guess you've read about me in the papers, too. I'm—that is, my name"—— like one about to take a plunge he drew a short breath, and the rat-like eyes regarded Keep watchfully—"my name is Van Warden. I'm the one you read about—Harry—I'm Harry Van Warden!"

After a pause, slowly and reprovingly, Fred shook his head; but his smile was kindly, even regretful, as though he were sorry he could not longer enjoy the stranger's confidences.

"My boy!" he exclaimed, "you're more than Van Warden! You're a genius!" He rose and made a peremptory gesture. "Sorry," he said, "but this isn't safe for either of us. Follow me, and I'll dress you up and send you where you want to go." He turned and whispered over his shoulder: "Some day let me hear from you. A man with your nerve"——

In alarm the naked one with a gesture commanded silence.

The library led to the front hall. In this was the coat room. First making sure the library and hall were free of servants, Fred tiptoed to the coatroom and, opening the door, switched on the electric light. The naked man, leaving in his wake a trail of damp footprints, followed at his heels.

Fred pointed at golf capes, sweaters, greatcoats hanging from hooks, and on the floor at boots and overshoes.

"Put on that motor coat and the galoshes," he commanded. "They'll cover you in case you have to run for it. I'm going to leave you here while I get you some clothes. If any of the servants butt in, don't lose your head. Just say you're waiting to see me—Mr. Keep. I won't be long. Wait."

"Wait!" snorted the stranger. "You bet I'll wait!"

As Fred closed the door upon him, the naked one was rubbing himself violently with Mrs. Keep's yellow golf jacket.

In his own room Fred collected a suit of blue serge, a tennis shirt, boots, even a tie. Underclothes he found ready laid out for him, and he snatched them from the bed. From a roll of money in his bureau drawer he counted out a hundred dollars. Tactfully he slipped the money in the trousers pocket of the serge suit, and with the bundle of clothes in his arms raced downstairs and shoved them into the coat room.

"Don't come out until I knock," he commanded. "And," he added in a vehement whisper, "don't come out at all unless you have clothes on!"

The stranger grunted.

Fred rang for Gridley and told him to have his car brought around to the door. He wanted to start at once—within two minutes. When the butler had departed, Fred, inch by inch, opened the coat-room door. The stranger had draped himself in the underclothes and the shirt, and at the moment was carefully arranging the tie.

"Hurry!" commanded Keep. "The car'll be here in a minute. Where shall I tell him to take you?"

The stranger chuckled excitedly; his confidence seemed to be returning. "New York," he whispered, "fast as he can get there! Look here," he added doubtfully, "there's a roll of bills in these clothes."

The stranger exclaimed vigorously. "You're all right!" he whispered. "I won't forget this, or you either. I'll send the money back same time I send the clothes."

"Exactly!" said Fred.

The wheels of the touring car crunched on the gravel drive, and Fred slammed to the door, and like a sentry on guard paced before it. After a period which seemed to stretch over many minutes there came from the inside a cautious knocking. With equal caution Fred opened the door the width of a finger, and put his ear to the crack.

"You couldn't find me a button-hook could you?" whispered the stranger.

Indignantly Fred shut the door and, walking to the veranda, hailed the chauffeur. James, the chauffeur, was a Keepsburg boy, and when Keep had gone to Cambridge James had accompanied him. Keep knew the boy could be trusted.

"You're to take a man to New York," he said, "or wherever he wants to go. Don't talk to him. Don't ask any questions. So, if you're questioned, you can say you know nothing. That's for your own good!"

The chauffeur mechanically touched his cap and started down the steps. As he did so, the prison whistle, still unsatisfied, still demanding its prey, shattered the silence. As though it had hit him a physical blow, the youth jumped. He turned and lifted startled, inquiring eyes to where Keep stood above him.

"I told you," said Keep, "to ask no questions."

As Fred re-entered the hall, Winnie Keep was coming down the stairs toward him. She had changed to one of the prettiest evening gowns of her trousseau, and so outrageously lovely was the combination of herself and the gown that her husband's excitement and anxiety fell from him, and he was lost in admiration. But he was not for long lost. To his horror, the door of the coat closet opened toward his wife and out of the closet the stranger emerged. Winnie, not accustomed to seeing young men suddenly appear from among the dust coats, uttered a sharp shriek.

With what he considered great presence of mind, Fred swung upon the visitor.

"Did you fix it?" he demanded.

The visitor did not heed him. In amazement, in abject admiration, his eyes were fastened upon the beautiful and radiant vision presented by Winnie Keep. But he also still preserved sufficient presence of mind to nod his head dully.

"Come," commanded Fred. "The car is waiting."

Still the stranger did not move. As though he had never before seen a woman, as though her dazzling loveliness held him in a trance, he stood still, gazing, gaping, devouring Winnie with his eyes. In her turn, Winnie beheld a strange youth who looked like a groom out of livery, so overcome by her mere presence as to be struck motionless and inarticulate. For protection she moved in some alarm toward her husband.

The stranger gave a sudden jerk of his body that might have been intended for a bow. Before Keep could interrupt him, like a parrot reciting its lesson, he exclaimed explosively:

"My name's Van Warden. I'm Harry Van Warden."

He seemed little convinced of the truth of his own statement. It was as though a stage manager had drilled him in the lines.

But upon Winnie, as her husband saw to his dismay, the words produced an instant and appalling effect. She fairly radiated excitement and delight. How her husband had succeeded in capturing the social prize of Scarboro she could not imagine, but, for doing so, she flashed toward him a glance of deep and grateful devotion.

Then she beamed upon the stranger. "Won't Mr. Van Warden stay to dinner?" she asked.

Her husband emitted a howl. "He will not!" he cried. "He's not that kind of a Van Warden. He's a plumber. He's the man that fixes the telephone!"

He seized the visitor by the sleeve of the long motor coat and dragged him down the steps. Reluctantly, almost resistingly, the visitor stumbled after him, casting backward amazed glances at the beautiful lady. Fred thrust him into the seat beside the chauffeur. Pointing at the golf cap and automobile goggles which the stranger was stupidly twisting in his hands, Fred whispered fiercely:

"Put those on! Cover your face! Don't speak! The man knows what to do."

With eager eyes and parted lips James the chauffeur was waiting for the signal. Fred nodded sharply, and the chauffeur stooped to throw in the clutch. But the car did not start. From the hedge beside the driveway, directly in front of the wheels, something on all fours threw itself upon the gravel; something in a suit of purple-gray; something torn and bleeding, smeared with sweat and dirt; something that cringed and crawled, that tried to rise and sank back upon its knees, lifting to the glare of the headlights the white face and white hair of a very old, old man. The kneeling figure sobbed; the sobs rising from far down in the pit of the stomach, wrenching the body like waves of nausea. The man stretched his arm toward them.

Medal Found on Skeleton Mystifies Experts

A MEDAL, found on a skeleton which was dug up in Kansas and now the property of Edward C. Hill of 5580A Etzel avenue, St. Louis, has been viewed with interest and closely examined by antiquarians and coin collectors, none of whom up to this time has been able to determine its origin or its value.

The medal is 1 7-8 inches in diameter. Apparently it is silver gilt. It bears the date 1613. On one side is a Christ head in relief, encircled by the inscription: "Ego sum via, veritas et vita," which translated from the Latin means: "I am the way, the truth and the life."

On the other side is a relief showing the interior of the stable of Bethlehem with the Infant in the crib. Mary kneels as though in adoration of the child. Behind her stands Joseph. Opposite them kneels a third figure, apparently in medieval costume, though the garb may be that of a shepherd of a time contemporaneous with the Nativity.

Circling this group are the date and the inscription: "Natus est vobis servator qui est Christus Dominus," or, translated: "Unto you is born a Savior, who is Christ, the Lord."

Hill obtained the medal from a farmer who dug up a skeleton on his farm at Edwardsville, Kan., eight years ago. With the skeleton also were some beads, believed to have been part of a rosary, but these have not been preserved.

How this medal, made more than 300 years ago in Europe, came to be buried with its owner in Eastern Kansas is a mystery that cannot be solved. There is no means of knowing how long ago the person who wore the medal was buried. It is thought probable that he was buried by friends, as enemies or savages in all likelihood would have stolen the medal. The burial may have been of comparatively recent date and the medal may have been an heirloom which had been handed down in some family for many generations.

Experts at the St. Louis Municipal Art Museum were unable to find an exact classification for the medal, though one of them pointed out that the work on both sides suggested that of Albert Durer, the great German artist, though it could not have been done by Durer, as he died in 1528. Durer's influence, however, was long-lived. After his death, and even during his lifetime, other artists followed his methods and style. Several artists who saw the medal found in the Nativity relief a striking similarity to several of Durer's paintings, one of the most famous of which was "The Virgin Adoring the Sleeping Infant."

At St. Louis University a search through works on religious medals failed to reveal any reference to this one, and professors there expressed the belief that the medal was not struck by papal or royal order to commemorate a great historical event, but that it rather was made for some individual. It was explained that about the time of the medal's date it was the custom of well-to-do families to have distinctive medals made. Some of these were very elaborate and persons of considerable wealth employed renowned artists to design and execute the work. It was said that medals of this type were most commonly attached to rosaries carried by their owners.

"I'm done," he sobbed. "I can't go no farther! I give myself up!"

Above the awful silence that held the four young people, the prison siren shrieked in one long, mocking howl of triumph.

It was the stranger who was the first to act. Pushing past Fred, and slipping from his own shoulders the long motor coat, he flung it over the suit of purple-gray. The goggles he clapped upon the old man's frightened eyes, the golf cap he pulled down over the white hair. With one arm he lifted the convict, and with the other dragged and pushed him into the seat beside the chauffeur. Into the hands of the chauffeur he thrust the roll of bills.

"Get him away!" he ordered. "It's only 12 miles to the Connecticut line. As soon as you're across, buy him clothes and a ticket to Poston. Go through White Plains to Greenwich—and then you're safe!"

As though suddenly remembering the presence of the owner of the car, he swung upon Fred. "Am I right?" he demanded.

"Of course!" roared Fred. He flung his arm at the chauffeur as though throwing him into space.

"Get to hell out of here!" he shouted.

The chauffeur, by profession a criminal, but by birth a human being, chuckled savagely and this time threw in the clutch. With a grinding of gravel the racing car leaped into the night, its ruby rear lamp winking in farewell, its tiny siren answering the great siren of the prison in jeering notes of joy and victory.

Fred had supposed that at the last moment the younger convict purposed to leap to the running board, but instead the stranger remained motionless.

Fred shouted impotently after the flying car. In dismay he seized the stranger by the arm.

"But you," he demanded, "how are you going to get away?"

The stranger turned appealingly to where upon the upper step stood Winnie Keep.

"I don't want to get away," he said. "I was hoping maybe you'd let me stay to dinner."

A terrible and icy chill crept down the spine of Fred Keep. He moved so that the light from the hall fell full upon the face of the stranger.

"Will you kindly tell me," Fred demanded, "who the devil you are?"

The stranger exclaimed peevishly. "I've been telling you all evening," he protested. "I'm Harry Van Warden!"

Gridley, the ancient butler, appeared in the open door.

"Dinner is served, madame," he said.

The stranger gave an exclamation of pleasure. "Hello, Gridley," he cried. "Will you please tell Mr. Keep who I am? Tell him, if he'll ask me to dinner, I won't steal the spoons."

Upon the face of Gridley appeared a smile it never had been the privilege of Fred Keep to behold. The butler beamed upon the stranger fondly, proudly, by the right of long acquaintanceship, with the affection of an old friend. Still beaming, he bowed to Keep.

"If Mr. Harry—Mr. Van Warden," he said, "is to stay to dinner, might I suggest, sir, he is very partial to the Paul Vibert, '84."

Fred Keep gazed stupidly from the butler to the stranger and then at his wife. She was again radiantly beautiful and smilingly happy.

Gridley coughed tentatively. "Shall I open a bottle, sir?" he asked.

Hopelessly, Fred tossed his arms heavenward.

"Open a case!" he roared.

At 10 o'clock, when they were still at table and reaching a state of such mutual appreciation that soon they would be calling each other by their first names, Gridley brought in a written message he had taken from the telephone. It was a long-distance call from Yonkers, sent by James, the faithful chauffeur.

Fred read it aloud.

"I got that party the articles he needed," it read, "and saw him safe on a train to Boston. On the way back I got arrested for speeding the car on the way down. Please send money. I am in a cell in Yonkers."

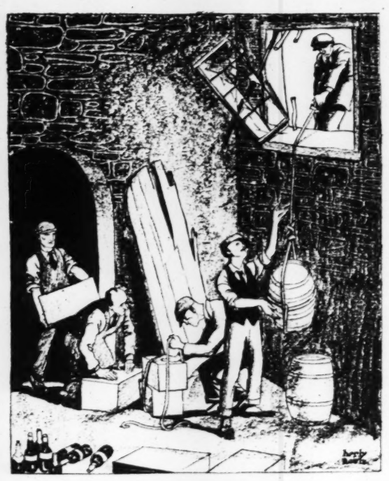
Devious Ways of Liquor Thieves

They spot the rich man's reserve from the time it is stocked—Have ways of circumventing electric alarms and other safety devices — Sometimes they sell it and then steal it back — Many thefts encompassed by bribing servants—Covered vans cart away the loot, for which there is always a ready market :: ::



ALMOST any day, when you take up your newspaper, you will find further adventures of the "Booze Burglars." The cellar of a conspicuous millionaire has been broken into and some thousands of dollars' worth of fine wines carted off. Mr. Somebody has returned from Europe to find his liquor vaults at his country home sadly the worse for intrusion. A warehouse has been entered in the night and many barrels of choice red liquor are somewhere, but not there.

The melancholy part about it all is that there seems to be no satisfactory defense. If a man has his wife's jewels insured he is reasonably protected. If the gems are stolen he can buy others as good with the proceeds of his policies. But if a man's vintages go no insurance will do him much good or greatly solace his palate. Fine wines cannot be replaced today, even if one is willing to go to the bootleggers, violate the law and pay the extortionate prices. Again, insurance on drinkables is high-priced, not easy to get and never issued in sufficient amount to cover the replacement value of stocks in hand.

Yet the companies which do issue insurance policies on liquors have their side of the story to tell. They have paid losses of $3,000,000 within the single year of 1921, they assert, and they estimate that this figure covers only one-half and probably only one-third of the actual stealage in wet goods.

The booze burglar and his industry furnish another illustration (for those who think of criminals as a class or kind apart) of the genesis of lawbreakers and the adaptability of crime. Before prohibition liquor stealing was a rare occurrence. The stuff that dreams are made of wasn't valuable enough to be worth carting away. When a man could go round the corner and buy good champagne for $30 a case and fine rye for $11, who cared about being a thief? But when doubtful sparkling wines bring from $100 to $150 a dozen and fair whiskies almost as much, that's a different matter. A whole new criminal population has been created by these exorbitant values, just as happened when silks went skyrocketing during the war.

Large cities and their outlying country places have been the special victims of one set of booze burglars. There has been some talk, because of the similarity in technique displayed by these fellows, of a master mind and a centralized traffic in stolen liquors, but there is no real foundation for this theory. Jewel robbers always operate in very much the same manner, but no one supposes that they are all working under one guiding intelligence. Yet there is a certain loose centralization to the booze burglar business. It was not created by them, but existed ready made, another of the children of prohibition. Bootlegged liquor is distributed today, more or less exclusively, through certain definite channels. The independent bootlegger has to go to these people and make an arrangement with them or he is soon out of business and probably in jail. Thus, stolen drinkables also pass through this central organization, at least in large part, but the "big fellows" don't direct the stealing. They simply ask no questions, take their part of the graft or profits and allow the stolen goods to be sold without much risk to the seller, who is either the thief or his agent.

Who the booze burglars are and how they operate is one of the most interesting features of the underworld story of prohibition. In part these people are old offenders. Some of them were house burglars and jewel robbers before prohibition was dreamed of. Others were previously honest and respectable people, who have been corrupted by opportunity and temptation.

To operate this game successfully the house breaker and jewel robber needed to do nothing new in their profession. This type of criminal has always operated through corrupted servants. Each gang has always had in its employ butler and women servants who were got into the houses of wealthy people by one subterfuge or the other. The crooked servants surveyed the house, found out where the valuables were hid and how they might be reached. This done, the actual burglar or jewel robber appeared on the scene and "did his stuff." Where there was no chance of introducing a member of the gang into the house, the burglars set about luring and corrupting one of the honest servants. It was often possible to find chauffeurs, butlers, valets and other men servants who would listen to reason. In other instances good-looking young crooks were employed to court the maids, win them over and then corrupt them.

Precisely the same thing is being done in the matter of the liquor burglaries. Many of them are inside jobs or jobs done with help from inside. In still other cases the servants have needed no outside stimulus to wrongdoing. They have seen the piled-up liquid wealth of their masters and been tempted to arrange for its theft. Several cases of this sort came to public notice in the last year and many others got no airing.

But the older criminals also often operate without the aid of venal servants. Attacks of this sort are generally made against unoccupied houses whose owners have been rash enough to leave stores of liquor in their places. In such cases it is merely a question of information gathering. The crooks must be sure that the house they are about to rob actually has a worthwhile stock of liquor in the cellars. Here again a servant may be used as scout and furnish the needed details, but there are many other ways of coming into possession of accurate knowledge.

The robbers may note the house of some convivial family and watch it, at the end of the season, to see whether the surplus stocks are hauled back to the city when the season in the country closes. The crooks have ways of watching the removal permits in the office of the Prohibition Director. They know that Mr. Richley has not been permitted to move his supply to the city from his suburban place and they take advantage of this fact. In other instances, the employes of burglary alarm companies have been corrupted. A man has an electric burglar alarm attached to his wine-cellar door. The mechanic who installs the device sees the heavy stocks of liquors and unconsciously calculates the value. A little later he is dismissed by his company or he needs money badly or he is approached and corrupted by the booze burglars. He turns in all the information he has, including the secret of the burglar alarm—and the rest can be guessed.

A rich man dealt with what he supposed to be a select gang of bootleggers. He had no liquor in his country place, was not permitted to move any out from his town house and lightly turned to law violation to stock in his cellar. He bought about $22,000 worth of whisky, wines and cordials from the bootleggers and had it transported to his country home, paying cash on delivery, according to the agreement. But the same night his bootleggers turned burglars, entered the house before any adequate locks or burglar alarms had been installed and stole back their cargo of drinks, carting it off in two large motor trucks. There was no complaint to the police, for the wealthy gentleman was himself guilty of law breaking and knew it. He hired private detectives, offered to pay a second $22,000 in case his drinks were returned, spent a good deal of money on various investigations and finally got no satisfaction beyond making sure that his own bootleggers had robbed him.

Many strange and uncomfortable contretemps have arisen out of this looting of private cellars. One man had invited a large and thirsty party of guests to dinner, but the night before his function his cellar was broken into and every bottle carted away.

Another man opened the Chateau Yquem with a great flourish at a dinner and poured out fine clear water. He called for another bottle, with similar results. Investigation showed that his butler had opened every bottle in the wine closet, disposed of the contents, refilled the bottles and skillfully recorked them.

In the cellar-robbing business nothing is used except motor trucks of the large, slow, heavy type and always covered. The huge, innocent-looking moving van is the favorite vehicle of the robbers. Capacity and not speed is the desired thing. The burglars find a house that is vulnerable, break in or are admitted by corrupted servants, carry the liquor out to the waiting truck, load it full and drive away to the chosen refuge, where the liquor is hidden until it can be sold.

It must be apparent to any reasoning person that this kind of work cannot be carried on without thorough and detailed preparation and probably not without some kind of influential co-operation. The booze burglars first locate the house they want to rob. They then arrange for their truck or trucks, according to the amount of liquor known to be accessible. They next arrange for some adjacent place of concealment. But such a liquor-laden truck must make its way over the roads to the first place of concealment and eventually to the point of distribution.

The Pinkerton Golf Coat Will Help Your Game

It has warmth without weight and, therefore, on a chill morning it will tone you up without bundling you up. It has wonderful elasticity and, therefore, it cannot bind your muscles in the slightest. It has an especially designed coat sleeve for golfers that leaves your arm absolutely free for your stroke.

Most golf players do not realize how much clothes have to do with their game. The slightest binding of your muscles will make you pull or slice your stroke unconsciously. And it only takes a variance of half an inch in a ten-foot swing to throw you a hundred yards out of your course on your drive.

An understanding of this is the reason why the Pinkerton has become such a favorite all over America.

Lingette

Everybody thinks it's silk

A Fairy Achievement in Modern Weaving

"TAKE," said the modern weaving fairy, "the shimmer of silk, the long-wear of cotton, and make a new fabric. Let us call it, 'Lingette.'

"Women will want it for lingerie, pajamas, negligees, their own dresses, their children's dresses; for bloomers, for gay overblouses,—a thousand purposes!

"Let's make it sky-blue, sea-shell pink, cool ivory, and pale orchid. And glowing rose, too, and deep purple! Then, every woman will enjoy the luxurious, caressing quality that she associates with silk, and will have, also, the practical laundering qualities and long wear that only cotton can give."

And, after the way of fairies, these seemingly difficult things have come true —as you can see by asking for Lingette —the wonder fabric.

Lingette is made in bright sports colors, street shades, and lovely pale tints—plain, self-striped, and printed with bird or flower motifs.

Ask for Lingette by name—look for "Lingette" on the selvage of the fabric; in the label of ready-to-wear garments. Only in this way can you be sure of getting Lingette's quality: Lingette's permanently silky finish; Lingette's long-time satisfaction both in wearing and washing.

FREE - A Booklet of the Smartest Lingerie Designs

showing, too, many another dainty use for Lingette, will be sent free upon receipt of your request. Write us if you cannot find Lingette at your local store.

Beautify the Eyes with Vanitine

"A drop in each eye completes the perfect toilet"

THE eyes of Youth - with their power and lustre. What a subtle, eloquent language they speak! Surely, no woman can afford lack-lustre eyes. In those "Important Moments", a radiant complexion may attract attention, but, it is the eyes that hold - or lose it.

So, a safe and simple way to clear and brighten the eyes, comes as a most welcome accessory. A preparation, heretofore much in use professionally and by prescription, is now for the first time obtainable at toilet goods counters, under the name of VANITINE.

WHAT VANITINE IS

VANITINE is a toilet article, purely and simply - and not a remedy. Containing no belladonna or opiates of any kind, it neither dilates the pupil, nor affects the eyesight in any way. VANITINE is a super-refined Borinated extract, prepared with modern day Laboratory exactness. And, it is as soothing, and harmless, as pure distilled boric water - one of its chief ingredients.

WHAT VANITINE DOES

VANITINE allays irritation and clears away inflammation - redness - by thoroughly cleansing the eyes. It washes and soothes the pupils, so that the whites become whiter, and the color deepened; with the lustrous sparkle so natural to good health - and youth.

WHERE TO OBTAIN VANITINE

At Toilet Goods Counters in the Department Stores and many Drug Stores. VANITINE is being expressed as rapidly as possible, but if your dealer has not received a supply, send direct to the Laboratory. A special department forwards mail orders the day received, postpaid, in plain wrapper. Send $1.00, currency, postage or check, for a four to six months' supply, complete with dropper (in bottle).

The Complexion that Charms

IT is not the cheek that glows with the red of the rose, nor the skin that has the wax-like pallor of the lily. The two must be mingled in a hue that is delicate, modest, natural. And therein lies the serene assurance of Bourjois' [pronounced Bourge-wah] Java* Face Powder. Designed to please the critical eyes of the women of France, it always has found favor with American women, because Java is, before all else, natural. Tens of thousands of American women whose faces never show a trace of powder, but whose complexions are universally admired, these are the women who are using Java.

ASHES OF ROSES* ROUGE

A charming woman told us recently, that not until she used Ashes of Roses Rouge with Java Face Powder, did she fully understand how much natural beauty she had. Perhaps there is a suggestion in that for you. Both these products are included in the twelve leading preparations found in the Bourjois Cabinet Assortment at progressive dealers. For the woman who prefers a lighter rouge, we suggest Rouge Mandarine.*

Ragged unsightly cuticle

You need never again have it

HANDS that are in themselves really beautiful are often ruined by an unsightly ragged cuticle. Yet everyone can have shapely nails and smooth, even cuticle. For manicuring is no longer the dangerous and difficult undertaking it used to be.

No more harmful cutting of the cuticle! For no matter how careful you are, you simply cannot cut the hard dry edges about the base of the nail without piercing through to the living skin. This dangerous method of caring for your nails soon gives you the ragged ugly cuticle that you especially want to avoid.

But of course the surplus cuticle has to be removed and this can be done easily, quickly and harmlessly with Cutex Cuticle Remover. With an orange stick dipped in the liquid you work gently about the base of the nails. Then rinse and when drying push the cuticle gently downwards. Your nail rims will remain smooth and even.

Your manicure will not be complete until you have used one of the brilliant polishes to add the finishing touch to your nails. Cutex has just produced two new marvelous ones in the most popular forms, powder and liquid.

The Powder Polish is practically instantaneous. A dazzling luster that lasts better than any you have ever had before. The Liquid Polish is uniformly smooth, dries instantly and leaves a brilliant luster that will last a week or more.

Cutex Manicure Sets come in four sizes, 60c, $1.00, $1.50 and $3.00. Or each of the Cutex items comes separately at 35c. At all drug and department stores in the United States and Canada.
